Hart huddled without Aurel Joliat and Tee Blake, who are injured, packed finish strength he had and found Goalie Bill Beveridge of Montreal almost impossible to beat. Armand Mondou got their only goal in the third period while Gus Marker, with two, Marvin Wentworth and Stew Evans were Maroon scorers.

The Boston win over Detroit was the first in seven starts for the Garden against Red Wings. Like the Maroons the Olympics, Detroit, the Boston victory kept Detroit from making sure of first place. Wings always threatened but that little luck even when Boston were shorthanded thwarted all qualities to Wings' ons.

Clapper Scores Two

Dit Clapper got two goals and Jack Portland one in the second period which Eddie Goodfellow drove in the only wing counter. Then Charlie Sands, Wood Gardiner and Hooley Smith picked up counters in a wild third period Boston offensive.

There was only one hero in the high-scoring New York game. Left winger Cecil Dillon scored two goals for Rangers to assist on four other counters.

Eddie Wiseman and Nels Stewart gave Amerks an early lead but before the first period ended Frank Boucher and Bill Cook had evened it. Rangers went ahead in the second on goals by Dillon and Alex Shibicky and it was Amerks' turn to even the battle, Jessop Thomas and Tony Hemmerling scoring.

Wiseman got another goal near the end of the third and Dillon flashed through for the lying one in the last minute of regular time. Keeling put the winner through the second minute of overtime and Phil Watson added another.

N.H.L. STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Cecil Dillon Rangers, whose two goals and three assists sparked Rangers to 7-5 overtime win over Americans.

Dit Clapper, Boston, who scored two goals as Bruins defeated Detroit 6-1.

Clus Marker, Maroons, whose two goals provided Maroons with margin enough to defeat Canadiens 4-1.

Bill Beveridge, Maroons, who turned in an outstanding goaltending performance in holding back the Frenchmen.

Body of Morenz To Lie in State At the Forum

Montreal, March 10.—(CP)—Rich man, poor man—all the hockey lover for Howie Morenz—will pay tribute to the great hockey idol, final tribute to the gentleman and the greatest hockey player of all time.

There he sped in his greatest triumphs, Morenz will lie in state for four hours tomorrow on the ice surface of Montreal's Forum. There the hockey multitudes may file past him and there, too, they will see him in death.

Plans for the public funeral were completed today, a guard of honor was arranged. Six former Cleghorns and Boothers who were with him 16 years ago will stand by with present members of the Canadien Club, his final teammates.

Then, after the funeral, Morenz will be taken for burial in Mount Royal Cemetery.

Simply, impressively, 10,000 fans, the Canadiens and Maroons, the Montreal fraternity last night before the regular league game that opened tonight, paid tribute to Howie would not have wanted it that way.

Taps Sounded

Muffled drums rolled and bugles sounded taps in a two-minutes silence, lights were dimmed and the Forum was broken only by occasional, unashamed, sobbing. President Frederic McLaughlin of Canadiens announced him briefly.

"With sincere regret and deep emotion we announce the death last night of the one and only Howie Morenz — a gentleman and the greatest hockey player of all time."

A little while before the Canadiens sat in their dressing room and listened to Manager Cecil Hart, one of Howie's closest friends and the man who brought him back to season where alone he could be happy—with the Flying Frenchmen Buddies of more than a decade.

"Forget all your troubles," Hart said. "We are there and play—play as Howie would have wanted you to play, and you'll be sure to be played if he were here."

Canadiens went on and played, played themselves into exhaustion. That they lost didn't really matter. It was the way Howie would have played—until exhaustion despite defeat.

There was a touch of theatrical game for Morenz next fall. Now it is a memorial game—a memorial to the "greatest hockey player of all time."

BASIL DORAN OF SYRACUSE STARS A PRIZE ROOKIE

If He Wins Honor, Maple Leafs' Interests Will Score Grand Slam

A BIG FACTOR

Scored Three of Four Goals to Defeat Eagles by 4-3

It looks as though Toronto Maple Leafs' interests will make a grand slam in prize-hooks honors this season, Syl Apps seems headed for the National Hockey League award, while it's going to be difficult for experts to favor anyone ahead of Basil Doran in the International-American.

Hands from South Porcupine, Ont., is a big factor in the attack of Syracuse Stars, Leafs' farm team. When Dan Snyder picked him as a natural after watching a couple of junior games, he didn't make a mistake. In his first year as a pro, Doran is a standout.

In Syracuse last night, he bagged three of Stars' four goals to tie New Haven Eagles 4-4. The Syracuse ace was in great form, scoring the tying and winning goals in the last period. The three markers gave him a total of 23 goals and 14 assists to gain fifth place among the League's leading marksmen.

Doran dealt a blow to Eagles who still have a mathematical chance to grab a playoff berth in the Eastern Section. But it was no more severe than the jolt Springfield Indians gave Providence Reds, West-group cellar dwellers, by flattening Indians, 7-4.

Ted Saunders led Indians' assault with two goals after Phleum Gingras got to a dim playoff hope, scored a two-goal lead in the first period. Then Cleveland Bruins' deer stopped fighting and after Springfield had taken a 7-3 lead, Bruins' attack slapped in two goals with less than four minutes play remaining.

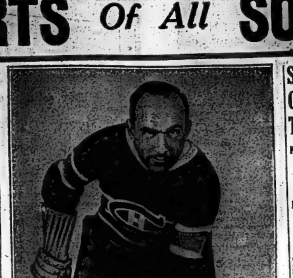
LEAGUE LEADERS



New Haven, Conn., March 10.—(AP)—Jack Markell of Syracuse, loomed today as the scoring champion of the International-American Hockey League which winds up the current campaign tonight.

Markell scored eight points during the past week to bring his total to 74, nine more than Cliff Goupille of Philadelphia, and his teammate Basil Doran of Syracuse. Doran's try of Syracuse is fourth with 64 with the rest of the field virtually out of the running.

Jack Church of Syracuse retained his "hat trick" title with 27 markers or penalties, a major and a misconduct.

HEART ATTACK FATAL TO MORENZ

Finish was written to the career of one of hockey's greatest players here this morning at the Montreal Forum. Howie Morenz, who suffered a heart attack during a game last January, was confined to a hospital bed when he suffered a heart attack which was fatal. The 34-year-old veteran was performing one of the greatest comebacks that hockey has ever seen when he sustained his injury.

Marmora High School Wins Senior Interscholastic Title Defeating Napanee on Round

Will Journey to London to Take Part in Provincial Finals

GAME SCORE 8-5

Joe Kouri, Star of Game With Four Goals to His Credit

MADOC, March 10 — After battling at practically every town throughout the Marmora High School senior interscholastic puckchasers staged a torrid third period rally to score three goals and defeat the Napanee Collegiate seniors by the score of 8 to 5 at Madoc last night, thereby gaining the "Northerners" the semi-final round in the senior C.O.S.S.A. playdowns over Napanee by the count of 12 to 10. The Marmora High School students earned the right to represent their district in the C.O.S.S.A. final play-offs at Madoc next week. It marked the first time Marmora had advanced to such a high position in the Ontario Secondary School hockey race and he's ever was heralded with the hockey in Marmora and Madoc, where last night's game was played, the score by periods being eight were 3 to 2 and 5 to 4 in favour of Marmora. The crowd was tied to open the third period. Gerow scored for Napanee in the round and Joe Kouri once again. It was at this point difficulties arose, when Joe Kouri was credited with a goal when he shot home N. O'Neill's pass, the Napanee team swarming the goal umpire and protesting loudly, that the puck had not crossed the goal line. Referee Walter Jackson, of Peterborough eventually satisfied the judges at the goal umpire and permitted the goal, that tied the round again. Kouri also scored the goal, that meant ultimately victory and was the chief marksman of the night, having four goals to his credit. The O'Neill brothers, Norman and Kouri played great hockey for the new champions. Leary, Gerow, Gilbert and Valley carried the brunt of the attack launched by the vanquished. Gerow with three goals led the Napanee attack.

The lineups:

Marmora High School: Goal, West; defence, G. O'Neill and N. O'Neill; centre, F. Lovelies; wings, J. Lovelies and Reynolds; subs, Leonard, Kouri, Grey, Prentice and McKeown.

Napanee Collegiate Institute: Goal, Moore; defence, Switzer and Valley; centre, Gilbert; wings, Leary and Gerow; subs, Barrett, Colborne, Paul and Holmes.

Referee: Waltz Jackson, Peterborough.

Summary:

1st period:
Marmora: N. O'Neill (C. O'Neill) 3.10
Napanee: Culhane (Garrett) . 8.00
Marmora: J. Lovelies 9.00

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

The advantage of a tried and proven coach was quite in evidence at the Belleville Arena on Monday night, when the Port Colborne "Sailors", a team of garnered stars from all points of the compass, whipped the "Flyers" Coach Bert Corbeau, who guided the destinies of the Midland intermediates in 1936 and '35 went to Port Colborne, where he was given a free hand to mould what material he thought was necessary to build a contending senior O.H.A. squad. After garnering a galaxy of ice hockey artistries from all parts of Ontario the Sailors were denied admittance to the senior O.H.A. ranks and in fact given a berth into the Allan Cup eliminations by route of senior "B" uncontested title. We are really wandering away from the subject, Corbeau took over the Sailors many of whom were completely strangers to each other, but still hockey players of proven ability, whipped them into a smooth working combination. Today, especially with these scraps rife we want ice hockey under, any team to win, honors must be fortified with a good hockey coach and this goes for baseball as well. True enough the coach must have material at ability to work with and the best at all, old saying—"the team makes the coach", which also holds good the other side the coach is a real fertile material to work with he'll get no further than either you or me.

O—O—O

With the present-day heavy draw of amateur senior hockey players from Europe, United States, England and the professional ranks, any small community to bother with mature aged hockey, in the senior ranks is going to be up against financial difficulties. This is our own opinion and pertaining to the Belleville senior team. The future of hockey in Canada lies solely in the production of players in the junior ages and we foresee great possibilities in the newly formed Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association, an organization Belleville should quickly affiliate with. Apparently no individual is interested in this particular category of hockey as we take this opportunity to call a representative meeting of junior hockey executives in the near future to discuss the possibilities of a Belleville Juvenile Hockey League.

O—O—O

There is an untrue and unfair rumour being circulated around the community, that, in fairness to the management of the Belleville Arena we wish to contradict. Having failed to do some biased person circulated the rumor that the ice surface in the Arena was frozen for between 4.00 and 6.00 p.m. in order to slow up the ice and possibly soften the surface to the advantage of their more fleet-footed rivals, the Sailors. "There is no truth in this rumor whatever. We did not flood the ice surface after 4.00 a.m. on Monday morning and at this time the mercury registered exactly 13 above zero, or in other words we had 19 degrees of frost. The next day the sun's rays beat down on the roof of the Arena, and the ice softened, but nothing in order to keep what coldness was in the building. The sun's rays beating down on the Arena skylights along the upper west wall. This heat from the sky-light was responsible for the soft ice and upon the roof caused the ice to what we term 'sweat', which in turn the moisture commenced to enter the Arena it added more heat and naturally the ice softened as the latter. The heavy steel girders in the Arena also absorb and retain considerable heat, and I can honestly assure you that the ice at the Arena WAS NOT flooded in the early morning hours of George Day, manager of the Arena today. And that settles that.

Hewitt said that Belleville was quite a few clubs in competition in Western Ontario, but doubtlessly the Redmen would be the winner of the Western-Ontario series, now in progress. SWISS HAVE DEVELOPED BEST NATIVE PLAYERS OPINES CANADIAN COACH

London, March 10 (CP)—European teams have developed some good material on Canada's National game for Kimberley Dumaresque, coach of the Canadian tour of the continent.

Many sure are teaching us some new lessons in hockey," said young Dumaresque, "and I think the difficult rule of coach, trainer, manager, stick carrier and interpreter. Switzerland has produced some of the foreign elements which have seeped into the Canadian game.

For instance in some of the rinks in Switzerland they have portable boards where the boards are only a foot high, tired players flip them over and get rolled and get rolled at the face-off.

The Swiss Dynamiters quite a while to get onto the six-man defensive system which has been recently saved by the reputation of Canada's National Hockey Team and their blue line after the inaugural face-off and stayed there until the final whistle.

"By the end of the game our Jack Rabbits had mastered the system, carrying the play all the time," Dumaresque said.

The coach of last season's Allan Cup winners said that the players were impressed with the kids' childhood days" in most rinks.

"Not worst of all is the refereeing morning," Dumaresque declared of the rules," declared Johnny, adding that hooking, checking, holding and holding the puck interpreting it as part of the game, but they love how the wizard play ing the puck off the ice and for a long distance.

The Grim reaper, striking with dramatic swiftness created a vacancy in professional hockey circles which will be hard to fill, when Howie Morenz, one of the greatest hockey players ever developed in Canada, heard the Final Whistle to a great and colorful career yesterday morning..... The Stratford Express, as he was familiarly termed, succumbed to a heart attack brought on by a nervous breakdown while lying in a Montreal hospital, where he was reported to be recovering from a broken leg sustained in a recent game.....

O—O—O

Perrien Howie, pride of the French Canadian hockey fans and a general favorite with followers of the game all over Canada, was perhaps without an equal in the centre lane, when he was at the peak of his career..... Teaming with the famous Aurel Joliat and Johnny Gagnon, the Stratford flyer made the game, which brought the highest honors obtainable in pro hockey circles to the equally famous Les Canadiens. He was a member of the mythical Canadian all-star team on three occasions, and was awarded the David Hart trophy as the league's most valuable player for three seasons.....

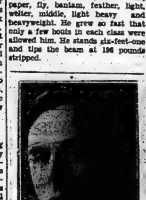
O—O—O

William "Father" Gerby, of the Stratford Midgets was stunned when he heard the news of Morenz's death..... Tears glistened in his eyes as he recalled the great player's start in hockey..... Morenz was invited to play with the Stratford team after showing class with the school squad!!! He showed up without gloves and emerged with hands bleeding and bruised after being given a rough ride by his opponents!!!! "I'm not coming back any more Mr. Gerby" he said.... But he did come back..... And at their request..... He left his supper unfinished on the table, trudged down to the rink and played an outstanding game..... When Morenz left Stratford for Ottawa to try out with the famous Canadiens, he said. "I'll make it or quit the game"..... History records show how well he made the grade.....

O—O—O

One of Morenz most outstanding achievements occurred in a Stanley Cup final against the Ottawa Senators..... At least so some of the boys from this office say, who attended the game..... The squads had tied the first game in Montreal with no scoring by either team..... At the second game in Ottawa, with one goal down, Morenz suddenly flashed to life..... Streaking down the centre lanes, flanked by the Joliat, Gagnon wings, the Stratford meteor scored two goals in rapid succession, to put the game in the well-known container, and square the series..... Another sterling performances by this fine athlete in the next game, brought the Stanley Cup to the Canadiens.....

O—O—O



Chiplets..... Bill Cooke Onion Club farmed last week may have died a natural death..... With members of the club donating money to the extent of five cents per capita, for support of the organization, undercover sleuths have it that Wimpy the secretary was seen gorging hamburgers..... Both the sec. and the funds are missing.... A Florida race horse owner tacked the fantastic name of "Pansies" on one of his broomtails..... He got the name by taking the initial letters from the words of the song "Putting" all my eggs in on basket"..... He might better have named him "Bakers Dozen" for the nag finished thirteenth in a field of the same number..... Sports writers in the office of a prominent New York tab sheet, are arguing as to whether Scotty Davidson is the best hockey player Canada ever turned out..... Morenz obits and sports eulogies should settle that little tiff..... But Fry says that heel and brawn will constitute the "Check" line next footballing..... How about injecting a few brains into the managerial dept. by balancing the thing..... Havana, Cuba, is enjoying the best sports winter yet, importing one million dollars worth of athletic talent..... That does not include the Glands..... Dix Dean recently built a new home of tropical architecture..... He entertains his teammates there..... A house of Cards, methee..... Foster Hewitt was recently raised as tops among the hockey broadcasters by his American contemporaries..... After all these years Foster was callin' 'em when the Yankee airwaves were sounding such phrases as "Down the right wing"—"Up the forward Walk"—"the ball goes in for a score."....

St. Catharines' contribution to the pro boxing ring is George Bird, Canadian amateur heavyweight boxing champion. Bird, it was recently announced, would travel to New York to tangle with some American leather flingers. He was born in St. Catharines, Ont., on May 9, 1917. His first fight was in spring of 1928, when he won against "Red" Matthews of Hamilton in the 90 pound class. He has fought in every class, since then, paper, fly, bantam, feather, light, welter, middle, light heavy and heavyweight. He grew so fast that only a few bouts in each class were allowed him. He stands six-feet-one and tips the beam at 196 pounds stripped.

PEMBROKE OFFICIALS MUST FURNISH PROOF

Ottawa, March 10 (CP)—The Ottawa and District Junior Hockey Association Registration Committee decided last night to give Pembroke Little Lumber Kings until tonight to prove their starry centreman, Carman Keon, is eligible to play junior.

The committee made the decision after studying a protest of Perth, who were eliminated from the playdowns by the Kings Monday night. Perth officials claimed that according to a birth certificate in the Dominion Registrar's Office at Campbell's Bay, Que., Keon was born Dec. 8, 1914, placing him over the required junior age limit of 20.

According to evidence produced at the meeting Keon was playing with the Kings with a birth certificate dated December 8, 1917.

TORONTO LEAFS' STAR ROOKIE IS HONORED

Before a game between Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens several players from both teams were presented with gifts. Syl. Apps, crack rookie centre of Toronto Leafs, was the central figure during the presentations, receiving gifts from his home-town fans of Paris, Ont., and also from fans in Hamilton where he played before turning professional. In the ABOVE picture Russell T. Kelley, prominent Hamilton sportsman is seen giving Syl. a travelling bag from Hamilton fans. Apps also received a set of golf clubs from his home-town well-wishers.

KIMBERLEY DYNAMITERS WIN FROM GERMANY 5-1 IN WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

The Canadian representatives in the world's ice hockey championships, Kimberley Dynamiters, went through the series with surprising brilliance to defeat all comers and eventually met England, defending champions, for the title. In a bitterly fought game with the English team Dynamiters emerged victorious. In this picture we see German rush was to no avail as the many matching their speed and ability with Canada during a series game. Germany are wearing the sweaters bearing stars. This German rush was to no avail as the Canadian goalie steered the puck to the side. Dynamiters won by the score of 5 to 1 at Wembley stadium in London.

R. C. A. F. Flyers Hop Train for Port Colborne

Aboard a C.P.R. passenger train the R.C.A.F. hockey team "flew" out of the home port of Trenton early this afternoon bound for the extreme west end of the Welland Canal, where is situated Port Colborne, the harbour of the heralded Port Colborne "Sailors". Headed by manager and Squadron Leader Tommy Lawrence the Flyers reported in fine fettle and ready for Thursday night's fray, that is all except Johnnie Lalonde, elongated Flyer defenseman, who sustained a broken thumb, two loosened teeth and a general shaking up at the hands of the Sailors on the home ice Monday. Lalonde was equipped with a heavy metal cast, that enclosed his thumb and will adequately protect it from any further injury.

The Flyers may change their tactics tomorrow night, starting their second forward line of Louis Secompte, flanked by Eric McKelvey and Roy Laing. "Windy" Wingate and Higgerty will be used as extra alternates, Higgerty being a burly gent, who can cope with the heavy play, that is specialized by the Sailors. Laurie Gibson will be back between the goal posts at his accustomed position and will see in front of him Stan Partridge, who has played great hockey for the Flyers during the entire playdowns at his usual post alongside of Lalonde.

The Flyers will arrive in Welland early this evening and remain there all night, taking an early morning bus to Port Colborne, where they will hold a light work-out at the Sailors' home Arena Thursday morning, later resting until game time. Mr. C. "Mike" Rodden will be the referee at Port Colborne.

Manager and Coach Bert Corbeau intimated today he would bolster his Sailors crew for Thursday night's game. Laroche, a speedy forward and Milner, a defenceman, will doubtlessly be added to the roster of the Boys, while DiLeo may replace Eddie Rumiens on the alternate line also. The Sailors and Flyers battled a sweet still contest in the Flyers and will ice their Sunday team in order to try and take the series in two straight.

Squadron Leader Lawrence stated before leaving today, that providing the Flyers came down in front in Port Colborne there was a possible chance that the "Airmen" would remain over and play the third game in Port Colborne.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Canadian Press)

Though the National Hockey league has come heavy last night, not a member of the Big Seven picked up a point and the standing still showed Detroit's Larry Aurie the leader with 42 points to 41 for Syl Apps of Toronto. Cecil Dillon of Rangers, with a five-point scoring collapse, failed by one point to move into the select group.

The Leaders:

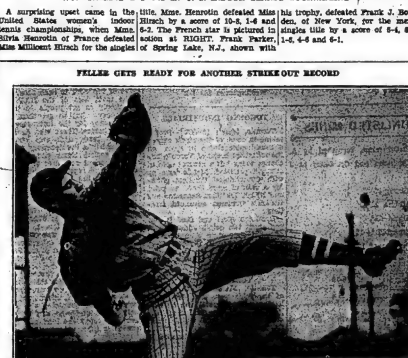
KI-Y LEAGUE

Two games of hockey were played in the local KI-Y hockey league in the juvenile section, at the Belleville Arena last night. The Blue Birds having little difficulty in disposing of the Albert College kids by the score of 5 to 1, while the Orioles were forced to the limit before they emerged victors over the Redwings by the score of 2 to 1 in fast, torrid game, that was marked with some fine hockey on lightning fast ice.

The victory of the Orioles elevates them into solo possession of second place one-half a game behind the group leading Hawks. While the Redwings and Blue Birds are trailing right on the heels of the Orioles in a closely contested league race. The Hawks battle the tail-end Albert College squad at 6.15 p.m. this evening at the Arena.

The line-ups—Orioles 3—goal—Clark, defence, Farquharson, Holdaway, centre, Clary; wings, Hannah, Gordon, subs— Doolittle, Kellaway, Gerow, Shaddock. Red Birds—goal Sandwith; defence, Bradley, Warren; centre, McGuire; wings, Maloff, Bernard; subs— Grant, Asselstine. Referee—Dave Blackburn.



Blue Birds—5—Goal Doolittle; defence, Cavanagh, Reed, centre, Higley, wings, Sword, Reddick, subs —Peets, Thompson. Albert College—Goal, Fraser, defence, Tate, Campbell; centre, Taylor; wings, Austin and Downing; subs —Wordley, Fallon.

Referee—D. Blackburn.

WON SINGLES T ITLES IN U. S. INDOOR TENNIS TOURNAMENT

A surprising upset came in the United States women's indoor tennis championships, when Miss Silvia Henrotin of France defeated Miss Millicent Hirsch for the singles title. Mme. Henrotin defeated Miss Hirsch by a score of 10-8, 1-6 and 6-2. The French star is pictured in action at RIGHT. Frank Parker, of Spring Lake, N.J., shown with his trophy, defeated Frank J. Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The local market continues to show activity with interest confined to several groups, particularly base metals and the heavy industry issues. Public participation in the market is greater today than at any time in recent months and more consideration is being given to earnings.

In the United States, steel companies, electrical equipment manufacturers and some of the building material supply companies appear to be in line for temporarily at least, to handle their cost increases with little squeeze on their profits. This is due in part to the extraordinary demand in volume for business in recent months. When a company with large manufacturing facilities has all the business it can handle running from 90 percent to 80 percent better than a year ago it is obvious that the volume, which is basic, will more than take care of cost increases for a time. The extraordinary amount of business being done discounts the fact that the rate of return is falling.

Investment buying of a good character is taking place in the Quebec power issues, and sentiment towards the group has improved appreciably. Stocks like Montreal Power, available on a high yield basis of close to 5 per cent., are considered more than ordinarily attractive.

Financing

To facilitate co-operation in every community, the Provincial Government Commission has appointed a Provincial Director in each County or Province who in turn has had to form a Local Advisory Committee with the municipal authorities to assist in the work in each area. The main duty of the LLLP. is not simply to get people to borrow money and to help them to spend money for the improvement of their homes. Those who do not have the money to pay for what they obtain from the banks the necessary funds for the work. Under the terms of the lowest discount rate ever given for such financing (4 per cent.) the Government has guaranteed banks and other approved lending institutions against losses up to 17 per cent of $50,000,000, the total loans which may be granted this the maximum guarantee is $7,500,000.

Canada's only loss to the banks in the United States was only 1.05 percent in the ten years operation of the Dominion-Provincial Farm Credit Mutual Housing Administration, a 15 percent guarantee by the Dominion Government amply protects our banks against loss. For this reason the banks are able to loan money at a rate of hand, considered a boon by people of good character who own their homes and who can be expected to repay the loan within a reasonable time, not exceeding three years. Loans are limited to $2,000 on any one piece of property and the improvements are under supervision of any mortgage as security.

In the United States, where considerable of this type of operation for over two years, out of every $4.00 spent, $3.00 of it has been repaid. If therefore, $50,000,000 is borrowed in Canada, it is conservatively estimated upwards of $200,000,000 will be spent by home owners in modernization work.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, March 10—(CP)—Big purchases of wheat by Germany and generally strong cables helped wheat prices 2 3-8 to 3 7-8 cents a bushel today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today to new seasonal highs.

May wheat, at mid-session, was selling at $1.32 3-8 with July at $1.28 3-4 and October at $1.17 7-8. At one time the October future was 1 1-4 cents above the previous close.

Reports said Germany supplies were getting light and purchases had been made from Turkey, India and Australia as well as big purchases of Argentine grain. Canadian offers were estimated at 750,000 bushels.

Canada's Gold Mines Show Great Expansion

Hon. Thos. Crerar Tells of Great Mineral Development in N. Country

MAY RIVAL S. AFRICA

Ottawa, March 10.—Canada's gold-mining industry contributed more than $130,000,000 to the nations $300,000,000 mineral output last year.

Gold mines paid dividends in 1936 amounting to $26,000,000, the highest in history, or more than ten times the total dividends paid sixteen years ago.

The gold mines of Ontario alone produced gold to the value of $45,000,000 last year, and paid dividends totalling $29,000,000, a new high record.

These are high-lights from an address delivered last night by Hon. Thomas A. Crerar, the Dominion Minister of Mines and Resources as reported in today's Globe and Mail.

Sees Tremendous Economic Factor

Mr. Crerar is impressed with the spectacular results of the search for gold and the expansion of the industry within the Dominion. In Canada's Northern frontiers and is bringing the gold mining into industrial East and the agricultural West, creating employment and markets for farmers and manufacturers, traffic for the transportation systems, and maintaining Canadian credit abroad. Moreover, it believes mining development in the Dominion is only in its infancy.

Alluding to gold-mining development in Ontario, the Minister of Mines observed:

"Today, the Lake Shore Mine in the Kirkland Lake area, and the Hollinger Mine in the Porcupine field in northern Ontario, produced gold to the value of $82,000,000 in 1936. Output from these two companies in nine years will exceed the total value of $30,000,000. Of this amount over $15,000,000 was paid in dividends, approximately $8,250,000 for salaries and wages, and $3,500,000 for supplies and equipment. It is estimated that the two companies have contributed directly and indirectly to the support of more than 125,000 people in 1936.

"Gold production in the mines of the Kirkland Lake and Porcupine areas combined, reached a total of $69,200,000 in 1936, a gain of $1,700,000 over the previous year; and output from the mines of Northwestern Ontario was $13,500,000 a gain of $3,800,000 over 1935.

Claims Staking at New Peak

"Prospecting is more active and more claims were staked in Ontario in 1936 than in any past year. Practically all the long-existing gold mining areas so far discovered shared in the activity, but particular attention was given to (Kenora district, where an important discovery was made in the vicinity of Lake Rowan, east of Lake of the Woods, and to the Red Lake and Sachigo River areas in the Patricia District.

"Exploratory activities were featured by the remarkable success attending developments in the Larder Lake area, west of Kirkland Lake, and to the less spectacular, but equally important and promising developments in the Goudreau area, north of Sault Ste. Marie. Most of these areas are being intensively prospected and explored for the first time, and systematic attention is doing much to stimulate interest in other old areas throughout the Province."

After briefly reviewing developments in the other Provinces, the Minister of Mines and Resources concluded that gold mining in Canada is firmly established, and said:

"The older producing companies, some of which have been in steady production for more than a quarter of a century, show every evidence of enjoying many years of successful operation. The younger properties, most of which have entered production since 1933, are being particularly successful in the development of their properties. Each year additional mines are being added to some of them in partially explored but unexplored areas, and many districts that have been prospected for more than thirty years.

Prospecting on Scientific Basis

"Gold development in Canada today, in all its stages from prospecting to production, is on a level well organized that the expenditures of large sums in unwise ventures, which is becoming less frequent. Prospectors and exploration companies in their search for gold make full use of the wealth of geological knowledge placed at their disposal by the Department of Mines and Resources, and by the several Provincial departments.

"In the development of raw prospects, operators follow well-tried mining methods that have made their ore-bodies and when the properties are ready for production every advantage is taken of the results of scientific research in deciding on mechanical equipment to be used. Much of the success of the industry in recent years is attributed to this efficient search for new deposits and to the orderly procedure in the development of prospects."

Future Rival of South Africa

"Many people," said Mr. Crerar, "hope to see the day when Canada will rival South Africa as a gold producer. Let us briefly compare the two countries. Gold output from South Africa in 1936 reached an estimated value of almost $400,000,000 or more than three times that of Canada, and the companies operating there paid dividends totalling $85,000,000 which is $30,000,000 more than payments made by Canada's gold mines. They employed approximately 25,000 persons at European rates and 300,000 natives, who receive an estimated total of more than $115,000,000 in wages and wages exceeded $43,000,000.

"While it may be many years before Canada's annual production of gold will approach that of South Africa, it is well to bear in mind that in the past ten years output of gold from Canada's mines has increased by 110 per cent, whereas the percentage increase in South Africa during the same period has been relatively small. Although the possibilities of finding new sources of gold wealth in this country are not exhausted the total area of unexpected and partially developed territory is much smaller in extent than that in Canada.

"When it is considered, therefore, that an average of more than twenty-five new properties have been entering production in Canada each year during the past four years, the number is considered likely to increase, it is not unreasonable to suggest that within the next few years production may greatly expand. To accomplish this, the rate of increase in our production need not be greater than that of Russia in the last decade.

"Such is the present immediate outlook for Canada's gold industry is particularly encouraging. Gold unlike most other products of modern industry, is subject to no quotas or restrictions governing its ready market. There is a growing recognition on every side of the value to the Dominion of gold in our economic life, and in consequence a general feeling of confidence sound lines cannot but increase."

PAVING COMPANY GETS $2,409,762

Toronto, Mar. 19 (CP)—Dufferin Paving and Crushing Limited, Toronto, received $2,409,762.07 for construction of 47.4 miles of trunk-road highways and Northern Development, H. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways and Northern Development, told the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature today.

Questioned by Arthur Roebuck (Liberal, Windsor-Sandwich), the committee chairman, Attorney General Arthur Roebuck ended when Mr. Ellis said all he was trying to find out was "how much it cost."

"Well ,how we're getting some place," Mr. Ellis answered, "that is all you want to know, we'll tell you."

Mr. Smith sent to his department for the figures and this phase of public accounts committee inquiry ended.

Added To Contract.

Original contract to the Dufferin Paving Co. was for 45 miles, totalling 22 miles of road. The price was $2,315,000. Subsequently added to the contract at the end of 1936 stretches of 5.8 miles, 7 miles and 3 miles were added, including some bridge construction. Additions to the original contract which Mr. Roebuck said were provided for, brought the total payments to $2,409,762.07 when the work was completed.

"That isn't an excessive amount," Mr. Roebuck declared.

"Aw, now," said Mr. Ellis, "what do you want me to say?"

"A gravel road," said Mr. Smith.

Dr. R. T. McCrae, Deputy Minister of Health, who was called before the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature to give details of evidence regarding bills for repairs to eleven Ontario hospitals in the year ending March 31, 1936, it was decided today.

Arthur Ellis (Coos., Ottawa South) moved to call Dr. McCrae and James Allen, K.C., (Windsor-Walkerville) committee chairman assented.

CHURCH'S BILL IS TALKED OUT

Ottawa, Mar. 10—(CP)—"Every body seems to have the speed fever except the House of Commons," Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Conservative member for Vancouver-Broadview, said in the House today as he urged more drastic punishments for highway offenders.

Mr. Mackenzie criticized members of Mr. Church's bill to amend the Criminal Code relating to Motor Vehicle Liquidate. The measure, however, was talked out and did not come to a division.

It would provide increased penalties for driving motor cars "recklessly" under the influence of alcohol or any narcotic" instead of the former description "while intoxicated or under the influence of any narcotic," affirming with highway accidents, provide for women jurors at trials of women and for the addition of representatives of the press at executions.

BOARD SYSTEM AN INCENTIVE

Many Children Adopted After Being in Home For Some Time

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. parlors with the President, Mr. E. R. McBride in the chair.

The different chair-ladies gave splendid reports of their activities during the month, which illustrated the work and time these women give voluntarily for the benefit of the neglected and dependent children which come under the care of the Children's Aid Society. No words can express the appreciation felt for this co-operative service. Very interesting reports were given by two board members, who had casually come across the foster parents of some of our wards and they, the members of the board, were filled with pride at the splendid condition of the children and the foster parents had impressed in their intention of adopting these children, when the two year probation had expired, in fact one child is to be adopted right away. Needless to say that the boarding home system is one of the greatest incentive for the adoption of children, that the society have ever carried out. Also illustrating the interest a child will thrive, when enabled to live in a home instead of institutions which is given them in the private boarding home.

Miss Martin Leaves

The Board were sorry to lose the services of Miss Martin, who has been spending one and a half years with the society, bringing joy, happiness and pleasure, into the many homes she visited, in the residence at the Shelter. The Special Committee of which Miss Martin was one of the work have been successful in obtaining another young lady to fill the place, and it is hoped, that she will prove as helpful to the children, as the late secretary of the children as her predecessor.

The Superintendent, in making his report, ten new complaints during the month and six re-opened cases. Twenty-four visits were paid during the month. We had 188 children under the care of the society for the month and none were taken into care, or discharged. There were 179 office interviews and 9 new applications were completed. Under the Adoption Act two new cases were recorded, and 35 cases were closed during the month. One settlement was obtained.

The Treasurer presented his report, which showed an expenditure of $1,800.66.

HUMAN BLOOD FOUND ON AXE

Dr. Frankish Testifies at Murder Trial of Wm. Munchuk

St. Catharins, Ont., March 10—Human blood stains have been found on an axe by police in the home of William Munchuk, Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert testified today at the trial of Munchuk charged with the murder of Mrs. Amy Seabright.

The handle and end of a small hatchet, found beneath the Munchuk home, had the same blood group as that of Mrs. Seabright, Dr. Frankish said. The blood stains were of group II.

Stains of John Seabright's clothing were also found on the axe, on the clothing of Mrs. Seabright could not be identified, the medical officer said.

Mary of Lewis, daughter of Mrs. Seabright told the court that she screamed a warning to her mother when Munchuk struck down her father.

"As I ran down the driveway I saw my mother coming out the door," she said.

"I screamed to her to go back," Mrs. Lewis said.

When she returned from a neighbors where she had gone to call the police she found her mother lying on the backstep of her home with a gash in her head.

FIRE DESTROYS $40,000 MILL

Blaze Breaks Out in Office From An Oil Stove

Tillsonburg, Ont., March 10—(CP)—Fire destroyed the flour mill owned by Fraser Brothers here today at a loss of $40,000. The mill, owned by the Fraser family for more than half a century, had been operated about 20 years.

Fire broke out in an oil stove in the office and made such rapid headway that Fraser Brothers said that the Tillsonburg Fire Department was powerless to do more than less to check the advance.

The mill, capable of producing 60 barrels of flour a day and employing 16 men in the busy season, was managed by Warren Rock, son of the senior partner. Mr. Rock said today that he contemplated plans for rebuilding but he was reasonably certain that it would be rebuilt.

About 200 bags of seed and the company books were saved.

DAILY SHORT STORY—

To Their Mutual Advantage

By Dorothy Douglas

Myra was neatly distracted working what she could do with her small sister with the imminent approach of school vacation. Had it not been for the number of illnesses rent contagion throughout the day to Myra's office she felt she might have had the lot beside her while she earned her daily bread. It was simply out of the question to have a small girl surrounded with her dollars and other accessories necessary to childhood playing about the office while her big sister attended to give correct prices dates of shipment and other details incumbent upon the carrying out of a successful merchandise business.

"Whatever am I going to do with that child?" questioned Myra of herself for the hundredth time. "I would never know what she might be given to eat or that child she might be up to at my boarding house while I am here. I have a good notion to face the Lion's Den and ask that crotchety old landlord of mine if he won't let me use the vacant office next mine as a sort of nursery."

She went out into the corridor and along to the office of the usually irate old gentleman in charge of the renting of the offices. It was just the cabin door of the vacant one.

Myra went in prepared to have something akin to a fight in order to get what she wanted.

"Oh, yes! Mr. Ramage In?" she inquired of the nonchalant, nonchrondetty young man she greeted her.

"No, Mr. Ramage got a bit too much for the remainder of the holiday so we've put me here instead. I suppose you are one of my tenants." And Alan Gardner smiled as if the idea was pleasing.

Myra smiled, too. Her mission was not going to be quite so difficult as she had anticipated.

"I have come in with a favor." She hesitated while she probed her acute brain for the most likely manner of approach toward this nice young man's sympathy with her cause. "I wanted very much to know whether or not I could make temporary use of the small vacant office next door. I can't afford to rent the two and don't even require it except for a couple of months. I have a little girl who will be up to the eyes in of a boarding-house keeper during the day while I must be at business and I thought that as I am just here Myra lifted wistful eyes and gazed into the young man's eyes, you might let me use that only while Tots is having her school vacation."

Young Gardner felt that he would let Myra have most anything she wanted. He felt suddenly grieved against a fate that rendered it hard to marry off the most wonderful specimen of the feminine world.

"But you don't look old enough to have a child that goes to school," was what he actually answered.

Myra blushed brilliantly.

"But I'm not married," she said demurely, "and in consequence the child is not mine, Tots," and again here eyes lifted, and this time they filled young Gardner with great joy and a feeling that fate after all was pretty darn fine at times, "Tots is my baby sister and she and I are all alone in the world and I have to work for a living. That is why I am forced to ask this great kindness from you."

"It's a fine idea," said Gardner, "and it gives me the same idea. I have a youngster just coming home from school and she will need some one to play with during the day. Suppose I have a few bits of furniture, a rug and a few chairs, brought down so the kiddies can have a sort of nursery where we can keep our eye on them. You won't mind Tots sharing the playrooms, will you?"

"Goodness me, no," laughed Myra but somehow she felt as if a cloud had drifted over the sun. Just when she was beginning to think that the very rightest man had drifted across the horizon of her heart she found him to be married and the father of a child.

"I've been pretty near nutty," laughed young Gardner, "wondering what I could to with the kiddie when she gets home for the holidays. I promised my sister who is abroad this summer that I would take charge of the little girl but blest if I knew what a pickle it was going to land me in But you and Gardner's glance was more than flattering—in fact so much so that Myra found herself blushing foolishly again—"you have solved the problem. I think it is a first good arrangement. And I say," he added by way of clinching matters, "you might be a good idea, too, if you were to accompany me to lunch each day while the kiddies are here so that I won't go astray in the feeding of my sister's child— It would no doubt be disastrous if I were left to select her food."

"I feel quite certain it would," laughed Myra. She held out a slim hand and smiled sweetly. "It is really very good of you to help me out this way. I feel tremendously relieved."

"It isn't a matter—on how I feel," laughed Gardner, gripping the slim fingers in a cutie elongated vise. "Don't you think we should start this soon looking for a suitable place to take children to lunch?"

"You're very, very thoughtful," said Myra.

Address on Spain Heard at Tweed

The regular meeting of the Men's Brotherhood of Tweed United Church was held on Sunday afternoon with the president, Mr. T. C. Graham presiding. Mr. T. E. McRae, B.A., principal of Tweed High School, was the special speaker. He gave an excellent address on the subject of "The Spanish Situation".

The speaker gave a short history of Spain and its political history up until the time when the three main political parties were formed in around 1931. The parties, the Left-ists, made up of the Left Republicans, Anarchists, Syndicalists, Socialists and Communists, the Rightists, made up of the Catholic Popular Action Party Monarchists and Carlists. The Agrarians, a neutral party, were anxious only for land reform.

Between 1931 and 1936 there were three elections and four revolutions. Azana in 1931 became premier of the Leftist party and proposed a number of sweeping reforms which aroused the resentment of many who wished to retain the customs of centuries. Zamorra became president of the Rightists following the 1932 election. The acts of the Leftists were largely nullified by this government. Once more in February 1936 the Leftist party came into power with Azana as president. His unwieldy made Caballero premier. Caballero was a Communist leader and began a form of anarchy, burning 38 churches. Many assassinations and reprisals resulted in a modified reign of terror.

Revolution begins

On July 17th, an outbreak occurred in Morocco in the army under General Franco, and on the following day revolt was general in Spain. The Rightists (rebels) had control of the army and munitions. the Leftists (royalists) controlled the ships of the people and country, the navy the air service and the gold wealth, amounting to £70,000,000.

The rebels have captured a number of places and are closing in on Madrid but they have not yet succeeded in defeating the loyalists and establishing themselves in power.

International Set-up

The civil war has ceased to be localized in Spain and is now an international affair which may be looked upon as a dress rehearsal for the next European war. Great Britain, while objecting to Communistic government, sympathizes with the rebels. Her efforts have been directed towards keeping the other nations from interfering. France, leaning towards the loyalists, cannot afford to lose Great Britain's support. Mexico has sided the loyalists with arms while United States has endeavored to remain neutral.

Germany and Italy are supporting the rebels morally and materially. The former has an eye on Spain's vast mineral resources and has been promised concessions by General Franco. She will also be given charge of reconstruction and has been promised submarine bases at Ceuta in Morocco, the important Spanish seaports and the Balearic and Canary Islands. All this would place Spain virtually under German control. To this end Germany has sent to Spain troops variously estimated at from 10,000 to 81,000. Italy desires very much the same concessions as Germany with the main thought of getting control of the Balearic Islands to cut Great Britain's route to India by way of the Suez Canal. To this end tens of thousands of Italian troops are reported to be assisting the rebels.

This excellent address was followed by a discussion.

On Sunday, March 14th, Rev. Price will address the Brotherhood on the question of Great Britain's Rearmament.

Under her husband's angry tirade, Princess Snoresy sobbed pitifully, then her own fury rose. "I'll get even with you, Alexis. I tell you again I'll cut you out of my will, just as soon as I can get writing materials. Not a cent will you have —not a cent."

The Princess shot a contemptuous glance at her, then strolled to the doorway of the men's shelter. There he remained, moody and sullen, glowering at the figures illuminated by the beast fire. The thoughts passing through his petty brain were not lovely thoughts.

In the outer rim of light, he looked what he was—a small, cheap grafter who had suddenly become sinister and dangerous. His eyes came to rest on Tarzan's mate. His expression changed. He licked his full, weak lips—lips that were flabby and rubbery.

His gaze wandered again to his wife. "If I were not for you," he thought—"seventy million dollars—in Paris, Nice, Monte Carlo—Zanetta is lovely—Jane is beautiful—that old fool—she'll live forever I suppose. If she were only dead—dead!"

DOMINION STATESMAN FOR BRITISH CABINET?

Empire Defence Strategy Board May be Headed By Dominion Minister

Stanley Bruce and General Smuts Mentioned as Possibilities

EMPIRE CONFERENCE

Dominion Representative on Board of Strategy Seen as Likely

London, March 11.—(CP Cable)—"The Daily Mail said today that when Neville Chamberlain becomes Prime Minister he may include among his Cabinet Ministers a Dominion statesman as a representative of the Empire.

Stanley Bruce, Australian High Commissioner in London, and General Jan Smuts of South Africa were mentioned as likely possibilities. The new minister, The Daily Mail said, would probably become chairman of an Imperial Defence Board, to which Dominion representatives would be appointed to take a share in the formation of Empire defence strategy."

Imperial Defence Problems

"Imperial questions of trade and defence are assuming increasing importance in the Government's eyes and it is understood the Defence Board idea is to help solve the Imperial Conference," the newspaper said. "The Defence Board would have broader powers than the present committee on Imperial Defence."

Telephone 99 For Hockey Scores

For the benefit of its readers, The Ontario Intelligencer has installed arrangements to receive reports of the R.C.A.F. Port Colborne hockey series tonight.

Owing to the lateness of the hour at which the game commences, the score will be received until 8.15 p.m. Please do not call this office until that time.

Ken J. Codling, Sports Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer, is covering the game and will report scores to this office.

The editorial staff of this paper will be on duty on Thursday night and will answer telephone calls from those interested in the outcome of the game.

Telephone 99 for the results.

BUDGET DEBATE OPENS IN HOUSE

Municipal Subsidy Act Given First Reading on Wednesday

Toronto, March 11.—(CP)—The budget debate opens in the Ontario Legislature today with Arthur Hills (Con. Ottawa South), opposition financial critic, leading the attack on the budget speech of Treasurer Mitchell Hepburn Tuesday. The Premier reported a surplus of $1,342,000.

First legislation to implement a promise made by the Premier was brought in yesterday when the Municipal Subsidy Act was given first reading. The bill provides for payment, at the cabinet's discretion of sums equivalent to one mill on the assessment, to municipalities, township, village and township in Ontario.

The cabinet will be given power to decide if a municipality meets the condition imposed and the subsidy must be passed on the taxpayers. It will have power to issue direct how knowledge of the subsidy is to be passed on to the taxpayer, whether by a notice on his tax bill, tax receipts or otherwise.

To Transfer Powers

Government bills to transfer to the lieutenant and labor board, soon to be set up, powers now vested in the minimum wage board for enforcement of the Industrial Standards Act were brought in by Hon. David Croll, Minister of Labor.

A new clause in the Industrial Standards Act would give power to the minister to call representative conferences in the barbering and other personal service trades. Penalty for violation of price order would be provided.

Another new clause would effect amending inter-provincial competition, chiefly the needle trades clause, whereby it would be given power to assess their members to pay inspection fees, job would be to see wage standards were observed.

Legislation to enable the government on April 1 to issue paying the present municipal share of old age pensions and mothers allowances also was introduced.

PROTECT SHIP LANES

Insurgent Attack Within Sight of French Coast is Probed

Marseille, March 11.—(AP)—French cruisers were dispatched today to guard the shiplanes in the Mediterranean between Marseille and North Africa following the recent bombing of the French ship Djebel Anatar in that area.

Brest, France, March 11.—(AP) France headed at an implicit warning to Spanish Insurgents to keep naval warfare out of French territorial waters with stringent orders today to her navy and air forces.

The orders placed naval and aerial units of the west and south coasts on a continuous duty basis after four attacks by Spanish warships in the international shipping lanes.

French vessels were commanded to defend the lanes bordering France from invasion and to watch constantly for belligerent vessels that the government noticed no action was in operation.

The rapidity with which the French Navy acted to aid the Spanish Government, Freighter Company, which was attacked by insurgent warship made a daring slipback within sight of the French coast, was taken as evidence of fresh determination "to force respect for French water."

Blind Veteran Hails 'Marvelous' Order

Boston, March 11—(CP)—A blind Boston war veteran, Roy Tessier, 44, refused re-entry into the United States from Canada since last December as an undesirable immigrant, declared he was an alien, hailed as "marvelous" a ruling by the department decision permitting his return.

Informed in Montreal of the decision, Tessier said it was "like a dream to know my wife and I will be able to be able to be with our son." Arthur, 16, living in Boston.

Tessier and his wife were turned back last September after a Canadian visit financed by Tessier's fellow members of the American Expeditionary Force in France.

Levi LaFay Designs Furnace Involving Several New Features

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

New York, Mar. 11.—Levi La Fay of Brighton is the inventor of a patent issued this week by the United States Patent Office on the design of a furnace for house heating involving several new features. An air circulating fan is used to convey the heat. Various means are employed to insure a maximum of heat energy to the circulating air, including the extraction from the smoke and hot gases of combustion of the heat in them usually lost up the flue.

Mr. Le Fay made application for the patent in October, 1935. It was approved yesterday by the examiners and a grant of rights issued.

Weather?

By Major A. H. Tillotson
Science Master, Bloor Collegiate

The fifth wheel How the wind blows is very important in aviation. With it one can correct their flight as they rise from the air. Wind blows in gusts which differ greatly from its average speed. If changes direction even more capriciously. It may blow not only west, then north, then south, but even upward and downward. These variations of wind direction are due to uneven ground surfaces and to the varying density of the air itself.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, March 11 (CP)—Pressure is high over the Maritime Provinces and the western provinces and northwest states. It is low over the Great Lakes, New England States, while a shallow disturbance is centred in Southern Ontario and a fairly deep area of low pressure is over the Mississippi Valley. Local rains or snows have occurred in the Maritime provinces while further west the weather has been fair. Temperatures are below normal over the greater part of the Dominion.

Lake Region—Partly cloudy and moderate winds with local snowfalls or flurries today and Friday.

Manitoba—Northwesterly winds; partly cloudy and colder today and Friday; lower temperature tonight and Friday; probably scattered light snowfalls.

Saskatchewan—Mostly fair and moderate winds today and Friday.

Alberta—Partly cloudy with stationary or somewhat lower temperature tonight and Friday with scattered snow flurries.

Marcels and Make-up Aid In Cure of Neurotic Women

Mental Patients 'Change' When Hair is Done Up

EFFECT ON HUSBAND

Norman, Okla., March 11—(CP)—Marcels and makeup go a long way to aid women suffering mental ailments, Dr. D. W. Griffin, Superintendent of the Central Oklahoma Hospital for Insane, said today.

"When the women get their hair done and their fingernails fixed, you should see the change in them," he exclaimed concerning the 1,200 women patients.

"First thing you know they are going to our dances and to chapel."

Dr. Griffin said one result of the beauty treatments was amusing:

"Some of these farmers in their blue overalls come down to see their wives for the first time, take a look at her and try to take her out of doors before she is completely cured."

China International Famine Relief Commission Reports At Least One Million Now Suffering as Result of Poor Crops

Hankow, China, March 11 — (AP)—The China International Famine Relief Commission reported today that famine threatened 2,00,000 persons in western Honan Province.

John Hall Magee, of Eagle, Wis., executive secretary of the commission, made public the findings of an investigation which declared "a condition of near famine exists."

"It is likely some 1,000,000 persons are suffering although 2,000,000 are involved."

The commission, the relief workers said, resulted from poor crops last fall. They extends over and area estimated at 3,000 square miles with a total population of 1,800,000.

148 British War Ships Building by End of Year

Sir Samuel Hoare Points Out Britain is Forced to "Telescope" Naval Construction of Ten Years Into Two or Three Years—Still Hopes Unregulated Race May Be Prevented

London, March 11.—(AP)—Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today that Great Britain, by the end of the year, "will have under construction the remarkable number of 148 new warships."

London, March 11.—(CP Cable) —"We must have a fleet", Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty, declared in the House of Commons this afternoon, "strong enough to carry out its responsibilities in both the eastern and western hemisphere."

"It is regrettable that "Rome and henceforth there can be no rivalry between the American and British Navies."

Sir Samuel introduced the 1937 naval estimates. These call for 80 more new ships to cost $325,325,000. With the ships already started, these will bring the total to be under construction by the end of 1937 to the 148 figure.

They will include five capital ships four aircraft carriers and 17 cruisers.

Years Are 'Telescoped'

"We are forced," said Sir Samuel, "to telescope into two or three years, what ought to, normally, be spread out in four years."

"Past deficiencies, he said, forced this acceleration of the program. Britain's naval strength by the 1936 program. Sir Samuel continued, Britain at the end of 1937 would have under construction "the remarkable number of 148 new ships including five capital ships, four aircraft carriers and 17 cruisers."

Ever since the year before 1914 had Britain had two such annual programs in peace time. From one point of view it was a huge programme, slightly below the maximum possible. Its very size was the measure of past deficiencies. The new ships would not be ready for use. The policy but the need of making effective the naval policy with the least possible delay.

Some Are Slow, Effective

Hoare dealt with three questions. Firstly, was Britain building the right kind of ships for the world conditions? Secondly, what was the naval policy behind the construction program? Thirdly, what was likely to be the future of naval armaments?

He proceeded that the "wild cat" theory that the battleship has destroyed sea power have been exploded. (Continued on page two)

MRS. W. SIMPSON GIVES INTERVIEW

States She is Enjoying Her Visit—Wears Large Sapphire Ring

Monte, France, March 11—(AP) Mrs. Wallis Simpson received three American reporters today to tell them she was enjoying to the utmost her stay in the Tourist Chateau country.

She is likely to stay at Chateau de la Croe for a month. She is looking forward to some golf on the course near the chateau.

Mrs. Simpson received the press on the condition that questions asked would be agreed upon in advance and that she would not be quoted directly.

The newspapermen met her in the library of the beautiful chateau —reached through a twisting stone corridor with small banks of hydrangeas and pink roses in the corners.

She was dressed simply in a tailored jersey suit and two-piece wool dress. There were two gold flower clips at her neck, and she wore earrings to match. She only other jewellery was a sparkling sapphire and platinum ring on the third finger of her right hand.

La Guardia Right, Says Rabbi Wise

Buffalo, N. Y., March 11—(AP) —Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York last night lauded Mayor La Guardia's biting attack last week upon Germany's Adolph Hitler.

"When Mayor La Guardia called Hitler a brown-shirted fanatic he is now merciful the peace of the world, that was an accurate, truthful understatement of fact," Dr. Wise said in an address here.

"Germany is dead," he declared. The Germany of Bach, Beethoven, Goethe, and Einstein is buried amid the ruins that Hitlerism has brought to pass.

ISSUE BUTTONS TO ALL HUNTERS

Two Million Asked by Committee For Protection of Game

Toronto, March 11.—(CP)—Ontario legislature should appropriate $2,000,000 for protection and propagation of game and fish in Ontario the fish and game committee was told today in a resolution submitted to it by the Ontario Fruit Trade Association.

"If we are to have a perfect right to ask this amount," said E. L. Hughes, North Bay, presenting the resolution, "we must remember the area was spent by tourists in Ontario and the government received much of it in profits to the Liquor Control Board, hunting and fishing licenses and other fees. Last year the Liquor Board should pay the Province $5,000,000 in profits, he said. Another resolution asked for 300 more game wardens be employed. Fines for violations, the purpose of seeing the laws were obeyed, not collection of prosecutions.

Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon said the government proposed to issue buttons with each hunting license this fall. A hunter would not be able to say he had forgotten to carry his license.

Plan Stricter Control of Beverage Rooms

Toronto, March 11—(CP)—Stricter regulations for beverage rooms are being drawn up by W. K. G. Odette, Ontario Liquor Commissioner, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today.

"I do know he is tightening up the regulations considerably," said Mr. Hepburn. "Just what he proposes I do not know."

The premier denied his government had taken steps to bar women from beverage rooms.

"We can't deny that women have equal rights with men in most things and are entitled to them," he said laughing.

Reservoirs Proposed on Moira To Give Work to Unemployed And to Remove Flood Menace

Mr. J. R. MacNicol, M. P., Davenport, Favors Undertaking in Four or Five Sections of Province of Ont ario

CITES UNEMPLOYMENT AND FLOODS

Flood control of the Moira River and other rivers as suggested by Mr. J. R. MacNicol, M.P., Davenport, in his address to the House of Commons a few days ago should be carried along lines now proposed in the Tennessee River valley of the United States, namely the construction of large reservoirs at the head waters, it is satisfactorily set in a personal note to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

Mr. MacNicol gained sufficient facts for his address on flood control during a 13,000 mile trip made through the United States recently. In his address to the House, the member for Davenport stated in part:

"In order to get a clear insight into this matter of flood control I visited the one place where they are proposing what I consider the perfect flood control scheme, and that is the state of Wisconsin. In that state is late Winnebago, which is the flow the Fox and Wolf rivers, as well as many other small watercourses. The Fox river then continues into Green Bay. There are some very important municipalities in this district, such as Fond du Lac, Oshkosh and Menasha. I gave particular attention to the proposed flood control work in the vicinity of Fond du Lac, because it approximates the conditions here in Ontario. I obtained these figures from the engineer. The area to be served is 310 square miles. Bad floods occurred in 1905, 1912, 1918 and 1926. The 1926 flood cost the city $700,000. The amount of rainfall at that time was sufficient to cover the whole area 1.75 inches deep. The flow of water amounted to 1,242,000,000 cubic feet, which was sufficient to cover the 6.7 square miles of the city of Fond du Lac to a depth of seven feet. That is just about the depth to which the water covered at the last flood. The rainfall was equivalent to a flow of thirty cubic feet per second per square mile. The total cost of preventing the flood damage amounted to provide this control and prevent a recurrence of these floods is $3,750,000. Plans and estimates were bound to employed for four months.

Four or Five Centres

"I endeavored to make a comparison between what had been attempted in Fond du Lac and what should be done in four or five centres in Ontario (for flood control) and the government engineers in Wisconsin told me that these floods were bound to recur with certainty and every and greater volume because of the deforestation of the countryside. Unless measures are taken to prevent them, there will be cumulative damage to the cities and the surrounding countryside.

"The Moira River flows through Belleville. Apply the Fond du Lac basis of figuring to this river we find that the flood volume of flow would be 6,550,000,000 cubic feet. During the last flood, damage to a total of $300,000 was incurred in the city of Belleville. It would cost $1,500,000 to build the necessary storage dams, which would provide work for four months for 2,800 men.

"Creation of the reservoirs would be in the vicinity of Foxboro, it was stated.

Creation of Reservoirs

In his personal note to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, Mr. MacNicol points out: "Hansard apparently left out the area of the Moira watershed north of Foxboro. The plan, of course, would be to create reservoirs the same as on the Tennessee. The whole project, land, flow and maintenance would cost less than the figures I used which as you will note are based on the cost on the Fond du Lac estimates. I presume the cost of the reservoirs in the work would include deepening the Moira from the C.N.R. outer bank line down to deep water. And of course the costs would be applied, as I said, to Belleville and Province, the Dominion and municipalities.

"Area of the watershed of the Moira north of Foxboro, as given by Mr. MacNicol is 1028 square miles.

The member went on to refer to the situation at Port Hope:

Flooding in Port Hope

"Coming to the Ganaraska River, which flows through Port Hope, we find that the area concerned is 90 square miles. The volume of flood water would amount to 215,000,000 cubic feet. It would cost $130,000 to provide the necessary funds which would give employment to 260 men for four months. When one looks on the new bridge on the main street of Port Hope and observes that this tremendous flow of water must pass under it, he will realize what is bound to happen. Most of the business houses on the main street of Port Hope south of the St. Lawrence Hotel were flooded out. This is the type of work which should be carried on. It provides a maximum of employment and is much better than the pork-barrel stuff. Many small public buildings are being erected but this type of work is governed largely by patronage."

(Mr. MacNicol referred to conditions on the Grand River, at Galt where work would entail an outlay of $3,000,000; the Thames at London where works would cost $1,500,000 and the Saugeen at Port Elgin where the expenditure would run into $2,250,000 giving work for 2,000 men for four months.)

"Work of this kind would add millions to the national wealth of this country. I can see the ministers presenting a proposition to the city of Belleville whereby the government would agree to advance $1,500,000 for the erection of necessary control works, the money to be returned on a thirty-year basis and paying such low rates of interest as the government can obtain. What a boon such a proposition would be to Belleville. They would know they would be saved from further disaster and employment would be given to 2,800 of their unemployed for four months. These things are done in the United States, why should we not do them?"

ninable. He was killed instantly. The smaller car was turned around in the roadway and turned over on its side facing in the southerly lane. truck was swung around by the impact and went into the south ditch just missing a pole. Both truck and car were badly damaged.

Motorist Assist

Austin Quarrington and Norman Hughes of Toronto motorcycle men arrived at the scene very shortly after the accident and rendered every service possible. Dr. Wade was planed in the car and the two men succeeded in extricating the injured man from the wreckage and rushing him to the Belleville General Hospital. G. H. Cronk and H. S. McCreary were at the scene of the accident, while Drs. R. S. Gibson and E. A. Flynn attended the injured man, whom he was admitted to the hospital. Hoppings was able to assist in clearing the wreckage and proceeded to his home. The late George Horan was a very popular member of the police division in the district since coming here two years ago. He was born in Grangemouth in Scotia and has been on the force for a period of five years. His mother, Mrs. A. J. MacDonald, is a resident of Orangedale N. S. No arrangements have been made as yet for the funeral of the late officer.

Inquest Opened

An inquest was opened at the Martin Funeral Home today to enquire into the death of George Horan before Coroner Dr. G. S. Cronk and after preliminary evidence was taken, the hearing was adjourned until Thursday, March 18th at 7:30 p.m. at the Police Court rooms. Sergeant Arthur Harrison summoned the jury and Traffic Officer Sam Hryhiw, who was intimately acquainted with the deceased identified the remains. Floyd Martin told of receiving the body and that in the car was in condition as when removed from the scene of the accident. Ormsmby Butler conducted the investigation for the Crown. At the conclusion of the hearing, the jurors visited Trudeau's Garage and also Boyce's Garage in order to view at first hand the vehicles implicated in the accident. The jury is composed of Harold Bateman, foreman, Hope McClintock, John Starr, W. Barlow, Louis Soule, Lorne Green, Adolphus Burgoyne, Samuel Johnson and Carl Fisher.

RED, WHITE, BLUE, GOLD, COLORS OF ABBEY

London, March 11.—(CP-Havas) Red, White, Blue and Gold will be the principal colors used in the decorations in Westminster Abbey on Coronation day, it was announced today.

Different colors will decorate each street but the general features will be similar throughout. Made 12 feet high, and topped by crowns, will be placed along the route. Higher masts in selected positions will carry bright-colored pennants. Where practicable, special "refuge islands" will be set up in the middle of the street.

O.S.D. Superintendent Gives Talk at Oshawa

Deafness is no bar to the driving of an automobile, member of the Oshawa Rotary Club were told by Mr. William MacKinnon, superintendent of the local Ontario School for Deaf, guest speaker at the regular luncheon of the club.

"Riding with any deaf person in a car, I have found they use exceptionally good judgment, obey all the rules of the road and are careful car drivers," Mr. MacKinnon summed up in his address.

He urged his listeners to give some consideration to young people who might apply for positions, declaring that in spite of their handicap they were generally found able and willing workers, and in many cases superior to those more gifted.

In the address, Mr. Morrison gave a detailed account of the workings of the local institution.

"Through our school at Belleville we try to make these people feel that there is a place for them in the every day life, the business life of this country, and they are not helpless as far as earning their own living is concerned," he pointed out.

In outlining the work that is being carried on in the school, the speaker pointed out that due to the handicap under which the children are laboring, the work is slow and tedious, and it is a long time for the children to learn as much in the school as the ordinary child would learn in the first few days.

He pointed out as one example of the handicap under which the school is operating is the fact that the ordinary child with good hearing has a vocabulary at the age of four years of about 600 words. These are usually picked up by the child through hearing others speak.

"With the children who are deaf we have to start from the first and learn them the rudiments of lip reading, which takes considerable time. After that they start to where the ordinary child would commence primary class," declared the principal.

Mr. Morrison pointed out that the oral method proved to be so successful in the United States was being used almost exclusively in the local institution.

Obituary

OLIVER H. DINGMAN
(Winnipeg Tribune)

Winnipeg, March 11 (CP)—Oliver H. Dingman, 62, a traveller for more than 40 years in Western Canada and former president of the Northwest Commercial Travellers' Association, died here Tuesday. He was born in Picton, Ont., and came to Winnipeg in 1882.

LATE MRS. BERTHA L. WALKER

This Thursday morning at 11 o'clock the funeral of Mrs. Bertha Lester Walker, wife of Mr. Harry L. Walker took place from the family residence, 367 William street, and many friends were present to pay their last tribute of respect and to extend their sympathy with the family in their bereavement. An impressive service was conducted in the home by the Rev. Dr. Elmer Smith, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, assisted by the Rev. C. W. N. Baker, and the Rev. J. O. Sinclair, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The late Mrs. Walker is survived by her husband, Mr. Harry L. Walker; her mother, Mrs. G. I. Lester; one sister, Mrs. Dora Lester Campbell, and one brother, Mr. Harry Lester, Toronto.

The late Mrs. Walker was a member of Mr. C. A. Hart of Belleville.

LATE MRS. JULIA BRANTON

The funeral of Mrs. Julia Branton, wife of Wesley Branton, took place from the family residence, 23 Brown Street, Wednesday afternoon. The service at the house and also at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas' Church.

The bearers were Messrs. George Seames, J. Brennan, S. Golden, C. Biles, J. Fickle and Gilbert Seames.

which they came." Today every sensible citizen is of course aware of lessons realised the interdependence of sea and air power. The sea powers were forever passed when the air force and the air force has meteorologically a say increase in each other's strength.

No Guess Work

"There would be no guesswork in this connection. The air force aboard of all would there be any slavish copying of old models or foreign types. For the last three years there had been no less than 18 designs before the final designs were accepted. Full scale and small scale experiments of the most secret kind had been carried out with every type of explosive upon every kind of freight and upon a host of materials.

"There is not a ship in this program which will not bear evidence of the concentration upon the problems of the new world," Sir Samuel declared.

Air Defence

The danger of aerial attack would be met by the fullest use of air power itself and the provision of anti-aircraft weapons on a scale of precision unforeseen at the end of 1918.

"The effect of them is to make the fleet in general, the battleship in particular, a far more inaccessible target for an enemy air force to attack," Sir Samuel declared.

"I do not say that because it is the most unattractive target in the world that the target will never be attacked, nor do I say that if any ships are attacked that they will not be sunk. We never claimed that ships have become unsinkable.

Fleet Least Attractive Target

"It will always be possible to sink even battleships with gunfire, mines or torpedoes. No doubt in certain circumstances it is also possible to sink ships by air attack.

"But the fact remains that of all the targets that the enemy may select, the fleet, protected by its own aircraft and aided possibly in certain conditions by shore-based of amazing volume and increasing aircraft, heavily armoured by the select, the fleet, protected by its latest developments of metallurgical and science, stiff with anti-aircraft guns likely to select."

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—The Huntingdon branch of the Women's Institute met at home of Mrs. Edward Putman on Tuesday afternoon for their monthly meeting. Mrs. Chester Sills, past president presided over the meeting in absence of the President, Mrs. Samuel Kilpatrick, who was detained on account of illness in her home. After the opening ceremony the following program was put on. Solo by Mrs. John McLeod. Roll call answered by fifteen members.

Mrs. John Wallace gave a very interesting and instructive paper on manners.

In the business period it was decided to have the Halloway talent put on their play in the Hall at Ivanhoe on March 26.

At the conclusion of meeting, a lunch was served.

Miss Hilda Haggarty is visiting with her sister, Mrs. Geo. Parry of Toronto.

Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and Joan spent the week-end with friends at Niagara.

Mrs. Sarah Fargey is spending this week with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Crosby of Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hammond and Mr. Frank Hammond and Mrs. Hilda Hagerman were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Lake. Mrs. Hagerman remained over for an extended visit.

Mrs. Jas. S. Wilson spent a few days as guest of her daughter, Mrs. William Fox of Stirling. Mrs. William Hodgson and niece of Halloway, spent a few days recently with Mrs. Sandy McCurdy.

Miss Sarah Wilson was the guest of Miss Annie Vrooman of Belleville on Saturday.

Rev. H. A. Turner has been ill with the flu and was unable to take his work on Sunday.

Mrs. Wright spent Tuesday as guest of Mrs. M. A. Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy and Miss Marjorie McInroy are assisting Mr. and Mr. Albert Campion of Marmora, who are moving to their new farm at Anson.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. and W.A. of United Church was held on Thursday, March 4 at the home of Mrs. Frank Ashley. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Geo. Cooke had charge of the meeting. After the opening Hymn Mrs. Geo. Cook offered prayer. Mrs. Chester Sills read the devotional leaflet on Jesus, Lord of all. Readings were given on the Watch Tower by Mrs. John Moorcroft. Mrs. A. Ashley Mrs. P. Mcinroy and Mrs. Orville Reid.

Miss Audrey Bird gave a poem on Easter, "Who Will Roll Away the Stone". The Study Book was taken by Mrs. Barrager, Mrs. A. Ashley, Mrs. P. Ashley, Mrs. J. Moorcroft, Miss Sills and Mrs. Cooke. The Roll Call was answered by each one repeating a verse of Scripture.

Mrs. Melville Reid was secretary for meeting pro tem.

Mrs. Geo. Cooke and Mrs. Sarles were appointed delegates to attend the Presbyterial to be held at Trenton on March 10 and 11. This was the first meeting for Mrs. Geo. Peat to attend since her lengthy illness and the members were pleased to have her with them again. Mrs. Cooke closed meeting with prayer. A gloom was cast over the meeting when it was learned of the tragic death of Bernard Hartly and Harry Emerson and a few minutes were spent in silent prayer for those who had been bereaved.

OPPORTUNITY IS SUBJECT OF TALK

Kiwanis Club Members Hear Rev. R. E. Newman at Luncheon

"Opportunity" was the subject of an interesting address by Rev. R. E. Newman, pastor of Wellway Street United Church at the Kiwanis luncheon with Riddle Logan, president of the club in the chair. There was little business to transact but one new member was added to the roll in the person of Jack Twamley, assistant district manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. He was introduced by the president and initiated into the club by past president, P. C. Mac-Leamh. Eddie Shapiro was the sergeant-at-arms for the luncheon and Harold Seldon led in the community singing.

Arthur Sills was booster of the day and the popular member told of the activities of his business, which is the handling of all kinds of roofing. Ernie Finkle, George Griffin and George Lee won the fine prizes given by the member. Leo Hall, Clarence Jeffrey and Gordon Bray, who had birthdays closest to the date of luncheon were given passes to the Belle Theatre by the manager, George Forhan. A number of the members including Clarence Jeffrey, Gordon Bray, Walter Linn and Jack McIntosh sat down with the 'Tin and the president wished for them a speedy recovery.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Arthur Sills and Kiwanian appreciation of the address was expressed by Harold Seldon. Rev. Mr. Newman told his listeners that we were not living in ordinary times and that important days were before us and that we would leave a mark on the world that would endure for centuries. "There is a great demand for competent people and never a greater opportunity to serve our fellow man," said the speaker. We are glad to note, that Kiwanis was interested in the human and spiritual side of life rather than the material. "I know of your work" said Mr. Newman, "although I probably do not agree with your methods of raising money but the interest displayed in the children is almost worth", Mr. Newman was pleased to find a changeless God in a changing world and that through Him, everything will be worked out to the great plan. He believed the time of order were strenger than the forces of disorder and that everyone had a chance to present some help to the world and if the opportunity was missed it would not come again.

MASSASSAGA

Massasaga.—On March 4th, the Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. Asa Broad, with the president Miss Hattie Broad, in the chair. The meeting was in charge of Mrs Roy Valleau, with twenty-six ladies being present. Mrs. Valleau opened prayer, Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Chas. Adams. The February minute were read and approved, and a letter was read from Mrs. Ross Roblin, showing her appreciation for the shower of cards sent to her during her illness. A thank-you card was also read from Mrs. Cook. Business was then discussed. It was arranged to have Easter lilies for the service Easter Sunday. The wiring of the church was discussed. It was moved by Mrs. Valleau, seconded by Mrs. Jose, the insurance on the church be paid. Collection amounted to $4.25. Interesting items on the programme were: St. Patrick's talk by Mrs. Hillman; Little Lorraine Adams, a recitation; humorous reading by Mrs. Robert Adams; Mrs. Herrington read a poem, "The Grand Canyon of Arizona"; Mrs. Huff gave a reading, (Household Hints). Rev. Mr. Campbell closed the meeting with prayer, after which a delicious lunch was served by the ladies and a social half-hour enjoyed.

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Wednesday, March 3rd, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fraser, when about forty friends gathered and assembled to spend the evening with them before they move to their new home. Cards were enjoyed until 12:30 when Mr. and Mrs. Fraser and Howard were invited to take their places in the chairs for the occasion. Mr. Robert Adams read an address, a rose and blanket, Ralph Ackerman presented Howard with a fountain pen and pencil set, Mrs. Wm. Jose read the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Fraser and Howard,—

We, your friends and neighbors of Massassaga, have come here this evening to bid you farewell before leaving for your new home.

During the time you have spent with us you have won our respect and admiration by your amiable character and your earnest willingness to always be helpful. We look back over the short period you have been in our community with sincere pleasure.

We recollect your efforts in our behalf with grateful remembrance. You have proven to be good neighbors, kind friends, and we appreciate the many acts of kindness shown, and we have learned of your departure with regret.

Those assembled here in your home request in their name to present to you this gift as a token of our mutual esteem for you. We ask you to accept it and hope you will receive as much pleasure in using it as we have received in giving it.

Our sincere hope for you is that Father Time may bring you all many days and years of happiness.

Signed on behalf of the Friends of Massassaga.

THE HEPBURN BUDGET SPEECH

Announcement of a surplus of $7,347,729 in Ontario for the fiscal year as reported by Premier Hepburn, the declaration that provincial assessment laws are satisfactory, and the statement that one mill on the assessment would be granted to every municipality for the purpose of aiding in reduction of the general tax rate, were features of the budget address in the Legislature.

Ontario received a pleasant surprise with the fact that the surplus is given as twelve times what was estimated by the Premier a year ago when he announced his budget plans for the year ahead. One of the large factors in building up the surplus was stated by the Premier to be the collection of succession duties, the result of a policy which was discussed in detail at the recent by-election in East Hastings.

The abolition of the amusement tax takes away one of the sources of irritation known as a nuisance tax. In the reduction of licences for next year on commercial motor vehicles, drivers of private cars have hope that the cutting of fees will be carried to the licencing of individual passenger cars.

Interest will be keen all across the province on the manner in which the municipalities handle the one mill grant on the municipal assessment. This is going to total the province almost three millions dollars and Mr. Hepburn stater that it was the intention of the Government that this be passed on to the humblest citizen. He gives no assurance that the subsidy can be continued indefinitely. Whether the subsidy can be continued indefinitely depends, he told the House, upon the finding of a Dominion Royal Commission.

WHAT SPEED MOTORCARS?

Possibility that the speed limit on motor traffic on the highways of Ontario will be removed with the substitution of a safe-driving clause brings to notice the fact, known by those who use the main arteries of travel, that cars are travelling faster than ever. Speed seems to make at times almost their possible speed.

Some who know this is so, consider that removal of the limit will not affect driving, except that there will be a greater stress on safety.

There may be to the slow-drivers a spur in this which will cause them to speed up and if they are not expert drivers this may run them into trouble.

It was recently said in Toronto that high speed was not so much to blame as lack of attention on the part of drivers.

But the driving must be done safely. If the limit is lifted on speed, the new regulations will mean safety with speed. Safety is the thing which must be impressed.

Opponents of high speeds point out that in the event of accidents, the fast-moving car may cause more serious damage and perhaps greater loss of life than a more slowly moving car involved in a crash. A survey of accidents in one section of the United States some time ago led to the report that while accidents have not increased because of speed, the accidents were more serious to life, limb and property.

Some will no doubt hold that unrestricted speed will create too dangerous a situation.

Debate on the question will no doubt be followed with great interest if the question comes up in the Legislature either as a Government bill or more likely as a non-partisan measure.

THIS CAMPAIGN SUCCEEDS

New York City had its greatest driving achievement when its campaign to lessen motor accidents resulted in a reduction of 12.2 per cent. in the death toll.

This achievement brought the premier reward of the grand prize for the United States, because the National Safety Council considered that city came nearest to the doing for safety the maximum that can be done practically.

But the accomplishment was greater than the prize as the people of that city realize. There are no doubt persons now living who without this drive might have been in their graves as a result of accidents.

HUMAN STANDARDS

The supreme tragedy of today is the lowering of human standards where the fine things of life are reduced, Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson said at Temple Emanu-El, New York. He deplored the state of the modern mind that rejects all that is sacred for the things that are essentially secular.

"The modern tendency," he said, "is to adopt a cynical attitude that rejects the old sanctities for the reason that they have sprung from a low plane of life. We argue that because the sacred things were evolved from lower relationships, they need not be considered either fine or important. People have come to believe that because there is no real line of demarcation between the low and the high, there is no real distinction.

"We have come to believe that the only things in life that are important and valuable are those that have a function and that are useful to us. This belief brings to a lower standard the superior things that once transcended common experiences. The modern mind has reduced these things to the common denominator of usefulness.

"The great danger is the losing sight of all that is sacred. When we lower our standards we are losing the higher, finer and superior things of life.

"The thing to do is to apply the ideas of sanctity to the distinction between right and wrong, the two principles which are still operative."

Dr. Ralph Sockman of New York said that while men may boast of some vices, no men ever yet boasted that he was a hypocrite. "We all detest pretenders and admire sincerity and if there is one virtue on which our generation, especially youth, prides itself, it is that of frankness." He added that "the virtues commonly associated with church membership are not popular today and consequently offer little temptation to pay hypocritical tendencies."

FOR ONE WHO FELL

By some clear brook again in tune,
He lies, this April afternoon,
Beneath the valley grasses.
Long from the hills the snows have fled,
The maple's boughs are flecked with red,
The sun is gracious overhead,
The south wind, singing, passes.

The bluebells cluster round his grave;
Cloud-pictures in the waters lave
In shining undulation.
Upon a branch the oriole swings;
And dust of him who loved such things
May heed, for all his slumberings,
The soft air's invitation.

Soon, rich with peace, the budding trees
Will burst in leafy harmonies;
Fain for the turf shall hide him;
The leaves will be as friends he knew,
Remurmuring, their Summer through,
A dirge for him, till, falling too,
They sink to rest beside him.

Somewhere, by waters well in tune,
He sleeps, this azure afternoon,
Beneath untrodden grasses.
The whiteness of the snow has fled
From thrust of green, from flush of red;
A whir of wings is overhead,
And a lone lark, singing, passes.

CONVICTED OF SELLING NAVY SECRETS TO THE JAPANESE

a former United States naval officer will spend not less than four years and not more than twelve years in prison. Lieut. Commander John Semer (Dodo) Farnsworth pleaded "nolo contendere", and threw himself upon the mercy of the court. "Had we been at war," said the Judge, "your acts would have been treason, punishable by death." Gray and broken, the 43-year-old prisoner, cashiered from the navy ten years ago, heard his sentence read to pay for accepting $20,000 from Japanese agents. Practically pleading guilty it was not necessary to hear witnesses and both the United States and Japan were thereby relieved of considerable possible embarrassment, diplomatic evasions and prevarications. Disclosure of the case as the cause of Farnsworth's fall. He is said to be the first United States officer to betray his country.

CANADA'S NEW MINING CAMPS,

some of them shut off from the rest of the world except by air most of the year have set up new records for the "all the comforts of home". Toronto Globe published pictures recently of a mining camp where the bungalows of mine officials were steam heated and lighted with electricity. The airplane is pushing back Canada's frontiers and releasing vast deposits of mineral and forest wealth, hitherto inaccessable through lack of transportation. Now the airplane can take in mining equipment of almost unbelievable weight and quantity, provisions and food, and carry out the bullion at comparatively small expense.

NEVADA IS NOT VERY BIG

but it is making a big noise just now, claiming to be the "One Sound State" in the United States, with "a balanced budget, no corporation tax, no income tax, no inheritance tax, no tax on gifts, no tax on intangibles, and the greatest per capita wealth, $5,985." Nevada is selling its story to the world and inviting folks to come and settle there. Nevada is small but it has big ideas. Nevada proposes to make lotteries legal, and will have a state lottery to produce a million dollars a month to divide between the state and lucky winners. Nevada has produced much gold and other minerals, also many divorces at Reno, and has been the scene of several notable prize fights. Now Reno City, Tonopah and Goldfield have names well known to sporting writers. Nevada has been described as "a thinly populated state where easy divorce, open prostitution, licensed gambling, and legalized cock-fighting are only the more luridly publicized manifestations of a free and easy individualistic spirit driving straight from the mining camp and cattle ranch." Nevada is making an appeal to 10,000 picked prospects of wealth to make Nevada a sort of Monte Carlo summer colier by becoming citizens, emphasizing that Nevada has no radical organization in its whole 110,000 square miles. There is no political movement of even pinkish tinge. The lawmakers are cattlemen, miners, lawyers, business and professional men, and there hasn't been the slightest whisper of radicalism from one of them. Five hundred wealthy immigrants have located in Nevada as the result of the "call." Nevada cannot boast of its climate which is said to be "hot and dry in summer, and snowy cold in winter".

Mr. Morden Bird of Stirling was in town yesterday enroute to Montreal.

Dr. H. A. Yeomans is spending a few days at Toronto.

Mr. Lester Rose, Catharine St., is spending a short time at Hamilton.

Ex-Mayor Nelson Lingham passed away today at the advanced age of 88 years. In 1875 he entered the town council as representative from Sammon Ward and served several years. He was accordingly an alderman when Belleville was made a city by letters patent in 1878. He was elected Mayor for the years 1882 and 1883. In 1887 and 1893 he again sat in the council as representative from Sammon Ward.

Ex-Mayor Henry McInnich passed away yesterday. He served as alderman from Samson Ward for six consecutive years and in the year 1886 he was elected to the office of Mayor. He had reached the age of 77 years. By all citizens he was highly esteemed.

MARCH 11, 1907

The new Victoria Avenue Baptist Church was dedicated yesterday. The pastor, the Rev. Gerald H. Emerson, conducted the service and the sermons were delivered by a former pastor, the Rev. V. H. Cowsert, now pastor of the West-ern Baptist Church, Toronto. At the morning service the choir sang an anthem entitled "They that Faint Shall Renew Their Strength" the solo part being taken by Mr. Kelly. The musical parts of the service reflected much credit on the choir leader, Mr. F. J. Smith. During the offertory Miss Flossie Moon sang the sacred solo "Ladie" in excellent voice. Had the opening of the new church been postponed until next Sunday it would have been exactly 34 years since the first meeting of Baptists in Belleville took place. It was on the Sunday immediately following St. Patrick's Day, March 17, 1873 that the meeting was held. Mr. Charles Lang, who came to this city in the year 1870 from England, and who is now residing on Yeomans street, was the prime mover in organizing the members of the Baptist Church in Belleville. The following were described with him in the movement to organize the congregation here; Mrs. Reed, Mrs. (Dr.) Yeomans, Mrs. Jessup, Mrs. Palmer, Messrs. Jas. Etheridge, Henry McColl, Richard Bryant, William Etheridge, William Worth Jr., Samuel Squires, Albert Reed and T. Jessup. The first minister was the Rev. Mr. Patterson. The congregation worshipped at first in the Marble Hall, and later in the Court House. The first church building cost $4,000 and was dedicated on May 23rd, 1874, and stood upon the corner of Coleman and West Moira streets. In the year 1886 the church was exchanged for the building at the corner of Bridge street and Victoria avenue, which was eventually demolished to make room for the present new church. The old church on Coleman street was used by the Belleville Business College, owned by Mr. Robert Bogle. It was later destroyed by fire. Only two of the original congregation are now living, namely Mrs. (Dr.) Tracy and Mr. Chas. Lang.

The usually peaceful little Moira is one of its spring tantrums, occasioned by the downfall of rain and the melting of yesterday's snow. Yesterday afternoon the ice in the river below Lazier's dam broke and came down with a rush to the railroad bridge where it piled up to a considerable height. The water rose rapidly and flooded the Trenton Company's power house, but it subsided with the approach of night and cooler atmosphere. There has been no movement of the ice since yesterday. There is not a great body of water this year, but the ice is thick.

Ald. Lumsden and several members of the public works committee were taking in the situation at the upper bridge this morning and discussing means to relieve the strain on that structure. The river broke up on March 31 last year.

Mr. F. G. Kennedy, Foster avenue, reports having caught a large butterfly among the plants and flowers in his home yesterday.

The Rev. A. H. George will lecture in John Street Presbyterian Church this evening.

The weak Tilt Hotel street bill by the Bank of Montreal is in a dangerous condition.

Messrs. George Phillips, Sidney Way and George Anderson have been gazetted Commissioners Commissioners for East Hastings.

Messrs. A. T. Wood, M.P.P. and William Hudson, M.P.P., were in the city today.

Mr. Clark Kellog of Watertown, N.Y., has arrived in the city in connection with the construction work on the water works system. He has five carloads of material for use in the work. Mr. Kellog means business and will commence operations on Monday.

Stray Bits

WHAT DO YOU DO—

A woman correspondent of The Johannesburg Star who is evidently a shrewd observer, puts several questions which she claims distinguishes the female from the mere male:

How do you light a match from a box of matches?

How do you look at your fingernails?

In what manner do you look into a corner if asked to do so?

How do you drink a glass of water?

Try these questions on your friends before turning to the answers:

A woman lights a match from a box of matches outwards, away from the box; a man usually strikes it toward him.

A man doubles up his hand and looks only at his nails; a woman inspects the whole hand.

A woman looks around the room before looking into the corner; a man's gaze goes directly to the point indicated.

When drinking a glass of water a woman looks over the top of the glass at someone opposite; a man looks into the glass.

It might be safe to add to this list that the man distinguishes himself by groping in his pocket for the front door key while still half a block away on a frosty night, while if the woman has the key in her purse she will wait until she is safely on the veranda before making a search for it.

When a man is being introduced to an audience by a flowery and flattering master-of-ceremonies, he usually twiddles his thumbs. Adam's apple up and down his neck a few times, yeah-in his collar and generally squirm in his chair in the manner of a restless fox. A woman regardless of the heights of oratory reached in the introduction, has the power to remain calm and composed.

When returning the first visit to a new home, the woman will have noted at least twenty-six things regarding the get-up of the place, while the man will scarcely recall whether he was entertained in the drawing room or the kitchen.

In an argument the woman always has the last word while a man has to content himself afterward by thinking of the things he should have said had he been given the opportunity.

SONG OF THE DEN—

Someday I hope I'll have a room
Wherein no woman's hand disturbs
My junk, with flabbergasting mess and broom,
Where all my deodicated herbs
My odds and ends of broken clocks,
My treasured bits of quarts and flint
And rufous-speckled garnet rocks
Be peacefully among the bits!
Where multi-colored ties are hung
Upon a handsome chandelier
Where trousers drape the bath chair rung
And garments gather tier on tier.
I hope I see the dust in heaps
On exquisite old books.
The cushion where my tom cat sleeps
And, yes, my tackle box and books.
There I shall weave a path between
My rubbish and my nightly bed
Beneath the round-like punkawallah fan.
Of snowshoes crossed above my head
And, some dear day lay laugh
The slothful, soporific muse
That suppliers makes of all the daf
Accumulated through disuse!
—Whistling Bill.

THE NEWSPAPER MAN—

One issue is through, then you sit down and you and you're nothing to do till the next, says Harry Moore of The Trenton Courier-Ledvance, but and send and sleek, this isn't a fact for the line is calling for you. Take off your coat and you scan every note and the bill you have to pay, till then, and make a good rag." If you don't stop to brag, still if you're not awfully lazy. For the machine must be fed, and let it be said, it's hungry and eats lots of news. But life's on its way and each passing day, events are both subtle and speeding. You grow old and grey, as each story you play, for events are rare and elusive, and you'll learn as you live, that facts are a mere illusion, but death is conclusive. So when one issue's done, you'll rest not, my son, but some youth will be and be a go-getter, you'll bear down on my job and maybe some day your noble will say: "Your paper gets better and better."

SAVES EXPENSE
LIFETIME QUALITY

Hundreds of laboratory tests prove that clothes will last longer when washed in a Westinghouse Washer. Rubbing, pounding, wrenching and friction are all eliminated by the cushioned-action Gyrator, exclusive with Westinghouse.

Steaming hot suds are gently but continuously working through and through every fibre of the clothes, while the repelling action of the Gyrator wings cushions the clothes from contact with the Gyrator itself.

Westinghouse engineers working with equipment costing more than a million dollars, build into every Westinghouse cushioned-action Washer precision and durability which guarantee trouble-free service under normal conditions. No oil can is necessary. The Sealtest Breaker protects the motor. The Dahrc finish stays bright for years and protects against rust. Quality is apparent in every detail of Westinghouse Electric Washers.

HIGH NOON

by RUBY M. AYRES

"You're so very kind," she said again helplessly. She wished he would go; she had a busy morning before her, but Matthew said suddenly, "Look here—how would you like a month at the seaside?"

Heather stared at him, too amazed to reply. He was a little red in the face, and his eyes were faintly embarrassed as he went on, "I've got a little place near Weymouth—only a little place. I bought it in the spring—heaven only knows why. I've been there only once myself. But it's a nice little place—facing the sea—easy to run—comfortably furnished. It would be a real kindness if you'd go down for a bit. Place needs airing. I keep a couple there — caretakers, you know—but it's not the same as people living there—any one like you, I mean. Well, what do you say?"

Instalment 13

Tears sprang to Heather's eyes as she stammered out, "It's most terribly kind—I've never heard of anything so kind in all my life but—but I really couldn't. You see—" She stopped and Henry Matthew said rather pathetically again, "It would do you all the good in the world, you need a holiday. I'll speak to the gov'nor if you like—and if you think he'll object—"

She shook her head. "Oh no, it's not that, but you see—there's the family—"

Matthew gave a loud chuckle. "Take them with you, my dear. Where's room for a dozen, said Ivi! be doing me a real kindness. Did you think I meant you to go alone?"

Heather was very flushed and her eyes shone through their tears as she said tremblingly, "I don't know for his old fishing rod which had not been used for years. There was only Hillie left; she was still in bed.

"I'll tell her," Effie said, and she went up the stairs two at a time and hammered on Villette's door, thumping it without waiting for permission.

"Such glorious news! . . . wake up for goodness sake and listen."

Villette raised her head from the pillow, Effie poured out her news breathlessly, and then stopped, feeling a little chilled at his cool reception.

"Weymouth isn't much of a place," was all Villette said.

"It will be heaven," Effie declared. "Of course if your so blase, you'd better stay at home by yourself."

She paused with the childish longing for Villette to share her enthusiasm. "You can ask Bruce if you like," she said after a moment. "Mr. Matthew says we can ask anyone we like."

"Well, I hope he won't want to come," Villette said sleepily. "I think he's an appalling person."

Effie flushed. "He's a darling," she defended him, and turned on her heel.

It was only slight o'clock when Paddy Jepson came in a racing car to take Villette and Bobbie to the Aero Club dance. He greeted every one with his usual confident breezy manner. He was good looking in a slightly ordinary way—wavy hair very blue eyes, very perfect teeth.

He looks like a tailor's dummy," Effie thought. "Who'd ever think he can loop the loop, and can do like that?"

Villette, as usual, kept them waiting, but she looked very charming when at last she made an appearance. She wore a white dress which she had coaxed Priddy to press for her, and a narrow silver fillet in her hair.

"Some one ought to play the wedding march," Bobbie grinned, but secretly he felt rather proud of his pretty sister.

Heather spent another lonely evening for John was working as usual and Effie went to bed early. It was past twelve when at last she put her mending away. She had done much thinking during the long silent hours, blaming herself for not making friends with Villette again, blaming herself because she felt faintly relieved that there had been some cause for Villette's anger. Tomorrow, or tonight if possible, she would go to her sister's room, and say that she was sorry.

And then there came a moment of rebellion. Sorry? Why should she be sorry? She had done nothing to deserve that cruel outburst.

But Villette was the younger, and Villette was in love.

"I am in love too," she thought.

She kept her bedroom light burning until half past two, hoping to hear the car coming, and then she turned it out and lay in the darkness listening, and thinking still.

Life was so strange—it was almost a riddle to which there was no answer. She closed her eyes and at once she seemed to see Bruce Logan's face—as it had been years ago—as it was today—the dearest face in all the world.

And then presently she slept for a little, waking again with a start, wondering what time it was. She got out of bed and put on the light.

Four O'clock! Surely the children must be home! She crept out into the landing, but the door of Villette's room stood wide open. Supposing something had happened to them?

She went back to her room and wrapped herself in her dressing gown. Already it was getting light. She knew that Paddy Jepson was a reckless driver.

Another endless hour dragged away. Five o'clock! . . . she was sure now that something had happened. She was on the point of rousing her brother when she heard the sound of a car. She ran to the window and peered out. Yes, there they were, thank heaven! And as the car stopped at the door she could hear Bobbie's voice and Villette's laughter — shrilled, louder laughter than usual, surely!

She stole down the stairs to open the door, although Bobbie had a key. How noisy they were. Or was it only Villette who was laughing and talking so much?

She pulled back the latch and waited. Then she heard Bobbie say almost angrily, "Shut up, can't you? Do you want every one to hear you?" If Heather woke up there will be the dickens to pay . . ."

And then she saw that Bobbie had his arm round Villette—that he seemed to be supporting her, and her first thought was, "She's ill—something has happened after all." But Villette was still laughing! . . . laughing and talking in a strange voice almost hysterically.

"Do Heather good to be shocked she needs waking up! . . . I'm sick of her goody-goody ways . . . Why can't she be happy? Happy like I am? And then suddenly Villette began to sing a snatch of a song in a shrill reckless voice.

"A hundred years from now, sweetheart . . .

And we shall neither know nor care

What came of all life's happiness Or followed love's despair—"

So Ill the glasses once again—

Her pretty voice broke discordantly and ran down as Heather suddenly switched on the light over the front door. They all saw her standing there, Jepson, Bobbie and Villette, and for a moment there was complete silence, until Villette broke it.

"Spying again!" she said. She laughed hysterically. "Heather's amusement is spying." She flung Bobbie's arm off his sister's arm. "Shut up, Villette—let's get indoors." He added Heather's eyes as almost with force he pushed Villette past her into the hall. Jepson "Good night" to his friend closed the door behind him.

Villette was leaning against the wall, her eyes too bright her face flushed. "Spying again!" she said once more. She laughed foolishly and then turned to Bobbie. "Come on—it's time all good children were in bed," she said.

Then she went past Heather and upstairs, Bobbie still supporting his sister. As they reached the landing she heard Villette begin to sing once more:

"A hundred years from now, sweetheart,

And we shall neither know nor care . . .

And then Bobbie's fierce "Be quiet, can't you!" and then the closing of a door.

A moment later Bobbie came down the stairs. Heather caught her brother's hand, trying to force him to look at her.

"Bobbie . . . she's had too much to drink," she said, almost in a whisper.

Bobbie tried to laugh, not very successfully. "That's both of don't take any notice . . . it's not the first time, but I'm sorry you should have seen her . . . It happens at dances sometimes, and you know what Villette is! It's nothing," he added helplessly, well aware that to Heather it was a tragedy.

After breakfast the following morning Heather went up to Villette's room. She no longer felt reluctant to make the first overture for peace. All the motherliness of her nature was ready to take her in her arms and be friends.

She was a little taken aback to find Villette partly dressed and seated at the dressing table, powdering her face. The eyes of the two girls met through the mirror, and Villette said casually, "Oh—hullo!"

There was a little silence, then Heather asked diffidently, "Don't you want any breakfast?"

Villette swung round on her low stool. "You know I never eat any breakfast," she said, and then, "Look here, Heather, are you going to tell Bruce about last night?"

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The meeting of Plainfield W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Sherman Parks Thursday, Mar. 4. The president, Mrs. D. Hall, conducted the meeting which was a mother's day program. Since the secretary, Mrs. F. Hodgen, was absent, Mrs. J. W. Hamilton read the minutes and called the roll which was answered by "a mother's duty to herself". Mrs. C. Beatty gave a report of the flower committee which showed that seven sick persons had been covered with flowers during the last month. After the discussion of business the following program was given: Community singing with Miss Elsie Hamilton at the piano; solo by Mrs. W. Simmons; poem by Mrs. E. Emerson, "Why mother walks at night"; piano instrumental by Olive Hall; a paper by Mrs. Elliott, "The Rural Mother".

She concluded by reading a poem, "Only Mother".

Mrs. H. Harrison who was a delegate to the local Leaders' Training School at Melrose, gave the first of a series of lessons on the care of clothing, which was cotton fabrics. After singing the National Anthem lunch was served to thirty ladies and five children. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Parks for her kind hospitality.

CHRIST CHURCH A.Y.P.S.

The weekly meeting of the Christ Church A.Y.P.A. was held last night in the Parish Hall, Rev. O. G. Wright opened the meeting with prayer.

The weekly discussion, led by Mr. Wright was on "Armaments." The members showed a great interest in the topic and a very interesting discussion took place.

The business for the week was settled and the resolution of the meeting was taken over by the group led by Arthur Looker. The meeting was in the form of a debate.

The topic of the debate was, "It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." The leader for the affirmative was Willis Jackson and he was supported by Jean Orr. The leader for the negative was Art Looker, assisted by Marion Orr. Both sides put up a very good argument and the debate proved to be a great success. Mr. Wright acted as Judge and gave the decision to the affirmative that was decided to be unanimous. It is hoped that there should be another debate soon as this one proved such a great success.

The meeting closed following Benediction.

CHATTERTON W. M. S.

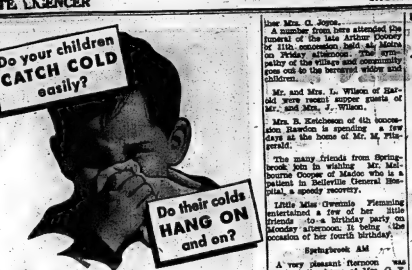
The March meeting of the Chatterton W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Alex Turner on Tuesday. The meeting was preceded by a lovely dinner, everyone doing ample justice to the many good things provided.

The meeting opened with quiet music. Hymn 83 followed by prayer in unison. Call to worship by the president, Mrs. B. Bleecker. Thirteen members responded to the roll call with items, read and approved and business discussed. Mrs. R. R. Pinkie and Mrs. B. Bleecker were appointed as delegates to the Presbyterial at Trenton. Mrs. F. Campbell gave a Temperance reading. Responsive reading and prayer by Mrs. R. Pinkie took charge in the absence of Mrs. F. Frederick, group leader, the numbers included: Hymn 379; devotional leaflet, by F. Pinkie; hymn 363; duet, sung by Miss B. Parks, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. P. Meals, Mrs. Hamilton and Mrs. Heasman. A splendid paper by Mrs. E. R. Pinkie concluded the business. The president closed the meeting with prayer. The proceeds were $7.00.

WEST HUNTINGDON Y.P.S.

The young people of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon, held an organization meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Shaw on Friday evening. Rev. Mr. Kodfend opened the business part of the meeting. The following are officers: President, Fred Benson; vice-president, Hilda Shaw; secretary-treasurer, Jean Thompson; press secretary, Hilda Haggrty. An enjoyable evening was spent in games. A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Shaw and a hearty vote of thanks was given by Hilda Haggrty to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw and Milton for the use of their home.

Denver, March 11 (CP)—Ten-year-old Madelle Carlson told her mother a story and got struck with it.



Her story was that she swallowed a needle, but physicians couldn't find it. Later the child admitted: "I told a story, mama. I swallowed three needles."

She was rushed back to the hospital where physicians found and removed three needles.

CHICAGO SEES PREVIEW OF THE CORONATION WITH FIGURES IN WAX

Although this may seem to be an actual picture of the coronation of King George VI, do not be misled. It is but a preview of the pictures you will see in your family newspaper shortly after May 12th, the date scheduled for the event. It is a life-sized coronation tableau prepared by W. E. Harnbe of Chicago and New York and contains figures of King George VI, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Queen Elizabeth and Princess Elizabeth. Rogers, jewels and the coronation chair are exact duplicates of the real thing. To inject some realism into the picture, we see Wm. M. Higgins (left) and Bettie P. Glenn, adjusting the garters of his majesty.

Follow this Practical Guide to Better Control of Colds

1. To Help PREVENT Many Colds

At the first warning sneeze or sniffle or the slightest irritation in the nose—quick!—put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-col up each nostril. This specialized medication is especially designed for the nose and upper throat, where most colds start. Used in time, Va-tro-col helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in their early stages.

2. To RELIEVE a Cold Sooner

Of course, when colds strike without warning, or get by even the best precautions. Then you need your dependable Vicks VapoRub. Come at tonight to bed and massage it briskly on the throat, chest, and back for 3 full minutes. Then spread a thick layer of VapoRub over the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. Long after you retire into restful sleep, VapoRub's counter-irritant action continues hour after hour—loosening phlegm, easing your cough, relieving irritation, helping to break up local congestion.

Sickness from Colds Cut In Half!

The two simple steps outlined above, together with a few sensible health rules to build up and maintain resistance, form the basis of Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds. In the 1936-37 season, 17,353 people as subjects of Vicks Plan results in fewer colds and shorter colds. It cut sickness from colds more than half!

You'll find full directions for following Vicks Plan in your packages of Vicks Va-tro-nol and Vicks VapoRub

MINTO

Minto, March 11—A large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sine on Wednesday night to spend a social evening with them before their departure from our midst is their new home at Mount Pleasant. A short program was prepared after which Miss Ida Vance read the following address.

Harold, Ont., March 2, 1937.

To Mr. and Mrs. Sine, Muriel and Doris:

We, the citizens of Minto district have gathered here tonight to do honor to you all before you depart from our midst.

It is with the deepest regret that we learned that we are to lose you from our community, but we are glad to know that we are not going to be many miles apart, and we expect to have you as our guests many times, in the future.

We felt, however, that we could not let you go without a community farewell, and you may look upon this demonstration as a public expression of the respect and esteem you have won for yourselves, during your sojourn in this community. We shall miss you greatly because of the services you have rendered in the Sunday school, church, and school section. Your neighborliness, many acts of kindness, and friendship have been greatly appreciated.

With one accord, we all join in wishing you every success in your new home, may you find new and worthy friends and may you continue to be the splendid example of industrious and good living people you have thus far been. As a final token of our friendship, and esteem, we present you with these gifts, to which we have been delighted in contributing.

Signed on behalf of the community,

George McMaster, Charles Morgan, Arnold Forestell, Ernest Sarles.

Mr. and Mrs. Sine were presented with an Aladdin lamp and a lunery, and to each of the girls a mirror, comb and brush set. They all made suitable replies thanking one and all to visit them and thanking them for their gifts.

Lunch was then served, all departed for their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Sine were presented every success in their new home.

SPRINGBROOK

Springbrook, March 11—Mrs. Edward Ovens has returned home after spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Donald Rush at Bayside.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Woodbeck of Stirling visited relatives here on Sunday last.

Mrs. Frank Runnalls and baby Dorothy are visiting at the home of Mr. Andrew Thompson, 11th concession Ameliasburgh.

Mr. George Joyce of Foxboro, is spending a few days with his mother Mrs. C. Joyce.

A number from here attended the funeral of the late Arthur Doorey of Hillier, Ont., held on Monday afternoon. The sympathy of the village and community go out to the bereaved widow and children.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Wilson of Harold Ovens were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson.

Mrs. B. Ketcheson of 4th concession, Hawden is confined to a few days at the home of Mr. M. Fitzgerald.

The many friends from Springbrook join in wishing Mr. Malcolm Cooper of Madoc who is a patient in Belleville General Hospital, a speedy recovery.

Little Miss Ormerda Flemming entertained a few of her little friends to a birthday party on Monday afternoon. It being the occasion of her fourth birthday.

Springbrook AM

A very pleasant afternoon was spent at the home of Mrs. O. E. Thompson when the Ladies' Aid held the third meeting of 1937.

The ladies served a pot luck dinner at 12 o'clock which proved successful and amounted to $4.35.

After dinner the president, Mrs. F. Bateman opened the meeting with hymn 3, with the organist Mrs. Mason present. Secretary, Mrs. G. Williams reading minutes. Mrs. G. Williams took the chair. Scripture reading was read by Mrs. J. Ovens and Mrs. F. Bateman, followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Psalm 121 read by Mrs. C. Burditt, Rev. H. Foley then led in prayer. The roll was showed an attendance of 39.

The question of a new organist was brought up in the business session, as Mrs. G. Sine sent in her resignation. Moved by Mrs. A. P. Williams and seconded by Mrs. T. McKeown, the appointing of an organist be left to the congregation and Ladies' Aid pay the musicians' fees. Carried.

Hymn 40 was then sung by the congregation. Mrs. T. Webb then Mrs. Haslett be paid for cups. The president suggested a mothers day tea be held at the home of Mrs. A. Reid gave an inspiring reading "Teaching Prayer." Mrs. M. Neal gave a splendid reading "Technique of Prayer." Hymn 3 was then sung and dismissed by Mrs. A. P. Williams "Our Ladies' Aid" we sung by Mrs. G. Webb, Mrs. S. Mason, Mrs. G. Williams, Mrs. Joyce, and Mrs. McKeown, which was enjoyed by all. Miss E. Peke gave an interesting paper on "Peace."

The meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction. The ladies all left very grateful to Mrs. O. E. Thompson for the use of her home.

MONTREAL CHILD DIES OF BURNS

Mother and Three Other Children Injured in Blaze

Montreal, March 11.—(CP)—Rene Leblanc, 11-month-old son of Mrs. Alma Leblanc, died last night in hospital from burns suffered in a gasoline explosion in his home which also injured the mother and three other children.

Mrs. Leblanc and an 11-year-old son, Jean Jacques suffered severe burns about the face and body while Jacqueline, three, and Marcel, five, were only slightly burned.

When the explosion occurred with Mrs. Leblanc was cleaning clothing, flames filled the small kitchen where she stood. She threw the baby boy out a window and assisted the escape of her three other children.

CARMAN KEON NOT ELIGIBLE

Starry Centreman of Pembroke Juniors over Age Limit

Renfrew, Ont., March 11 (CP)—W. B. Elliot, President of the Ottawa and District Amateur Hockey Association, last night suspended Carman Keon, starry centreman of Pembroke Little Lumber Kings, and ordered a sudden-death game replay of the Pembroke-Perth junior series.

This action was taken after Pembroke failed to satisfy the association Keon's eligibility to play junior hockey.

Perth, eliminated from the Ottawa and District semi-finals by Pembroke, claimed Keon was born in 1914, placing him over the required junior age limit of 20.

No blame was attached to the Pembroke club executive.

The sudden-death game will be played Thursday night at Renfrew. Pembroke won the previous series 15-8 on the round.

Murray Murdock of Rangers Still Goal-less this Season But Expects to Break Jinx

Only Game Tonight of Importance is Leaf-Maroon Clash

BRUINS MEET HAWKS

McLaughlin May Drop Band of U. S. Youngsters Over Boards

(By The Canadian Press)

As National League teams race to the wire, playoff qualifications completed, interest of most fans turned to oddities. Chief among them was whether Murray Murdock hockey's iron-man would score a goal before the season ends and when Major Frederick McLaughlin would present his All-American Black Hawks.

Both questions may be settled tonight, Murdock will take his regular left wing position in New York Rangers entertain Detroit Red Wings, while Boston Bruins invade Chicago, giving the major an opportunity to display their newly-Out in the cold as far as playoffs are concerned, Hawks have nothing to lose.

A few weeks ago McLaughlin startled the hockey world with a statement he planned to change the name of Black Hawks to Yankees and have only United States-born players in his roster. It may take a few years he admits but he's made a start and intends to introduce about five green youngsters from U.S. Amateur ranks before the season closes.

Although Murdock, former University of Manitoban, Junior Star, has already passed his last season's total-point mark, he has failed to score. One of the League's best body-checkers, Murray has been credited with twelve assists—last season he scored twice and helped in nine other goals.

Team-Mates Full for Veteran

But team-mates of the 32-year-old Murdock are working hard for him to fool some goalie in his remaining four scheduled games. Murray came to the New York Club from Winnipeg Maroons of the Central League in 1926 and since then has not-missed a game, setting a major league record.

Manager Lester Patrick figures there's plenty of good hockey in the veteran yet and is not worried about his failure to find the net. Murdoch has worked well with Phil Watson and Butch Keeling, both ace snipers. These boys will go out of their way tonight to give Murray scoring set-ups.

While Montreal fans still mourned the death of Howie Morenz, Canadiens proved they prepared to witness one of the season's most brutal battles. Maroons meet Toronto Maple Leafs tonight and the results may play a big important part in settling the Canadian section second-place berth.

Hinging their best stride of the season, Leafs hope to win and draw even with the Ex-Habitants for the second four-game drive. Maroons will be minus Jimmy Ward, speedy wing winger, sertously ill with influenza. Ward will not see action until playoff time at the earliest.

ENGLISH PLAYERS NOT SO FIERY

Ottawa, March 11 (CP)—Cecilia Colledge 18-year-old English skater, thinks English hockey players will never be as rough as Canadians.

The Englishman might trip another player but he would never hit with his stick," she said in an interview today.

Miss Colledge, amateur woman figure-skating champion of the world, is here to perform in an Ottawa charity carnival. She feels native-born English skaters are few, because they have not had the opportunity to learn to skate when young.

However she said, at Ernscliffe where she is staying with Sir Frank Cis and Lady Picot, England is realizing that in order to have good hockey teams they must start their young boys to skate. Various organizations are instructing hundreds of boys how to skate.

Many men playing on English teams are Canadians she said, but the few native-born English players are keen and enthusiastic about the game.

The Englishman is a different type of player, she said. "He is more controlled and not as likely to be stirred into anything any fuss." She believed that when England has developed a team of English hockey players they will be "as good if not better than Canadian players."

RUTH CALLS YANKS AND CARDS TO WIN

New York, March 11.—(AP)— Babe Ruth, viewing the coming baseball season from behind the bunker along the third fairway of the St. Albans Golf course, predicted today New York Yankees and St. Louis Cards will win by at least a maybe shot.

"You can't beat that Yankee power," said the Bambino. "They've it from top to bottom. They may not win by as much as last year, but they should win. Unlike most of the critics, Ruth doesn't give Detroit Tigers much of a chance. He points out that several of their stars are definitely through and doubts if Chet Laabs and Rudy York, their two most promising Rookies from Milwaukee, can hold them up.

BUCKY HARRIS NEEDS GOOD HURLING CORPS TO BE SURPRISE TEAM

(By Paul McAleenan)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Orlando, Fla., March 11.— (AP) Even Bucky Harris a real rounded pitching staff and he may come up with the big surprise package of The American League pennant festivities this year.

Bucky's got a big flock of apple cluckers in his hustling Washington camp here, at Orlando with Shanty Hogan the reformed eater, to advise and catch them, but they've got to show remarkable improvement if Senators are to upset the flag fight.

The teams shapes up much stronger than the Club which got nosed out of second and third places last year, except for doubtful pitching. The team can hit, it has plenty of speed, more experience as a unit and infectious spirit, that even has Clark Griffith so delighted with his club that he's got half a notion to make a comeback himself.

"Never saw anything like it," beamed the Old Fox of the Senators, "looks like this team ought to win at least 10 games by hitting and hustling alone."

Newsom Heads Corps

Buck Newsom, recovered only this week from his annual attack of boilsitis, again will head the mound corps and should at least duplicate his 1936 record of 16 victories. Jimmy Deshong, who blossomed into a real winning pitcher with the Senators last season; Pete Appleton, fifth in effectiveness among American League pitchers in '36, and Joe Cascarella, who looked great last season, despite a sore throwing hand, are figured to round out the big four of the staff.

Prospects for get one or two more good hurlers out of his minor league connections. Most promising of the nominees perhaps are Jack Salveson, recently bought from Los Angeles, and Dick Lanahan, a southpaw from Centenary College, Shreveport. Salveson, property of 21 games for Los Angeles, has flunked two three pertinent trynouts with Dolph Reuther and Lefty O'Doul out of the West Coast say he can't miss this time. Lanahan had won 13 and lost one last year for Charleston, when the latter hurt his arm, ending with ten straight losses. He says he's all set now.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Tampa, Fla., March 11.—(AP)— Tex of the Phillies in the Philly Camp at Winter Haven are six feet tall, or over, (which is about all Manager Jimmy Wilson has to go by). The Tigers, who failed to struggle along without one all last year, have five southpaws at Lakeland. . . . Mrs. Jack Dempsey, completely recovered from her operation, has left Miami to join Jack in New York. . . . Bill Terry gives Carl Hubbell three more years as a Giant pitcher.

Chicago big shot loafing here says Braddock and Louis will not go on in the Windy City, in June, anyway.

Joe McCarthy, Yankee manager, it when he says he may start Vince Dimaggio at third base. . . . Dope at St. Petersburg is Baxter Jordan, Ben Hur archer, is about to retire and will clerk at the Club's terms. . . . Nine Detroit Tigers reported at Lakeland anywhere from three days to two weeks before they were due.

Old Goose Goslin about to start his 17th season as a major leaguer, is taking a final whirl at the baseball in Miami. . . . Dizzy is all right, too. Frankie Frisch's hardest job is to get the Cardinals to stop bulling around and go back to the hotel. Those gas hounds just naturally like to connect with the apple. . . . Roland Harriman, the trotting horseman, loaned his Orlando to his flying clothes the other day worked out his horses at Empire Park instead and then went winging away north. . . . Just like nothing had happened, to other words.

AN EYEFUL OF STYLE

You'll find nothing smarter—anywhere. A graceful double-breasted suit with style written all over it—and riding the wave of style popularity in London and New York. The model shown is a Tip Top "original". A slightly longer coat, full chested, fitted snugly at the waist, breaks gently for a draped effect. Trousers are cut full with narrower bottoms. And by the way, sir, isn't it time you had a good-fitting, figure-flattering double-breasted suit?

8 Teams Still In Running for Senior Honors

Winnipeg, March 11 (CP)—Only eight teams remained in the running for senior amateur hockey laurels in Western Canada today as Edmonton Dominions and Nelson Maple Leafs made ready for the first round of intersectional playdowns.

Dominions won the Alberta championship last night with a 4-0 victory over Coleman. Canadians of Calgary, Canadians, who lost to Lucsar Indians in the 1936 provincial final, won the first game of the best-of-three series 3-2 but Dominions took the second game and triumphed decisively last night.

Nelson's British Columbia champions will be at home to the Dominions Saturday night in the first game of the two-of-three series. Other games will be played in Edmonton on Monday night. Should ice conditions, Calgary has artificial ice but Edmonton has not.

North Battleford Beavers won the first lap of the three-game Western Canada final last night defeating Regina Aces 3-0 in the Capital. Aces had beaten North Battleford 4-1 in overtime Monday in the deciding game of the southern series.

Two Winnipeg teams Canada Packers and Great West will decide the Manitoba title tonight. Each has won one game.

ACTION SECOMES HECTIC AS RIVALS SEEK BASKET

Quintets from Loyola University of Chicago and St. Francis of Brooklyn put up a bang-up exhibition of basketball during a game at Loyola. Danny Lynch, Loyola forward of the Brooklyn five, scored and Edward Murray No. 8 a Loy- Francis won 41 to 39.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Before the hockey season is officially closed there are two or three suggestions that might not come amiss. Certainly with the setup of the loop with Peterboro and Flyers playing Intermediate "B" and Belleville and Trenton playing Intermediate "B" we can see no reason why the two teams competing. Is there not a possibility, that the Flyers, Peterboro, Cobourg and Queens could be interested in a Senior "B" group with a double or triple schedule and a play-off between the two top teams. We understand there is quite dissatisfied with the Tandy setup because the Trenton Teams will not make two trips to Oshawa but make the Motor City make the two trips to each club in Toronto. The Oshawa Club had the brightest shining star of the loop in Doc Rowden, reports stating he was as good as any player in the loop. If that be so then Oshawa would not be too strong for the Jesse Ketchum crew. The rightful place for Oshawa to play anyway is down in the eastern part of the province, but of late years they have become very high hat.

Changing the subject to that of baseball, the invitation to the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association convention to be held at Oshawa on April 3rd is in the mail and there will be a general exodus to the Motor City. There is no doubt with George Ansley, Jack Beaton, Harry Carmichael and "Pud" Lane in charge of the entertainment there will be something doing all the time. Oshawa deserves to hold the convention for their city for their ball team easily won the Dunlop trophy championship last year and from reports of the acquisitions made to the club they will be hard to take this year. It is to be hoped that delegates from the Eastern and Central part of the Province will not forget Erale Gibbard and Max Swanston for executive positions on the Ontario Board. They are needed because of the missionary work to be done down this way. Belleville could stand a little stimulation from the parent body.

The R.C.A.F. Flyers although crippled through the injury scourge lately by Johnnie Lalonde, expect to extend the series with Port Colborne to three games The players and the officials are determined to take the "Sailors" right in their own harbor and soon silence the whip in the third meeting. It looks like a tall order but the Flyers play their best when the checks are down and they face stimulation by tonight. This writer thinks, that even with the vaunted speed, that the Sailors showed on several occasions that the Flyers will be there skating with them as the finish and that they will show just as much finish inside the blue line as will Port Colborne. Remember, Bruce won't be as lucky in the second game and it is reasonable to presume Laurie Gibson got a bad game out of his system and will be back to form. The smart ice surface still favor the Flyers to some extent.

Simcoe will likely be the opposition of the Belleville "Redmen" in the next round of the Intermediate "B" playdowns in the O.H.A. This team took Acton 4-3 in Galt on Tuesday night and the second game of the series will be played in Brantford on Friday night. The series will start early next week and if the "Redmen" win will have to play three games in the week to keep up with the schedule due to the layoff this week. Eddie Thomas has the speed over nightly and the team is perfecting their passing play and brushing up on their condition. The team is free of injuries and will be hard to take be it either Acton or Simcoe. The winner of this round should go into the semi-finals of the playdowns. It would be nice to have two O.H.A. titles brought to the community in one year. The team piloted by Eddie Thomas no-one has the possibility of that little thing.

B-Ticlin service will be supplied by The Ontario Intelligencer on the Port Colborne-Flyers game in Port Colborne tonight. The period scores will be given and the first bulletins should be in the office-by nine-fifteen. Phone 3-3 for the score.

More Dafoe History

In the year 1866 a number of Ina Gillette, died at Albion, Mich., farmers and their families came and S Harvey, who after having from the lowlands to New York lived in the west, married E. Tweed.

then New Amsterdam. They were either Flemish or Dutch. Among them, were Abraham and Jacob De Voe now known as Dafoe.

This information is to be found in the parliament library at Ottawa. These men were the forefathers of the numerous Dafoes and DaFoes scattered over the continent, one hundred and twenty-five years passed to the time of the American revolution. At that time "The Kings Rangers", a battalion recruited in the Dutch settlements along the Hudson included a considerable number of men of this name. After the war their families came to Canada and began the slow ascent the forests of Ontario.

There is on file in the Crown Lands Department at Toronto the old United Empire list, the names of those who received grants of land. The Order in Council ordering the making of this list was passed at Quebec, Nov. 9th, 1789. Lieut Dorchester Governor, and he gave the order "To put a short of honor on the United Empire had adhered to the unity of the Empire and since the Royal Standard in America before the treaty of Separation in 1783." The following is a list of those who received grants:

Abraham Dafoe, Corporal (King's Rangers, in Fredericksburgh; Daniel Dafoe, Soldier King's Rangers; in Fredericksburgh; John Dafoe, Soldier King's Rangers, in Fredericksburgh; Daniel Dafoe, Private 1st Battalion Regiment of New York in Eastern District.

Supplementary List

Widow Dafoe and one son; Abraham Dafoe, Jr., King's Rangers; Jacob Dafoe, Soldier King's Rangers; Michael Dafoe, King's Rangers; William Dafoe, King's Rangers.

It has been conclusively established that the first Abraham was the father of John Dafoe and Abraham Michael, John, Conradt, Daniel, George and Jacob. These all brothers lived to a great age some of them being over a century old.

These facts are from the pen of John W. Dafoe of Winnipeg, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, who is grandson of Samuel Dafoe who lived at Zion's Hill, Thurlow and who was a son of Daniel Dafoe. Other children of Samuel Dafoe were besides Calvin, 1 Mrs. Margaret Gilbert who died at Prescott Ont. in 1914, 2 Mrs. Simpson who died and died at Zion's Hill, 3 Jacob Dafoe, M.D., died at Belleville, Mich., 4 Edward Dafoe, M.D., died at Chatham, Mich., 4 George Dafoe, died at Albion, Mich., and 5 Harvey, who after having lived in the west, married E. Tweed.

John W. Dafoe had seven children, two sons of whom served their King and Country in the World War.

There has been preserved an old subscription list of the township of Fredericksburg for the year 1808 and on this list are to be found the names of Abraham Dafoe, 180 acres land; George Dafoe, 180 acres land; Jacob Dafoe, 313 acres land; Daniel Dafoe, 260 acres land.

In a former letter was mentioned the name Caleb Dafoe whose father was Michael Dafoe and whose several children were as follows:

Michael Dafoe's children:
1 John, married Sills.
2 William.
3 Daniel, m. Polly Embury.
4 Michael, m. S. Ostorman.
5 Betsy, m. Annie Vanorman.
6 Abram, m. Windover.
7 Jacob, m. Vanorman.
8 Caleb, m. Lacey Sharpe.
9 Mary, m. Manuel Northrop.
10 Rachael, m. Jacob Vanzandt.
11 Elizabeth, m. Joshua Miller, Centenon.

Dr. A. N. Dafoe of Calladar is descended from Michael (wife, S. Osterman) son of Michael and the foregoing table. His father being Jno. Wm. Dafoe (wife, Ruth Vandusen) of Madoc, and being one of a large family.

Another son of Michael (son of Michael) was Manuel Dafoe of Trenton who married Melissa Maxwell and whose family was 1 Josiah, 2 Annie who married Rev. J. Herbert Dafoe (Norwood) deceased from another line, 3 Jessie about twenty years ago was stationed at Bayside, Shiloh, 4 Isaac, 5 Courtland, 6 Allen, 4 Ethel.

The majority of the Dafoes of Sidney and Thurlow are descendents of Caleb son of Michael, whose wife was Lacey Sharpe and whose family was:

1 Hiram, wife Catharine Scott, children, Annie, Harvey, William, Howard of Sidney and Frank of Madoc.

2 Robert, wife Louisa Melvin, children, Orrin, Ella, Nellie.

3 Henry, wife Isabelle Pritt (daughter of A. Faulkner), children were Maynard, wife N. Scott, children, Aleda Reddick, Trenton, Zoe Whelan, Toronto, Eric of Ottawa who has 3 sons, John, Robert, William, also four daughters.

Ambrose C. Dafoe, of Belleville, second son of Henry is the only survivor of his family, wife L. McCarthy, children, William Fraser of Madoc, and Lorella and Addaze.

4 Wesley of Belleville, married M. McCrary, children, Ada and Florence.

5 James, married E. Jones, children, William of Belleville, Thomas in New York State, May, Oliver Harry, Nellie, Eddie (died), of Thurlow.

6 Amon married L. Perry, children, Albert of Belleville, Estelle, Gertrude and Bertie residing in Toronto.

7 Nancy, married S. Bine of Sidney, living at the age of 85, children, Perry of Frankford, Lena Dafoe, Emma, Elva and Raymond.

8 James, married P. Scott of Sidney, children, Charles of Frankford, Ella, Nell, Hills wife of Joshua Dafoe, Trenton and Ida Foster.

9 Almira, married A. Playter, children, Bessie and Louie.

This is only a partial list but the family is very numerous and scattered widely over the continent.

A. C. Dafoe, L. E. Dafoe.

Board Room Gossip
as supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The consistent rise in base metal prices is responsible for the tremendous advance in the class of security, although Noranda appears to be behind the rest of the group. It is estimated that this company at the present time is earning between $6 and $7 a share and the inability of the security to make more rapid progress on the upside is attributed in some quarters to the fact that a block of the stock is under liquidation.

The annual report of Noranda is expected to be made public early next week. Estimates are that it will show around $4 a share for 1936. Once the report is out of the way, better things are expected of the security.

The "squeeze" is another group that has been exceptionally active and strong. In the case of Hardrock, a good deal of the demand is emanating from London investment quarters and some of the most conservative quarters on the other side are partial to Canadian oil Paper. In the case of the newsprint stocks, the buying is being put down to the conviction that 1938 will witness a price for newsprint that will enable the majority of producers to show satisfactory earnings on the extended capital.

Bulls on the construction stocks point out that the Government Home Improvement Plan has not yet started the great volume of construction; but it is being pointed out also that the terms of the plan are generally slow in starting. Another factor in the situation is that interest rates will go up if so, that would be another incentive to get builders to go ahead and get their contracts signed before costs got a lift from higher rates.

British American Oil

A considerable amount of investment selling has been going on in British American Oil during the last little time, but this has been well absorbed on the theory that it is within striking distance of its high.

It is the opinion of some that in 1936 British American Oil's volume of sales in all divisions exceeded the previous record set in 1929. Because of the uncertainty as to whether the company will consolidate the earnings of the United States crude oil subsidiary, the setting of last year's results is practical. It is understood that the gains in the refining operations were somewhat smaller than in 1935 because of increased charges for taxes and lower tariffs. However, including the United States crude subsidiary would more than offset those lower returns from refining and materially higher earnings than the 1935 profit of $1.10 a share.

A Stock That Continues to Sell On Its Own Merits—Dominion Stores

Continuance of good times, will tackle the problem of unemployment in Canada I.e. to show satisfactory earnings on its stock. Some of the experienced judges of values believe this stock is selling out of line with its merits. Comparison is made with other issues which have not yet discounted 1937 results but show balance sheets are not nearly as strong.

Ten Per Cent Stock Split Up By Simpsons Directors

On the basis of 1936 earnings equities are being generously allotted. Simpsons, Ltd., directors on March 1 declared a dividend of 10 per cent. in the shape of a stock distribution. The "rights" of Price Brothers continue to sell at around $30. Important London interests have been buying General Steel Wares common and preferred lately. Montreal Power paid dividends in 1936 amounting to $25,400,000; the highest in history or more than twice the total dividends paid in ten years ago.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, March 11—(CP)—Industrial stocks drifted downward in moderate trading and new showed losses in points on Toronto exchange today. Consolidated Smelters at 94 was off 3 1-3 points and Nickel at 71 1-3 had a point decline. Other issues showing losses of a point or more included Brazilian Traction, Steel of Canada, Consumers, Canadian Car pfd. and Weston pfd.)

Base oils were heavy with the rest of the list and liquors steady. Ford A and C.P.R. dropped fractions. A few strong spots were shown, including National Grocers Common, United Steel, the Alsike issues and the implements excepting Cockshutt Plow displayed improvement.

TORONTO MINERTS

Toronto, March 11 (CP)—A soft metal tone was displayed by all mining section groups on Toronto Exchange with selling centred in advance in the gold group. Wednesday's close. Dome, O'Brien, Kirkland Lake, Gold Shore and others, were firmer while the selling on weak tones occurred in other sections including Bidgood-Kirkland, Macassa, Canadian Malartic, Base Metals, Preston and Bankfield.

Base metals were also new with Sudbury Basin, Pend Oreille, Noranda and Hudson Bay lower and Nickel, Consolidated Mining-Smelting and some of the cheaper issues held steady. Oxalis dropped about 19 cents.

WALL STREET

New York, March 11—(AP) — Stocks lost some of their buoyancy in today's market along with commodities.

While strength was still displayed by selected issues, profit-selling cut down a number of gains, notably coppers, oils and aircrafts.

An early weakness in Chrysler, as strike complications continued for this company, tended to chill buying sentiment.

Among Dominion stocks, Canadian Pacific experienced a moderate setback while Dome Mines, International Nickel and Dominion Tar preferred were steady to a trifle higher. On the curb, Lake Shore gained a point while Consumers Gas, Government bonds were quiet. Canadian dollars closed even at par.

Shares in demand most of the time in the first hour up to 1 point or more included Goodyear, Goodrich U.S. Rubber, Firestone, Montgomery Ward, Republic and Ludlum

PLAN GAME RESERVE IN NORTH HASTINGS

Tentative plans are being made for the formation of a Crown Game Preserve in the northern part of Hastings County, Game and Fisheries Inspector J. McAdie stated today. "This is being done with a view to stopping the extensive raids that are being made by the beaver colonies. While we have stopped this practice to some extent there is still a lot of it being done," Inspector McAdie said. "The forming of the Preserve will place it out of bounds for everyone and consequently will, and make trespassers liable to arrest."

EXCISE OFFICER IS TRANSFERRED

Mr. W. E. Reed of the Excise Staff, Corbyville, has been transferred to the Port of Customs, Alwave, Mr. Reed succeeded Mr. W. R. Smallbone, of Oshawa, who will take up permanent residence in Belleville this week with his family.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, March 11—Local produce markets were mainly steady today. Eggs were firm, while trade imported in butter, cheese potatoes, poultry, or eggs was in the retail trade on small lots. Fresh receipts of eggs in the city in carlots or l.c.l. lots, were quoted 1-2c stronger. Receipts were 1,143 cases of eggs, 1,806 boxes of butter and 7 boxes of cheese, with one truck arrivals.

There were no sales at the Canadian Produce Exchange. Butter was quoted there at the close at 34 to 34 1-2 for 3-4 for quarters on inspection or western regraded and 25 1-2 to 25 3-4 for creamery. 25 1-2 to 25 for the open market prices No. 1 in carlots or l.c.l. lots. Small lots of local trade were being offered by jobbers at 26 1-2 to 27c for solids and 27c to 27 1-2 for prints.

Eggs in the market graded shipments in carlots or l.c.l. lots were quoted as follows: large, 19 1-2c to 20c for A-medium, and 18c to 18c for A-pullets. The domestic trade was quoting current prices of 21 1-2 to 22c for A- large, 20 1-2c to 21c for A-medium, and 19 1-2c to 20c for A-pullets.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, March 11—(CP)—Lack of speculative buying sent prices 1-2 to 1 cent higher in early trading on the Winnipeg grain exchange today. Heavy profit-taking cut the gains to 1-8 cent.

At mid-session May wheat was selling at $1.32 5-8 to 32 1-4, July $1.29 1-2 to 29 3-4 and October $1.29 1-2 to 29 3-4.

Liverpool closed 3-8d higher to 1-4d lower.

Livestock

Toronto, March 11—(CP)—Cattle receipts were cleaned up at steady prices on the Toronto Livestock market today. Calves and hogs were at previous levels while there was no activity on the sheep and lamb division.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch included: cattle 300; calves 90; hogs 326; sheep and lambs, none.

Small lots of weighty steers graded between $6.25 and -7.85. Good bulk of steers, heifers and cows brought $6.25 to $6.50 with common quality cow as $5. Butcher cows ranged from $3 to $5. A few light bulls sold up to $4.50.

Choice veal calves were from $9 to $9.50; common downward to $3.

Off-truck hogs closed steady at $9.10 to $9.25. Rail grades were quoted on a delivered basis of $10.75 to $11.

Picton, March 11—(Special)— A sad fatality occurred at his home Cherry Valley N. R. No. 1, on Tuesday afternoon, March 9th, when William John Johnson, 58 year old farmer passed from a load of hay which he was loading in his barn, falling to the barn floor and fracturing his skull. He was removed to the local hospital, where death occurred on Tuesday night. The deceased was born in Ameliasburgh, Ernestown, and a Salvation Army, and the funeral service was conducted at his late residence Thursday afternoon, March 11, by Captain Hunter. Interment was made in Glenwood cemetery.

TEN YEAR TERM GIVEN HOLDER

Man Who Went Blind After Arrest Called Society Menace

Brantford, Ont., March 11—(CP) Herbert Holland, blind man termed by Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey "a menace to society" was sentenced today to 10 years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Holder pleaded guilty Tuesday to "shooting with intent to injure" a Hamilton taxi driver several years ago. The charge had been reduced from "shooting with intent to kill" on which Holland pleaded not guilty. "Such a crime would mean a life term," said Justice Jeffrey, "but you have pleaded guilty and counsel has read to the court. He escaped to United States after shooting the taxi driver who had brought him here from Hamilton, served time in a Georgia penitentiary, and escaped when previously brought back for trial on the shooting charge.

Dogs Meet Children Daily at Schools

People living in the vicinity of Queen Victoria School are treated to a novel sight twice daily. Eight dogs of various breeds and sizes converge from various parts of the surrounding district at the sound of the school bell. The dogs are great favorites with the children and sit among them through the hour of class. Every day at the sound of the recess bell they can be seen dashing for the school doors to romp with their playmates. But yesterday a row became a fight and two played tut and cut of the children.

Principal C. A. Wilkin told Police Sergt. Scott who investigated the affair that the dogs were not vicious. "While they are a nuisance in a way, we do not mind them playing with the children. But accidents may happen, and we would like the owners of the dogs to see that they do not molest the children again."

TREE LIMB STRIKES BREAKS MAN'S NECK

Kingston, Ont., March 11—(CP) —Clarence South, 24, was killed at Robert Kendrick of Sharp's Corners, about 25 miles from here, received serious injuries when he was struck by the limb of a tree while working in the woods about two miles east of Bellrin yesterday.

He was rushed to the Kingston General Hospital in an ambulance and X-ray showed a broken neck. He was conscious when taken to hospital, but his spine was paralyzed.

The young man is unconscious.

SMALL BABY DIES

St. Thomas, Ont., March 11 (CP)—Jerry McQuillan, who weighed only 3¾ ounces at birth Nov. 16, 1936, is dead at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd McCallum, Lyons. The lad, cared for with great tenderness, had been doing well, having reached a weight of approximately 7 pounds. He died suddenly yesterday and a second baby developed into pneumonia and caused his death on Wednesday.

Thursday Market

Thursday morning shoppers found little variety to choose from at the city market, today, owing to the few scattered vendors offered produce for sale. Eggs were the most plentiful with prices remaining at last week's level and those of the week end. Graded lots were offered at twenty cents the dozen, with "A" selects demanding 23 cents. Potatoes remained unchanged in price, vendors offering their stock at $1.60 for ninety pound lots. Pecks were quoted at thirty-five cents. Pork, butter and hinds were quoted at twelve and fourteen cents per pound. Winter caught pike was offered at ten cents a pound. Yellow onions no fresh maple syrup has appeared on the market, although farmers predict the first new stock at the beginning of the week.

BOYS' INGENUITY INVENT NEW GAME

Boys of this city reached a new height in ingenuity during the past several days and have created a new game, which promises to be popular in coolies and snowless communities to play this winter.

In spite of the lack of a suitable surface, hockey is being played on the streets and sidewalks in the district of Charles Street—played on the sidewalks—with improvised sticks and using a baseball as a "puck". Both young and old, male and spirited plays are observed.

14 SEEK LODGING

"There must be a convention of the hobos being held somewhere," police officials stated this morning, following the housing of fourteen transients in the cell block at the police station last night. This number constitutes one of the largest contingents of knights of the road to seek lodging at the local station.

KIDNAPPED AT POINT OF A GUN

Peter Kroll Taken From Oshawa But Released Near Toronto

Oshawa, Ont., March 11—(CP) —Peter Kroll, 24, of this city, thought he might immediately notify police early today kidnapped. Peter Kroll early today kidnapped. Peter Kroll at the point of a gun and drove him in their car to West Hill, 20 miles towards Toronto where they released him an hour later. Mr. Kroll was on his way from work when he saw the four men robbing the Ukrainian Co-operative store.

Kroll walked back to Oshawa, and told police his story. Police found robbers taking a safe out the back door of the store and immediately one of the men shoved a gun in my ribs and said, 'Keep quiet and you won't get hurt,' Kroll said. The safe was found later in the Don Valley near Toronto.

STORY OF IRISH TOLD AT LODGE

Rev. Dr. James Semple of Bridge Street United Church was the guest speaker at the Lodge regular meeting on Wednesday evening. His theme was Ireland and the Irish people. The address was illustrated by numerous slides illustrative of the character of the people and the Emerald Isle. In honor of the anniversary of St. Patrick's Day the Irish program had been arranged. A vote of thanks was tendered Dr. Semple by the members.

"Maid of Salem"

Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray, the romantic pair of "The Gilded Lily" and "A Man Without Home" are teamed together again in "Maid of Salem", romance of a Puritan maiden and a Virginia cavalier, at the Belle tonight and Friday, matinee and evening.

"Maid of Salem" was produced and directed by Frank Lloyd, three-time winner of the Academy Award. It boasts a cast of Hollywood's most brilliant feature and character players, which includes Gale Sondergaard, Bonita Granville, the child star of "These Three"; Edward Ellis, Bennie Bartlett, Virginia Weidler, Beulah Bondi, Louise Dresser, E. E. Clive and Donald Meek.

Miss Colbert plays the role of Barbara Clarke, a beautiful Salem girl, who runs and falls in love with MacMurray, a fugitive cavalier who hides near the town just before the witchcraft days of 1692 breaks out. After some meetings in the woods, where she had been accosted by a handsome stranger, MacMurray returns to Virginia. Then Miss Colbert's dreams of romance and hysteria breaks out and Miss Colbert is placed on trial as a witch. She and MacMurray are believed to be "in league with the devil."

The testimony of children that they had seen her dancing in the woods with the handsome stranger, and the fact that she was seen dancing alone is accepted as evidence that she is bewitched and she is condemned to die. It is during climax that Colbert is saved from death when the whole witchcraft craze is suddenly ended by having a thoroughly bewildered populace horrified by the atrocities that were perpetrated in its wake.

The story of the Salem witchcraft had long been regarded by Lloyd as ideal material for a motion picture, but he did not make it before, he explains, because he did not think that an actress was available who could carry the role adequately. After he directed Miss Colbert in "Under Two Flags" however, he felt that he found the best ever, he felt that he found the best ever, he felt that he found the best ever

How William Lost to Win

By H. Louis Raybold

Cordie Strickland, her father, Billy Hammond, and Jimmy Cross sat on the afterdeck of the City of Miami, which a few hours they would dock at Tampa.

Suddenly Jimmy chuckled and repeated the conversation where, it had dropped. "Why, William here, blocked strategist, couldn't do a darn work to keep from starving!" Billy finished. "Can 'ii!" he said. Jimmy leant one as if suddenly inspired. "Why, I'll bet an even thousand right now that you can't leave this boat with a fiver in your pocket and land in New York by four own efforts!"

Billy hesitated and his lips tightened. It was a risky kick to get him out of the way and leave him a free hand with Cordie. Yet, before her, he couldn't back down. "Well, I'll take you up," he said shortly.

These preliminaries explain Mr. William Shakelford's presence, the following day, in a Tampa employment agency.

"What this?" asked the head of the agency, and handed Billy a letter.

"Please send another man to Bright Orange Ranch—one with backbone this time.

HARRY JACKSON."

Billy looked up. "Why the backbone?" he inquired.

"Well," said the other frankly, "there seems to be a grudge against the Bright Orange fruit ranch. Whoever it is the neighbors have a grudge against him and are trying to drive them off—the man and his daughter—but the two of them's plenty stout, stand to me, sir."

"I'll take it," said Billy.

Three o clump later he reached the ranch. As he stepped on the veranda a grey-haired man appeared in the doorway, at his side a young girl who Billy decided offhand was one of the prettiest he had ever seen.

"I'm from the agency," said Billy.

Jackson looked puzzled and the low voice of the girl broke in. "We want a laborer, dad," she said.

At this moment a huge car drove up and a stocky man climbed down. "Take up my offer yet, Jackson?" he called.

"No, I won't!" returned Jackson flatly. "Friend to hang on—in spite of all that's happened." And there was a peculiar emphasis to his last words.

Jackson turned to Billy. "Come in," he said. "You might as well have a try at it."

After supper Billy learned how Jackson had sunk his all in the litle ranch and was on the way to making a real thing of it when some group of real estate men decided they needed his property.

"The latest stunt is night riding to intimidate us," said Jackson.

"Night riders!" repeated Billy, thoughtfully. "We ought to be able to manage them. Let me see—tell me about it first and then—well, I'd like to get off a telegram."

With the sending of the telegram Billy lost his temper, but in the light of the adventure which seemed ahead of him he regarded the loss as trivial.

"Dear Jimmy—you win. Have given up attempt to beat it to New York. Meet me at Grenoble Hotel. Good Bills game up my sleeve. Need your help.

"BILLY."

The night riders came at midnight. Billy and Jimmy and Harry Jackson worked feverishly from the moment dusk fell, scarcely, in fact, were the perpetrators completed when they heard the thud of distant hoofs.

Presently in the distance appeared eight wildly attired figures, who filed slowly past Billy's hiding place by an outlying tree. When the last one was by Billy pulled a rope, which, suspended over a high branch, dragged across a wire behind them, a wire that was barbed and charged.

A startled cath broke from one of the horsemen.

"You're trapped!" yelled Jackson out of the darkness.

"You're riding on dynamite!" yelled Billy. "Prove it, Jim!"

Jim, some distance away, threw a switch. With a deafening roar the dirt flew in a cloud and the horses became almost unmanageable.

"Diamond, one at a time!" demanded Jackson.

"Totally unprepared for the reception they had received, the men saw nothing for it but obedience.

Hands up, on the veranda, their captors regarded them.

"You look d—n silly," said William. "We intend to march you into town in time morning, unless—" he spoke directly to the man he had heard make the offer to Jackson the day of his arrival—"you prefer to offer Jackson what he paid for the place and a good-sized bonus to boot to pay him for all this annoyance."

The choice the man made was the only one possible.

As for Cordie she heard all about the affair from Jimmy and, although Jimmy's arm was about her at the time and his ring sparkled on her finger, there was a wistful look in her eyes, as perhaps there always is when a woman hears that an old-time admirer has transferred his admiration.

"Yes," Jimmy was saying, "Billy is going north with them. It is plain to see that Shirley worships the ground he walks on and—well, believe me, old Bill's in luck."

RESCUERS SEEK 15 TRAPPED COAL MINERS

Miners May Have Built Shelter Against Fumes; Hope Held Some Safe

Three Bodies Recovered at Macbeth Mine at Logan, W. Virginia

HOURS OF WORK AHEAD

Rescuers Have 1300 Feet to go Before Reaching Scene of Explosion

Logan, W. Va., Mar. 12 (AP)—The explosion shattered Macbeth mine gave up its third body today and rescue crews doggedly digging through debris were virtually certain fifteen other trapped men were dead.

The seared body of Floyd Fields, 30-year-old section boss was brought to the surface today. He had gone to work in the mine only three days before. He had a wife and three children.

A grimy rescue worker who came to the surface with the body reported to the crowd of anxious watchers at the pit mouth:

"If we do not run into any more big falls, we may reach the place where the others are in about three hours.

Rescuers Work Way.

"The roof is falling badly but the going has been easier since early morning. We think we are about 1,200 feet from the explosion area now after having travelled 1,000 feet."

The blast in the mine operated by the Hutchinson Coal Company, eight miles over a rugged road west of Logan, occurred early last night.

The bodies of Joe Fry, motorman and Tony McCoy, mine boss, were discovered before midnight.

Then the belt of cutting through piled debris and dodging falling rocks in the interior of the explosion area. Mine inspectors said the explosion was undoubtedly the result of a mine and a load from the face of the 60-foot slope which runs down to the mine mouth.

Barricades Possible.

What the crews led by Inspectors J. B. Hansford and R. W. Waldron would find on the inside of the mine, said some of the men might (Continued on Page 9)

WINDSOR NOT INCLUDED IN THE CIVIL LIST

London, March 12.—(CP)—Havas News Agency said yesterday it was reliably learned the Duke of Windsor will not be included in the Civil List, apparently confirming reports the former King's future income will be supplied by the Royal family.

King George VI's message to parliament regarding the funds to be voted for the Royal House's support will be read in the House of Commons next Tuesday by Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain. The message probably will be presented Wednesday or Thursday.

WM. MUNCHUK TO HANG MAY 31

First Capital Punishment in Lincoln County in 60 Years

St. Catharines, Ont., March 12.—(CP)—William Munchuk, who sentenced today to be hanged May 31 for the murder of Mrs. Amy Seabright in a Niagara-on-the-Lake dispute.

The jury debated 90 minutes.

Munchuk was charged with slaying Mrs. Seabright last June 8. He is awaiting a 10 year sentence for the slaying of John Seabright on a vehicle trial Mrs. Munchuk was acquitted.

Munchuk betrayed no emotion as he was flanked by guards and Mr. Justice G. W. McFarland pronounced sentence.

Retired Task

"It has been a difficult and distressing task," Mr. Justice McFarland said. "I feel that your verdict is a perfectly proper one on the evidence submitted. I thank you on behalf of your country."

Spectators sat in silence as they heard the prisoner sentenced to death.

The sentence will be the first capital punishment in Lincoln County in 60 years. There has not been a hanging in St. Catharines.

Mr. Justice McFarland told the jury today that if they convicted Munchuk killed Mrs. Seabright they could not base their conclusion by bringing in a verdict of manslaughter. Counsel, Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., Toronto had made the same remark to the jury last night and during the trial. There was nothing done by the woman to justify this unprovoked attack."

SEA SUPREMACY IS SEEN AS IDEAL ON NAVAL PLANS

Three New Buildings to be Built According to Sir S. Hoare

SINGAPORE BASE

Fleet Air Arm Will Be Increased to 279 Units

London, Mar. 12 (CP)—A navy competent to guard British interests in two hemispheres—a return to the days of supremacy on the seas—was foreseen today in the vast 1937 naval building program described by Sir Samuel Hoare.

At a cost of $105,665,000 the navy plans to lay down 80 new ships under the 1936 estimates, the First Lord of the Admiralty told the House of Commons yesterday. Naval experts declared this building would make the navy the most powerful in the world.

Shipping Tonnage.

Latest available naval figures show Britain has 1,047,000 tons of ships afloat comprised of 348 craft afloat or building, not including the eight new ships now planned. The United States, also a number of new warships included in its 400, has 1,441,-505 tons afloat or on the shipways.

Prime Ministers A and B asked yesterday, the estimates call for 15 battleships, 5 aircraft carriers, 5 cruisers, 32 destroyers, 24 submarines and 279 naval aircraft of all types as well as an increase of 11,000 in naval personnel to bring the total strength to 112,000.

HOLD REHEARSALS FOR CORONATION

The Earl Marshal Will Have All Functions Timed to the Exact Second

London, March 12.—(CP)—Preparations for the rehearsals of the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey are being made by the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl Marshal.

There will probably be a number of rehearsals in different sections in order to ensure that everything will be carried out to perfection. Each rehearsal will be followed by a complete rehearsal but in ordinary attire, and finally there will be a rehearsal in which participants will wear full dress giving some idea of the pageantry which will be seen at the Coronation.

There is no definite official information as to those who will take part in the rehearsals, but it is probable that Lady Mary Rachel Cavendish, daughter of the Duke of Norfolk, will represent the Queen, as any rale in the full dress rehearsal.

Lady Mary is on her way home from Australia and it is said the London ready for the rehearsals, which will begin as soon as the arrangements in the Abbey are complete.

United States Protests German Press Attacks

State Department Wants to Know as Soon as Possible The Reich's Attitude to The Prot est

Berlin, Mar. 13 (AP)—The United States, it was learned today, will seek a quick response from Germany to the strong protest Ambassador William E. Dodd was ordered to make against recent anti-American attacks in the German press.

The German foreign office agreed to receive the United States envoy at 5:30 p.m. (11 a.m. EST) but the embassy, it was learned, was making an effort to have the time of the audience advanced.

The effort to set forward the interview with Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Foreign Minister, was said to have been made so the United States State Department may know as soon as possible the Reich's attitude to the protest.

The ambassador, it was believed, might bolster his protest note even with clippings of the current press but with a considerable file showing what long before the German incident prominent United States citizens had been subjects of unfavorable comment because of their Jewish blood.

The time for the interview was set after the ambassador, acting on direct orders from Washington, had attempted vainly to contact von Neurath yesterday.

The envoy was understood, would hand von Neurath striking examples of the attacks in which the German press had extended their castigation of Mayor Fiorello H. La-Guardia of New York to include the State Department and the entire United States.

(LaGuardia on March 2 had suspended from a group of Jewish women the New York World Fair in 1939 should place a figure of Hitler there "because he is menacing the peace of the world" in a "hall of horrors".

(The State Department expressed regret that such a statement should have been made after a formal protest from Germany.)

Lloyd George States 'Foodfront' Vulnerable

More Action Needed to Provide Adequate Food Supplies in Case of War

WEAKEST LINK

London, Mar. 13 (CP)—For forty minutes, world Lloyd George lifted out of today to his old arena of parliament. He appealed for the black arrea of distress. He urged a more vigorous, more concerted plan to deal with recurring waves of unemployment.

Most of all he pressed for more workers on the land. He charged that while the government was spending £1,500,000,000 on rearmament for war it was neglecting the weakest link in the chain of defence—the feed front which almost brought Britain down in the Great War.

The veteran of many parliaments spoke from the front opposition bench. His animated gestures lent emphasis to points after point. But it was evident that the passing years had taken their toll. His old magnetism had departed. His voice at times scarcely carried across the House.

Audience Is Held.

Yet he held his audience from the first word to the last.

He dismissed government plans for the distressed areas as inadequate. Moreover, these plans, he argued, they induced only one quarter of unemployment.

What plan, he demanded, had the government to meet the situation when the £1,500,000,000 was all spent on armaments and unemployment started to rise again, doubling it might be, the £400,000 mark.

NEW DESTROYERS SAIL FOR CANADA

Will Be Met at Barbados by Other Part of Canadian Fleet

Portsmouth, England, March 12—(CP Cable)—The Royal Canadian navy's destroyers, the Saguenay and the St. Laurent, sailed today for Barbados where they are due March 24.

In West Indian waters they will be met by the destroyers Skeena and Saguenay, whereupon the flotilla will go to Canada, the Skeena and Saguenay are at present joining the Canadian squadrons of the America and West Indies squadron of the Royal navy.

The Fraser and the St. Laurent are new destroyers recently launched from the Clydebank shipyards at a cost of $2,000,000. They were formerly the Canadian destroyers Oyzmi.

For the Atlantic crossing they are under the command of Captain V. O. Brodeur in the Fraser.

PLANES SEARCH SIR CHARLES ROSS

British Inventor is Reported Safe at St. Petersburg, Fla.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 12 (AP)—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith reported today the safe arrival of Sir Charles Ross, British inventor and pilot, at Albert Lindley Field here from Pasco-a-Grill, Fla.

Two planes had started a hunt for his craft. Horace Roberts, fishing from a cabin launch, first sighted Sir Charles Ross who was the noted radio inventor and former adviser to the Canadian Government on small arms.

Sir Charles—inventor of the Ross automatic rifle used by the Canadian militia for a time—was out three days overdue at Key West, his starboard. Mary McKay said early today in asking coast guard aid.

But McKay said the Briton left Pasco-a-Grill Saturday in his cabin launch "Seamew" accompanied by Captain Horace Roberts, the boat's owner.

Mrs. McKay said Sir Charles is an expert navigator and there was no storms in the Eastern Gulf since he sailed. She said he was due at Key West not later than Tuesday and had said he would wire her immediately after his arrival.

H. NICHOLSON IS DEAD AT KINGSTON

Played Senior O. H. A. And Outfielder in Central League

Kingston, Ont., March 13.—(CP)—Harold Nicholson, well-known local hockey and baseball player died in the Kingston General Hospital following long illness from sinus trouble and subsequent operations.

Nicholson played with Kingston Frontenacs in 1912 when they went to the finals with Toronto Varsity for Senior O.H.A. championship. He played with Kingston Forest Lafamme, Bill Hyland, Rankin Bricker, Frank Poynton, Meeking, Tom Gordon and others. He played on defence though only weighing 135 pounds. He was a team mate Dick in goal, Mel Hyland, "Soupy" Campbell, Bert Brown, Gordon Boyer, "Shawnee" Reid and the late George St. Richardson. He played for Kingston Intermediate as late as 1919, when the team won the O.H.A. championship.

As a centre fielder Nicholson was prominent in baseball circles in Kingston for more than 20 years, finally retiring about ten years ago after several years with the local team in the Central Ontario Baseball League.

GEORGE KELLAR DROWNS CROSSING ICE NEAR TRENTON

Some Time Before Man is Identified as He Was Alone at Time

BODY RECOVERED

Coroner Dr. J. W. Farley Declares an Inquest Unnecessary

Trenton, March 12.—(Special)—George Kellar, 37, former resident near Cobbordonk's Hill in Prince Edward County, was drowned in the Bay of Quinte shortly after six o'clock on Thursday evening and his body was recovered today after one and one quarter miles from Trenton in 30 feet of water. The body was held close to the bottom by a weed bed in that vicinity and it took Fire Chief A. Parish, coroner Dr. Trenton and district, investigated and the facts before explained, declared an inquest unnecessary. The body was removed to the undertaking parlor in Trenton, where it will be prepared for burial.

Family Identifies Body

Trenton Police under the direction of Chief William Bain and Sergeants Wm. Hodgson and Frederick the search for the body and broke the news to the family after the man had been definitely identified. The search was carried out until a late hour on Thursday evening and only discontinued, when the safety of the men engaged in the work, due to the condition of the ice at the point, where the man is believed to have drowned. The first indications that there was trouble was shortly after six o'clock last evening when N. Salisbury, manager of the Trenton Creamery Co. Ltd., company phoned police, that he had

CURLING RINK IS ON SPINACH DIET

Lindsay's Townhall Quartette to Take on Skitch's Rink

Lindsay, Ont., March 13.—(CP)—The Lindsay Townhall Curling quartet under the leadership of Skip Jack of "Popeye the Sailor" for a match here tonight. . . It has been in training on spinach.

The four members of the team are, Jack Pollock, Chief Provincial Magistrate A. E. Gee, Tax Collector and Bill Hall, Secretary Treasurer of the Water Board Gordon Cuthbert.

It was the Water Board Secretary's idea they become spinach eaters. Chief Gee is a spinach eater. Gee who carried the pan through the Police building to the Police Court the Main street today with a pack of spinach under his arm. As the Police Chief, came to the Tax Collector and Bill Hall were in the office for Cuthbert, who was out at the time.

So if the Townhall team wins tonight against Percy Skitch's crack four years Lindsay will be a spinach shortage in Lindsay for 160 other spinach eaters here probably would by the plan.

France However Claims Heavy Casualties Upon Loyalists

HEAVY GUN FIRE

Government Claims Italy Wages 'Undeclared War' on Spain

France Claims Advance

Madrid, March 13 (AP)— While militiamen grimly dug in on Madrid's northeastern front today, the government command started the drive on the capital of 20,000 Italian soldiers had been checked 44 miles from the city.

Paris, Spain, March 12 (AP)—General Franco's legionaires machine-gunned and shelled massed government troops today and bashed their way forward yard by yard into Trijueque, 44 miles northeast of Madrid.

Heavy casualties were believed inflicted on the close formations of Madrid's defenders.

Many prisoners were taken, a communique said, including two Italian Communist officers of a unit it called the "Garibaldi Battalion."

Madrid, March 13 (AP)—Insurgent artillery blasted anew at this beleaguered capital today as government commanders reported their war-fagged "militiamen" were holding an army of 20,000 Italians in check on the northeastern front 44 miles away.

Shells Explode in Street

Shells exploded in the Gran Via, an important thoroughfare, and struck the lower buildings of one section of the city. Several persons were believed hit and scores of the ambulances raced to the shelled area.

On the other hand, 300 insurgents were killed or wounded in southern Spain. It was reported from Andujar, when they attacked Villanueva Del Duque, 30km northeast.

The town of Valencia, meanwhile, prepared a protest to the International Non-Intervention Committee of which Italy is a member, terming the presence of Italian troops a grave violation of the European non-intervention accord.

The government accused Italy of waging an "undeclared war" on Spain.

WANTS STIFFER PENALTIES

FOR VIOLATIONS OF I.D.A.

Ottawa, March 12.—(CP)—A Bill will be introduced in the House of Commons next week to stiffen the penalties for violation of The Lord's Day Act and aimed specifically at Industrial Corporations that operate plants on Sunday.

Notice of the Bill was given on today's order notes and proceedings by H. Brunelle (Lib. Champlain). It is entitled "an act to amend the Lord's Day Act".

Present penalty for violation of The Act is a fine of from $50 to $250. Mr. Brunelle's amendment would add imprisonment among the penalty.

SHOW GOES ON DESPITE DEATH

Marie Tempest Loses Husband Hour Before Curtain Time

London, Mar. 12 (AP)—England's famed comedy actress, Marie Tempest, carried on true to the stage precept, carried on true to the stage tradition last night, playing "Retreat From Folly" despite the death a few hours earlier of her husband and leading man, William Graham Browne.

"The show must go tonight," she said simply, before the curtain rose. "Willie would have liked it."

Until the final curtain, only the trembling of her hands betrayed the unsympathetic consideration of her fellow actors gave the audience word of the tragedy she was concealing behind the sparkling lines of comedy.

At the end of the play, Miss Tempest appeared before the curtain her head pies for funds for a private hospital for actors.

In a low, tremulous voice she recalled the appeal for the sick and visiting members of our profession."

At the last words Miss Tempest sank to her knees, tears glistening in her eyes, as the final curtain fell.

Browne, who played a stage husband opposite his real life wife in "Retreat From Folly" was 67 years old.

Old Age Pension Leader Sentenced One Month For Contempt—Appeal Lodged

Washington, March 12 (AP)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend was sentenced to one month in jail and $100 fine today for contempt of the United States House of Representatives. Townsend said he would appeal the conviction.

The old age pension leader's conviction resulted from his sudden departure from a house committee last summer, while it was in the process of closing on his pension organization. Townsend claimed on his hat and stalked from the committee room.

Subsequently, he was cited by the House, the Federal Grand Jury.

Two of Townsend's aides, John Lee Pierce, Kansas, and Clinton W. Wunder of New York, pleaded guilty in the same contempt charge of which Townsend was convicted but were given suspended sentences after apologizing t othe House.

Mammoth Still is Seized in Toronto

Toronto, March 13.—(CP)—"It is the biggest still yet seized in Toronto," Inspector Lockyer declared when bail was set at $5,000 each and remand made until March 19 for Jack Adams and Maurice Joseph, charged with having and operating a still; and Sam Pizzolo, George Rogers; Jacks A. Dow; Patrick O'Brien and Anthony Georgan, charged with assisting in distilling. With the still were seized 5,000 gallons of alcohol and about 40,000 gallons of mash.

17 per cent Fewer Persons On Relief Lists in February

Dominion Situation is Deferred by Hon. Norman Rogers

Ottawa, March 13 (CP)—"The employment situation is more encouraging than at any time in recent years," Hon. Norman Rogers said last night in issuing a statement on unemployment relief figures for February.

The Dominion totals are very substantially under those of the same month in any of the five preceding years," he declared.

"In comparison with February, 1936, the figures for the centres of the drought areas decreased more than 17 per cent and the total numbers on relief decreased almost 18 per cent.

"The percentage of decrease in the Dominion totals when the drought areas are included, was more than 14 per cent in respect of cases and more than 15 per cent in respect of the total numbers."

MINNIES, THE CAT, TAKES THINGS EASY

Minnie, the city hall cat, friend of the city's great, says philosopher and guardian of the executive portions, is more nightly prowling through the corridors of the building bring terror to the rodent ranks, has grown slightly wearied, perhaps bored in the monotony of her city day-time watching of such small game as mice.

For Minnie, somnolent to the point of extreme ennui as she stirred herself at her accustomed portals on the south side of the city hall building yesterday afternoon declared a moratorium on the whole business.

It came in the shape of a small brown, elf-like form, this little mouse who picked a tentative route from a cranny in the wall, small whiskers a-twitch as it edged from the crevice in the brick. It scuttled across a bit of brown blackened earth from which the new dead roots of ivy protrude. And it ambled, seemingly unconscious, of sudden death—right past the head of the apparently sleeping cat.

Minnie blinked, yawned, gazed for a moment at the tiny brown apparition—and returned to the job of sleeping.

AMERICAN CARS PASS THROUGH CITY

Though the first trickle of cars bearing license plates of United States points has been observed in the city, the first spring caller is yet to be recorded by the local Chamber of Commerce, it was stated today. Motorists from the neighboring Michigan licenses, and one from Ohio were reported as recently seen through the city yesterday by a downtown service station.

GOLD FINCHES ARE OBSERVED IN CITY

"They're gold finches. But they're here much earlier this year than usually observed," declared a local naturalist yesterday in answer to dozens of questions that have been received concerning the appearance of flocks of greyish and yellow marked birds observed on city streets.

Generally they come after the robins, the naturalist said, but this year considering the unusually warm winter experienced over almost the whole continent.

GOOD DEMAND FOR NEW MARKERS

Glazier sizes and bare roads in the district have added impetus to the matter of car license issuing at the office in Belleville lately. Drifting the present week places are being disposed of to new purchasers at the rate of between 30 and twelve license per day.

CATTLE WITH HORNS BRING 1 DOLLAR LESS

Horned cattle will be a rarity in this and other districts of Ontario after May 1, pointed out a district veterinary who attended a meeting that date cattle with horns will bring a smaller price from buyers. According to an announcement issued by the Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers, one dollar less will be paid for cattle over 1,000 pounds in weights, purchased for slaughter. The same ruling will facilitate handling of the animals at shipping and slaughtering points.

GRAIN SHORTAGE IS NOT ACUTE HERE

Whether any particular seed grain shortage will be noted in this immediate district this spring remains to be seen, is the general opinion of seedsmen of the city. Fairly plentiful stocks are on hand, according to one local dealer, although in other sections of the province a shortage is being felt. In Peterboro district farmers have been forced to order barley and oats from the Ottawa Valley and the west to cover seeding requirements, it is reported.

Caution is being given purchasers of western oats owing to the Chance No Factor in Growth Of Great Cities, Says Mr. James

His Travels And Investigations Show That With Certain Conditions Definite Results Follow, He Tells Audience at Engineers' Hall

Mr. G. M. James for an hour was engaging speaker at the Engineers' Hall, Pine Street, this city, last Wednesday afternoon when a capacity audience heard him speak on various topics connected with his recent tour of California.

One of his main themes 'make a strong appeal to town skilled in transportation problems. "Why are the cities of London, Paris and New York the largest in the world? Why is New York larger than Chicago, and why is Toronto larger than Ottawa?" asked Mr. James.

"There is no chance, or mystery connected with the solution," suggested Mr. James as he proceeded clearly that with given specified conditions, definite results will follow as inevitably as cause and effect.

Scores of the most important cities of the world have been visited and studied by Mr. James with the object of discovering their relative importance, and the factors contributing to their greatness. The results of these intimate investigations are both highly interesting and informative.

Several other topics of equal interest were dealt with similarly, especially those relating to the climate, people and productions of California.

"You will never wish to depart from Los Angeles, and its scorn of suburbs if you ever visit that bit of heaven on earth," concluded Mr. James amid the tumultuous applause from a speaker could possibly desire.

Obituary

Late Mrs. Alberta J. Holland (Madoc)

The funeral service for the late Mrs. Alberta J. Holland was conducted Tuesday afternoon by Rev. Kennedy of Madoc, assisted by Rev. H. H. Lackey, Ivanhoe, in Trinity United Church, Madoc. An old familiar hymn, a favorite of hers, "I will sing you a song of that beautiful land. The far away home of the soul", was sung by Mrs. S. Ashley and Mrs. Hicks.

The bearers were nephews, namely Walter Twiddy, deceased; Percy Harry Twiddy, John Chambers, James Holland and Ross Holland. The family have the sympathy of the city or their many friends and acquaintances.

MRS. RACHAEL WALSH (Marysville)

The death occurred at an early hour this Friday morning of Rachael Walsh, widow of the late Michael Walsh, who passed away at the residence of her son, F. X. Walsh, ex warden of Hastings County, Marysville, after an illness of about a month.

Born in Black Rock, N.Y. Mrs. Walsh, who was in her nineties year, resided practically all her life in Thurlow where she was a greatly esteemed and highly respected member of the community and her passing will be mourned by a large circle of friends. She was a devout member of the Holy Name of Mary Catholic Church at Marysville.

The late Mrs. Walsh is survived by two sons, James V. Walsh of Marysville, and Patrick of Prince Albert, Sask., and two sisters, Mrs. Jane Buckley of Chicago and Mrs. Bridget Brennan of Merrill, Mich.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning to the Holy Name of Mary Church, Marysville.

MRS. MELISSA SULLIVAN

Following a brief illness at the home of her son, F. Raymond Sullivan, Thrasher, Ontario Township, the death occurred there early this morning, Friday, March 12, of Mrs. Melissa Sullivan, wife of the late Robert Sullivet. Deceased was in her 77th year.

Born at Latte, Thurlow Township, she was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Latte, and had resided in this district practically all her life where she was well and favorably known to a large and widespread circle of friends.

The late Mrs. Sullivan was a devout member of the Presbyterian Church and had characterized herself by her work among this congregation.

Left to mourn her loss are one son, F. Raymond Sullivan, Thrasher, one daughter, Mrs. L. M. Bacon, of Edmonton, Alta., two brothers, John Latte, of Big Island, Prince Edward County and one sister, Mrs. Wesley Demorest, Demorestville, Prince Edward County.

The funeral will take place on Sunday from the residence of her son, Thurlow.

HERBERT L. PEARSALL

Herbert Leslie Pearsall passed away suddenly at the family residence, Dundas street, late on Thursday, March 11th, and to all who knew him this sudden has brought deep feelings of regret.

The late Mr. Pearsall, who was in his 61st year, was born at Lemonville, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Pearsall.

At an early age he entered telegraphic service and during a lengthy period he had been a despatcher in the service of the Canadian National Railways at Belleville. For thirty years he has been a resident of Belleville. He possessed a charming personality and a friendly disposition and made many friendships. In the discharge of his executing duties as a railway official with the Canadian National Railways he was most efficient and by all officials in the Belleville Station and by his fellow employees he was greatly thought of. His religion he was a faithful member of Bridge Street Methodist Church and a member of the Official Board and fraternally he was a member of Mizpah Lodge, No. A.F. and A.M.; Moira Chapter R.A.M. and Mac-Dalewin Council No. 6.

Private funeral arrangement is made elsewhere in this paper.

POLICE BLOTTER

Complaints that the Warren building on Front Street has been entered and considerable disturbed by vandals has resulted in investigations being made in this particular spot. Last night attempts were made to steal a fuel pump.

Two minor automobile accidents occupied the attention of police yesterday, a rear end collision between two cars on Pinnacle Street yesterday resulted in one car having the radiator grill and two front fenders smashed with the latter sustaining a broken tail pipe. Damages were estimated between these two local residents.

Two ladies, residents of this city were involved in the second collision which occurred shortly after 7 o'clock last night, when one car backed on Bridge Street East blocked into a car proceeding west. Only slight damage resulted from the accident and those were amicably settled between the drivers.

Russia and Communism Subject of Address

Tweed—The second meeting of the Literary Club was held in Tweed United Church on Monday night. Mr. George Lothouse occupied the chair.

Mr. Lothouse gave an excellent address on "Russia and Communism" tracing the history of the vast country from the time of Peter the Great, Czar of Russia. Russia is a vast country, one of the richest in the world. With a population estimated at 130 millions. Peter, the Great welded the Russian tribes together into a strong nation which developed as the decades past. Communism was introduced into Russia by Lenin. His aim is to capture from corporate capitalists control of the State, believing that everything should be held in common. Lenin's father was a director of Education. When he died, his son, then but 16 years of age renounced religion and in the following year dedicated his life to doing away with Czars and oppressive rulers. Plotting failed in the attempt to assassinate the Czar and he fled to Siberia, where he met Trotsky. In 1904 he became leader of the Socialistic party. When Russia withdrew from the war in 1917 Communism was introduced in the revolution which broke out in the Czar's time. Terrible atrocities resulted from this revolution and eventually the entire family of Czar Nicholas was wiped out by the Reds who gained the support of the peasants. Lenin had something to offer them.

Lenin took over the industries and restored order. Now the state controls 90 per cent. of the factories and mines. For a number of years Russia tried to spread her Red doctrines to other countries but now given up this idea and is endeavouring to maintain peace by relations with the outside world.

Mr. T. E. Moffat B.A., principal of Tweed High School, gave a splendid discourse on Germany and Hitlerism.

Mr. Lothouse also gave a brief history of the rise of Hitler to the high position in the affairs of the German nation.

Mr. C. F. Aylsworth B.A., L.P.S. gave a splendid talk on "Italy and Fascism." Quoting passages from a German authority on the subject. This authority said that Italy was more future than France. Fascism represents a new civilization. Mr. Harold Ketcheson and provides the best symbol of what all the masses of the Fascist World need. The people of Italy are primitive and autocratic by nature. Fascism was needed by these people and they are benefited by it. Democracy, this author, is dying and deserves its death because it made the mistake of supposing a crowd could understand and vote. The Government of the Italian people requires just the form of government they have got. Mussolini understands their dreams and need a Mussolini to rule them.

These excellent addresses were interspersed with musical numbers. Mr. Ross Hall played a solo "Rustle of Spring" by Enid Connor; "Little girls' prayer" by Clare Aiken"; by Misses Barbara Barnett, Ruth Hudson, Enid Connor and Marion Tummon.

AGRICULTURAL SOC. TO PROVIDE PRIZES

Members of the Belleville Agricultural Society are encouraged by the success of last year's event to again provide for a like competition in oats at the annual fair this year, it was decided at the hope of Mr. R. H. Ketcheson, secretary.

Eight prize money awards, viz., $14, $12, $10, $8, $6, $4, $3, $1 will be given. Rules of the competition call for exhibition of not less than three bushels. Although no particular district is specified, it is the hope of the Society to show exhibits grown within a fifteen mile radius of the city. The competition is open to any member of the Society.

Last year a total of twelve entries were shown.

POLICE COURT

"Are you ready to go on the road again" Magistrate Butler asked a transient answering a charge of vagrancy in police court this morning. "You bet I am ready" smiled the erring one. "Are your feet alright now" the Cadi queried another knight of the road, who limped on the same charge. "Yep all O. K. now" grinned the unshaven one." "Alright, on your way both of you."

Two men found guilty of consuming liquor in an illegal place were assessed the usual fines and court costs.

George English, charged with the theft of a quantity of honey pleaded not guilty and was remanded for one week to allow the Crown to obtain evidence.

Gordon Stapley, charged with the theft of automobile tires, tools and other articles from the cars of Archie Munns and Daniel Trumbull, pleaded not guilty to both counts and elected to be tried by the Magistrate after claiming he could not afford the services of a lawyer.

Munns testified to the accused borrowing his car for the purpose of drawing wood, and returning the car minus the missing articles. The articles were found in a barn belonging to a relative of the accused man, so testified Detective Fred Isaac.

Relative to the second charge, Trumbull told the court, that accused had borrowed his car for the purpose of attending a funeral in Picton. The car had been driven approximately 97 miles, he said, and was returned to a garage near Trumbull's old shop on Front St. A tire, tube and rim of one of the wheels of the car was missing. A new tire and tube had been offered by relatives of Stapley. An alleged voluntary statement made by accused Stapley was ruled inadmissible as evidence because of absence of the usual warning, by Magistrate Butler. Stapley was remanded for one week in the Canada Hotel to consider admitted evidence.

March 12th Anniversary Belleville's Worst Flood

Two Day Heavy Rain Preceded Rush of Ice Down The Moira

FRONT ST. FLOODED

Merchants Suffered Severe Losses as Water Destroys Merchandise

Gazing at the peaceful waters of the Moira River, residents of this city heaved signs of relief today as they heartened back to the exciting events which happened just one year ago, early this morning and the days immediately following. Put Ol' Man Moira, in one of the greatest floods in the history of this city, overflowed its banks, inundating the lower part of the business section of the city and causing damage to property which amounted in the thousands of dollars.

A torrential downpour of rain lasting for nearly two days honeycombed the ice in the river which was frozen to the bottom. Breaking away at Camilton, four miles north of the city, the ice descended in a roaring torrent, gaining momentum as it swept down on a helpless city.

Partially checked at Lasier's Dam a mile north of the city, the water again gathered impetus. Ice floes swept along the bed of the river carrying everything before them. Water and ice poured through the street about 3 a.m. of March 12. Huge ice cakes pounded their way through the main thoroughfare. Cellars were flooded at the first rush of the flood waters. The area of Front Street from the four corners to the Bay of Quinte was impassable for pedestrians. Business places in this section were under from three to seven feet of water. Guests in the Queen's hotel were trapped in their rooms, and were removed by boats which were pressed into service and firemen wearing rubber boots.

Rescue People With Boats

Willing hands removed people from flooded homes. Boats were rowed up and down streets transferring people and property to places of safety. Business and traffic was stopped on Front Street. Merchants worked frantically to save stocks of merchandise. With presses temporarily out of order the printing of this paper was done in Kingston.

Huge ice cakes, some weighing in the vicinity of a ton jammed Coleman Street. The roar of dynamite was heard above the rush of water, as workmen labored in an effort to free the city of its icy grip. Under relentless pressure of thousands of tons of ice, the footbridge spanning the river, went out, with a rending crash early in the second day.

Lasted Eight Days

For nearly eight days Belleville and its citizenry fought a desperate fight against one of Nature's most ruthless foes. Deeds of heroism were enacted daily by police, firemen and private citizens. Only six fatalities occurred during the flood, and that was caused by exposure to wind, weather and water.

On Thursday, March 19th, at approximately four o'clock in the afternoon, the ice went out and the water lowered to a safe level with all further danger of flood danger ages being over.

The famous flood of 1936 will be long remembered by the residents of this city, as one of the worst natural calamities to fall upon Belleville.

3¼ Inches Rainfall in 24 Hours

What caused the city's disastrous flood which disrupted business and inundated whole city wards just one year ago tomorrow?

The real answer was found through a search of weather records as far back as the year 1900 this morning.

During the 24-hour period just previous to the flood, a total of two and one half inches of rainfall mixed with warm weather over this district, swelling creeks and streams to unprecedented high levels.

No Standard Minimum Wage Will be Fixed for the Province

Quebec to Join Ontario to Prevent Exploitation of Workers

Toronto, March 15—(CP)—Quebec and Ontario have joined hands in a fight to prevent exploitation of workers.

The Ontario legislature last night unanimously voted second reading to a bill to provide machinery for fixing minimum wages for men.

While the House considered the measure Hon. David Croll, Labor Minister, was advised from Quebec that the legislature there will be asked to pass similar legislation.

Mr. Croll dramatically waged what he called "life or envelope" as he asked the House to approve his bill. He read the amounts for hours for which the wages were paid. Some were as low as $6 to $8 for a 56-hour week.

"That is the evidence of exploitation which has led me to enactment of a minimum wage law," he told the House. "Behind each of these thin envelopes lies a story of hardship, discouragement and despair. I offer no other argument as to whether such legislation is necessary."

No Standard Set

The Minister said no standard minimum wage will be fixed for the whole Province. The bill provides for the appointment of a Labor and Industry Board. It will hold hearings and set minimum having regard to local conditions. Ontario already has legislation providing for minimum wages for women.

Russell Nesbitt (Cons. Toronto-Bracondale) voiced the only major opposition criticism of the bill. He opposed appointment of three government employees to the five-man board, advocating two labor representatives, two employers' representatives and one government nominee. His suggestion was not accepted.

Premier Hepburn labelled the Conservative attitude "silent, sulky acquiescence." He said the "happy result" of Quebec and Ontario joining hands is such a measure had come about because of the Liberal and tolerant attitude of his government toward minorities.

Mr. Croll said the bill would not affect agreements respecting wages for highly-skilled workers. They did not need protection of the Act. It would not be extended to agricultural workers and domestic servants because public opinion was not ready for such a step.

ACHING HEADS AND SPOTTY EYES

Don't let constipation ruin your health. Read Mr. Davidson's message of cheer: "Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has done a world of good to me. This is the first relief I have ever had. Believe me, I will be a booster for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN as long as I live!"—T. Davidson (address on request).

Common constipation may lead to many diseases. Unpleasant breath, blotchy complexion, spots before the eyes—are only forerunners of worse to come.

Conquer constipation with a delicious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Simply eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases with every meal. Serve it with milk or fruits. Cook into appetizing muffins, breads, etc.

You'll prefer this delightful natural way instead of the artificial methods of pills and drugs. Enjoy Kellogg's ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

THE FLOOD OF YESTERYEAR

One year ago today, Belleville was under flood waters, in the worst event of the kind since the spring of 1918. For eight days the section of the city near the lower portion of the river was submerged. It was only on the afternoon of the eighth day that the final shove allowed the waters to drain off the lower part of the city.

Experiences and recollections of that event will long linger. The damage was heavy, and owing to the manner of the descent of the flood, many persons had to be rescued from their homes which were invaded early in the morning of March 12th of one year ago.

The changeableness and variety of nature have been demonstrated in the past two winters. The rugged weather of a year ago, followed by a prolonged rain, which reached almost deluge proportions precipitated the flood, for the likes of which one would have to go back probably into the ninth decade of the nineteenth century. So much for last winter. This winter has been very mild, with no zero weather in November, much rain, little snow and little cold since the holiday season. The river once broken up has not been frozen over since the unnoticeable mid-winter breakup.

The limits to variety of nature was never more demonstrated than in the change from conditions of a year ago. This winter's mildness is a sort of compensation for last winter's severities.

Those who lived in the flooded area, have practically all returned to their homes as if nothing had happened. A few made changes to offset the disadvantages of a flood such as by raising of insulation, but almost all can in the same places with the necessary repairs made.

Marks of that flood linger on the riverbank, trees, the scored outside walls of some of the homes and white-coated brick walls which went through the deluge.

DON QUIXOTE PLAYS A PART

Three hundred and thirty-two years ago Cervantes, the Spaniard, dealt a death-blow to the unrealities of Spanish romance with his creation of the gallant knight Don Quixote and his fat companion Sancho Panza, the former of whom ran against windmills and the latter of whom could not understand why his master so behaved. That romance gave the word "quixotic" to describe anything that is unrealistic in the world in the nature of the absurdly chivalrous.

Today statues of the fiction knight who never lived and his henchman above their sandbagged base are used as a travestied parapet by the soldiers of the Spanish Loyalist army.

Indeed the very spirit of the Spanish madness in this crisis at least seems to be symbolized by the bold pair out of the one of the world's greatest works of fiction.

Don Quixote was the mad chevalier, but not as mad as the wild warlike Spaniards who are tearing their country asunder. Don Quixote was chivalrous, not as the madly murderous and he had a friend Sancho who was a very common sense materialist. More sense in a work of fiction than in the people of Spain of this day!

END OF THE ROAD

"It used to be one of Sir Harry Lauder's favorite stunts to walk on stage, swinging his kilt, and singing: "Keep right on to the end of the road, keep right on to the end!". We thought of him when we read this morning that another Scotsman, after a tortuous political career, may soon get to the end of the road. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald will probably resign his seat as Lord President of the Council and become merely an ordinary member of parliament, representing the Scottish universities.

Once, years ago, he cried: "A Lossiemouth lad I was born, a Lossiemouth loon will I die." Since then he has travelled a long way from Lossiemouth. The tragedy is that Mr. MacDonald, in the days of his power, deserved in many respects to be called great. He should have resigned when he saw that his days of influence and authority were at an end. Instead, he lingered on the scene like an old and used-up actor, who puckers his brow and cannot understand why the new audience does not applaud him as did others in days gone by. Somebody should have gently led the old man away and given him a peerage or something as a reward for what he did. Instead he has been allowed to peter out into senility. It is significant, for instance, that the only piece of important news concerning Mr. MacDonald which has come out in recent months is the fact that he fainted at a banquet.

It is an old tragedy, this lingering on of once popular and then unwanted actors. The great Edmund Burke, whose sonorous oratory once held an overflowing House of Commons in thrall, became eventually a tedious, boring and morose. Mr. MacDonald still smiles at almost empty benches. Burke recognized the shift in his fortunes, but as he did not realize that he himself had changed, he grew bitter that the world talk on, interminably, to least.—Hamilton Spectator.

BOTH HITLER AND MUSSOLINI SEEM MUCH PERTURBED by Great Britain's action in throwing the spotlight through the curtain of bluff erected by Il Duce and Der Fuehrer, and announcing an armament plan which will protect the tight little group of isles and dependencies in the face of any combination of predatory powers, hungry for colonies and glory and distatorial triumph. Hitle rand Mussolini are fuming and fretting but John Bull just winks the other eye and takes another helping of the roast beef of old England with plenty of brown gravy and Yorkshire pudding and bids them fume away.

One of the most popular items in the Budget speech of the Minister of Finance is bound to be that granting free entry. Into Canada from all countries of small personal gifts, truly says the Brockville Recorder-Times. Nothing is more exasperating to individuals than to discover that the small present sent to them at Christmas time or on a personal anniversary is considered dutiable by the Canadian authorities and that a payment must be made before it can be released, remarks the R. and T. It is true that upon numerous occasions the Customs officers, taking cognizance of the circumstances in the case, have exercised considerable latitude and passed these small presents duty-free. But the fact remains that hitherto no exception has been officially made in favor of these gifts and, strictly speaking, they are as dutiable as any other articles which may be imported unless it be on the free list. Mr. Dunning's action in granting free entry to these small personal gifts will remove a constant source of annoyance and spare customs officers many harsh words on the part of people who have had to pay duty upon small packages received by them as presents, concludes the Recorder-Times.

An old lady was watching with much interest two men, one of whom was just descending into a large manhole.

It was evident that she did not know of the existence of these manholes and her curiosity prompted her to ask: "And what might you be doing, my good man?"

The workman addressed winked at his companion and replied: "Lor' bless yer ma'am we're 'iberating."

The fact that only a little more than $400 in waterworks accounts was uncollected last year speaks well for the management of the Waterworks Department. That the Gas Department could and should make equally as good a showing, we respectfully submit.

In the death of Thomas Wills which occurred last evening Belleville loses a citizen whose record for fair and honorable dealing was second to none and who left an indelible mark on the early history of this city and county. May he rest in peace. The late Mr. Wills was born in Hereford England in the year 1826. He was educated at Bellingham, Kent. In the year 1846 he came to Belleville and he had resided here ever since. With the exception of a short time spent upon a farm in the 1st Concession of Thurlow. For a period of 52 years he was a faithful and efficient officer of the County of Hastings, serving in the capacity of County Clerk and County Treasurer. His latter position he retained until April of 1905 when he retired. In the year 1875 he was elected to represent West Hastings in the Provincial House and for 10 years he was a staunch Conservative. In Military matters he was also much interested and held the rank of Lt. Colonel, which he received in connection with the East Hastings Reserve Militia many years ago. He was at the front during the Fenian Raid. Municipal matters received a share of his attention and he served as a member of the school board for many years; he was chairman of the Board for two years.

Letters to the Editor

Problem of Study Dyed

To the Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:

From the standpoint of Youth interested in creating a New Social Order two unusual and exceedingly relevant articles appeared in your paper recently. The former, by Mr. Jamieson Rose was a shocking indictment of our existing educational system as a futile and bureaucratic institution. The latter, by Mr. H. B. Petierly, carried one within the institution and exposed the mechanical crushing devices in use there, as well as the confused and poorly adapted specimens of its production.

Many people in recent years have longed for a revised school system, which would eliminate the evils Mr. Rose mentions, and bear the fruits suggested by Mr. Petierly. We don't know that many teachers have gone beyond the usual limits, and have encouraged much criticism in an earnest effort to put into practice at least a few of the methods Mr. Petierly proposes.

Even our foremost educators have struggled vainly to develop a worthy system, and much of their defeat has been at the hands of those who have created the about against the present system.

Mr. Petierly's suggested program is the identical program proposed by the writer for a modernized system in this and other countries. We have developed a magnificent building in many aspects of which have never been even given a decent trial. We have a fine staff of teachers, one of them, it has been tried and found to be more than adequate, and the results are nothing short of miraculous compared to the old system of the present ferocious system.

Why—with the hope that other prominent citizens will engage the public in this much needed study begun by Dr. Bone and Mr. Petierly, that we heartily applaud these gentlemen for expressing their views on this topic.

Stray Bits

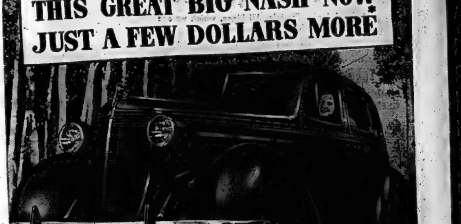
Pharmaceutic Nuptials:

A first commercial touch found its way into the newspaper notice of what was evidently the drug trade stock's smartest weddings in the 67a. Dr. James Anderson, Toronto Archives Department, Toronto, who found the record in the Oxford Herald, Ingersoll, dated August 14, 1861, describes it as "without a doubt one of the most interesting items we have come across in our newspaper files." In the formal announcement of the event as any rate, the bridegroom quite outshone the bride:

MARRIED—At Woodstock, on Thursday, the 8th inst., by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Huron, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Beldridge, Rector of Woodstock, Robert Stark, Esq., Druggist, Woodstock, late student of Queen's College and Analytical Chemistry, Materia Medica, Pharmacy, Dietetics, Glasgow University, Scotland) and sole proprietor and manufacturer of Nelligan's English Worm Candy, to Sophia Martha, youngest daughter of the Rev. H. Harvil, A.M., Woodstock.

Seems Long Lives:

A correspondent to the London Times reminds readers that, in 1936, the centenarians who died in 1936 were Sir Philip Pilkington, 10th Duart Castle, Isle of Mull, chief of his clan and a Orkney veteran; Miss Dora Rose Gilbert (100) who had enjoyed the friendship of Carwyn one of the survivors of Waterloo; Herr R. Malerhoffer (104), the oldest inhabitant in Switzerland, who read to the end without glasses; Miss Jerusha Hull (107), of Greenwich, who used by coach to school at Shrewsbury, accompanied by her grandfather, Mr. W. Irwin, who took a leading part in the agitation which ended in the abolition of tread-mills in gaols. The eight centenarians who died last year were alive when Queen Victoria came to the throne. Several of the Kings, Queens, Presidents and Popes who died in 1936 were born in the reigns of their predecessors.



The Farmer's Friend:

For the first time, Ernest C. Dabol, of New London, Conn., published a weekly newspaper without a single line of "boiler plate" in it. Instead of the usual boiler plate, the newspaper is filled with a complete copy of which no real Connecticut Yankee would either keep house or put out to sea, admits the present publisher has been long famous old almanac, first was published by Nathan Daboll, Plainsmith in the year of the reign of King George III. This 1773 edition was calculated by the meridian of New London, and an original copy of which is held by Mr. Dudley Haxwood, Vice-President and Treasurer of the Hartford's Savings Bank, and may be seen in the bank's boardwhaling museum. It has been published by the Daboils ever since, Nathan having been the first-born publisher of the present compiler. Daboll recalls other winters of equally great severity as those of 1899-1900, when farmers were plowing in the winter as far north as Maine. He admitted predicting the weather was a matter of looking back to the records of the other winters, that weather seemed to repeat in cycles. But he emphasizes he has nothing to say for publication. He does, however, favor "south winds" as being a contributory cause.

One of those old English firms which have been making a specific product for centuries has closed down, remarks the Stratford Beacon Herald. It is a firm at Haynes, Hampshire, which is reported to have been making parchments for a thousand years. Its origin is lost in the mists of antiquity. The records of years and it is believed that the firm made the parchment upon which Magna Carta was written.

Little Benny's Note Book

I've been late for school a good deel lately, and today Miss Kitty sent me a note telling her about me being so late. She asked for a record for punctuality and after supper I told pop and pop said Benny you have deprived your class of the benefits that would accrue from your timely presence so it is only just that you should be deprived of something yourself. I have always had a theory that in a perfectly balanced world the punishment would remorsefully name his own just punishment. Suppose we say that for every tie now and allow you to name the logical deprivation for yourself, he said.

Well O. pop, why dont you make me go without green vegetables for about a week and deprive me of all those vitaminal? I said, and me said, well of all the deep layed schemes, he'd never eat a single green vegetable if he wasn't forced to.

Anyways there's no use beppeddiing his health, so we'll let the vitamins slide, pop said and I said, well O. pop, couldn't I eat a extra lot of meat and dimert to make up the difference?

This court has decreed that the vitamins are skipped, pop said, and I said, well then why dont you deprive me of some sleep and why me get up about a hour earlier every morning for a while?

You're the one that's to be punished, not me, pop said.

Meaning the hardest thing he does is to try to make me get out of bed even at the regular time and me said, well maybe, the principal of the idea isn't bad, I mean why not deprive him of loving time instead of sleeping time by making him go to bed 15 minutes earlier?

Aw G, ma, aw heck, pop, good rule, I said and pop said Good nite is the most appropiate remark you could of thort of so I will bid you a harty but wity good nite in just about 10 minutes.

With they did.

New Craft Announced.

All this is in addition to the 46 new craft announced under the 1936 program. Two battleships, to be called the King George and the Prince of Wales are already being built under that program as well as numerous smaller craft.

The plenter of the 1937-38 part of Britain's speedy return to armed strength able to defend the empire was about complete today.

Embraced in the huge £7,500,000,000 program for the next five years, the estimates call for expenditure in the coming year of £82,500,000 on air strength, and £83,174,000 on the army as well as construction of fourteen munitions plants and some £5,000,000 on home defense that will include provision of anti-aircraft weapons, gas masks and balloon defence for the large cities against hostile bombing raids.

Singapore Base Ready.

The Singapore naval base to watch over interests in the Pacific is nearly ready. It is regarded as virtually impregnable even should its fleet be absent.

An air force of 136 squadrons comprising 1,750 craft will make up the metropolitan force when the 1937 program is complete. The fleet air arm will be increased to 279 planes. Air force personnel will number 70,000 against 50,000 at present.

Under the army estimates mechanization is to be pushed, recruiting speeded up and made more attractive, and 300,000 air raid wardens trained. Two new infantry battalions and two tank battalions are to be raised.

Sir Samuel declared that Britain and the United States are no longer naval rivals. Before the war Britain and the United States used to take little account each other's navy, but he said, that kind of suspicion and rivalry "has gone, I believe, forever."

be alive if they had time to barricade themselves against the deadly fumes which rose after the blast. But the opinion of nearly all the workers was that opportunity never was given the trapped men.

A crowd of 100 or so gathered about the pit as dawn broke over the mine where ten other miners had their lives in a blast last Sept. 2.

Most of them were men of the tearful women, who had stood through most of the night, had returned home to care for their children and to catch some rest while waiting word from the entombed.

Figures Subject To Revision

Mr. Rogers did not announce specific figures, because they are subject to revision.

"It is my belief," he added "that conscription will not be necessary in 1938 and previous years, with 1938 and previous years, with conditions even more favorable as the figures for every month since 1935, have been consistently better than the preliminary figures for the corresponding month of the preceding year."

The Minister attributed much of the improvement to greater activity in manufacturing. Although he said there was good reason to believe the heavy industries were also picking up.

The striking feature about the returns, he said, was that the number on relief in recent months was decreasing from month to month. A reversal of the usual trend which inclines unemployment to increase during the winter, improving only in the spring.

Improvement General.

"From a comparison of the preliminary returns for January and February of this year with the figure of previous years, and the fact that the usual seasonal advance in relief figures from January to February has not occurred this year, he said "it is very evident that the improvement in general economic conditions and the increase in employment are now having the expected favorable effect on relief figures.

"The latest figures available, which measure the volume of employment in industries other than agriculture, fishing and domestic work are those received by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics from employers, showing the number of persons employed as at Feb. 1. This number is 967,719 and compares with the total of 927,008 reported on Feb. 1, 1936, an increase of 40,712.

"In connection with projects authorized in the Dominion-Provincial agreements, 10,811 men were afforded 182,903 man-days work during February and were paid in wages $203,684. The provinces in which works were reported to be in progress were Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia."

been informed a man had slipped through the ice. Proceeding to the scene, the police located a man's cap and also a pound of butter, which had been previously purchased and also noticed, that the ice was considerably frayed about the open water, showing that the man had put up a terrific struggle, before being swept under the ice.

School Children Saw Map.

Further evidence of the drowning was submitted by some school children who were playing on the shore of the Bay near, where the man was drowned, they testifying to the police, they saw a man wearing glasses walking across the ice and shortly afterwards heard cries of help and saw the man threshing about in the water. The police believed the identification of the cap would lead to the solution of the mystery and they centred upon the article of apparel. Elmer Hosier stated to the police, he believed the cap belonged to George Kellar and further investigation elicited the information, that a pound of butter and a small stew had been purchased in Lamoree's butcher shop early on Thursday afternoon and A. Lamoree, the proprietor, identified the cap as that worn by Kellar, when he purchased the goods. At this point a journey to the home of Mrs. Kellar was made and the news broken gently to the woman. She also identified the cap, stated that her husband had crossed the ice on foot early in the afternoon and was probably making his way homeward, when the accident happened.

After positive identification had been established the rescue party consisting of Oriel Yarrow, Maitland Ferguson, Frank Modge and James Moon along with Chief Main, Sergt. Probert and Constable Lonbeat every effort for the recovery of the body. The party grappling from a small skiff and a punt, Oriel Yarrow and Maitland Ferguson came upon the body with grappling irons and the body was soon lifted into the boat and they carried across the ice to the shore. The deceased was a returned veteran and leaves to mourn his loss a wife and four small children.

LLOYD GEORGE

It was a bad thing for nations to work up artificial prosperity by expenditure, which formed part of the human race with calamity. The increase in real race-in armaments most come to an end some day because the nations could not stand it.

Workers On Land Decrease.

Before the war seven per cent. of the population of Britain worked on the land. Now the percentage was only 4.6. This compared with 20 per cent in Belgium, 20 per cent. in Holland and 30 per cent. in Germany.

"The food front," he continued, "nearly brought us down in the war. It was food shortage that brought down Germany, Austria and Bulgaria. It nearly brought us down before them. They stood it four and a half years. Had it not been for sea power, we could not have stood it eighteen months. Our ships were sunk by the millions of tons. It was a gamble whether Germany would be starved first or Britain."

Less Prepared Today.

"We are less prepared," Lloyd George pursued, "than in 1914". It was very well for Sir Samuel Hoare to say that battleships were protected against air attack. But the fact was we would see bigger submarines and bigger airplanes. The food ship was fragile. It did not bristle with anti-aircraft guns.

"You are ready to make sacrifices for defending the country," he declared. "Why not make them to strengthen what was our weakest link of defence in the last war. I appeal to the government to take this urgent problem in hand and deal with it before it is too late."

BRIDGE STREET CHURCH Y.P.S.

The regular meeting of the Young People's Society of Bridge Street Church was held with the President, Mr. Taylor Franklin in the chair. Miss Eunice Pyfrom conducted the devotional part of the meeting opening with the Call to Worship followed by prayer. The hymn, "Jesus' Lord and Father of Mankind" was read in unison. Miss Doris Pyne gave a humorous reading "The Dentist and the Gas," by Stephen Leacock. Miss Margaret Houston and Miss Dorothy Carr sang a duet "The Little Old Carpenter," accompanied by Miss Lillian Anderson. Mr. Milton Fowler continued the Missionary Conference by story of the origin of the poet. This was followed by a interesting talk on stamp-collecting by Mr. Taylor Franklin. Miss Evelyn Reddick led in singing and a social game, arranged by Miss Joan Sprague, was played. The meeting closed with the Mispah Benediction.

'Y' SWIM CLUB TO COMPETE AT KINGSTON

Members of the local Y.M.C.A. Swim Club have almost completed preparations for the Eastern Ontario swim meet which is to be held at Kingston on March 20. Six Belleville swimmers are expected to take part in the events. The local natators captured several events in the Kingston meet last year and are confident of adding further victories to their list. Among those who are expected to make up the Belleville team are: Bill Wright, Gordon Edwards, Jack Peoples, Harry Moncrieff, Ross Clare, Murray Jones and George Stobie.

LAUNDRY "GAMIN"

Mr. Ernest Greasley, the "Clark Gable" of an Attlebborough, Eng. laundry, has gone back to his job as foreman and the three hundred girl and boy workers he superintends are happy again. The girls went out on strike for three days recently when they learned that Greasley was to be transferred to another branch of the firm. Handsome Mr. Greasley is shown arriving at the laundry after the strike won their strike.

WALLY'S HOSTESS

Mrs. Charles E. Bedaux, wife of a New York industrial engineer and explorer, who led an expedition into the Canadian Rockies some time ago, is hostess to Mrs. Wallis Simpson at her chateau de Candé at Monts, near Tours, France. The chateau, which is 500 years old, was decorated with 10,000 francs worth of flowers in honor of Mrs. Simpson, when she arrived from Cannes.

CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY PAVED WITH GOLD

We're not saying that the above road is actually 18-carat, but the ore of which it is built assays $7.00 to the ton. The road, built in 1936, connects Julian and Ramona, near San Diego, Cal., a distance of 11 miles. Material for its construction was taken from a quarry now operated by partners Fred Koale and Orval Hammer, who are shown seeking gold-bearing quartz on the highway dump. The highway stretches away in background.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"After The Thin Man"

William Powell and Myrna Loy, the merriest, maddest married couple ever to come out of Hollywood, step from the last thrilling page of "The Thin Man" into the first hilarious chapter of the newest adventures have demanded be written. "After The Thin Man", which opens tomorrow (Saturday) for four days at the Belle Theatre, was directed by Jeanhiel Hammett, dean of smart, sophisticated mystery writers, was dared to do "The Thin Man." "After The Thin Man" is his answer.

Detective Nick Charles and wife Nora, romancing again amid ridiculous mirth and dramatic murder, brought to the screen by the same behind-the-scenes combination W. S. Van Dyke, its director; Hunt Stromberg, its producer; Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, its scenarist.

The stars surrounded by a sparkling supporting cast of favorites, James Stewart, Elissa Landi, Joseph Calleia, Jessie Ralph, Alan Marshall, Teddy Hart and Dorothea Dooley McNulty, George Zucco, Paul Fix, and Asta, the wire haired terrier star of "The Thin Man."

"After The Thin Man" is more than just another sequel. It picks up in high where "The Thin Man" left off. Nick and Nora having conquered New York are on their way home to resuming entertainments in Francisco with its colorful cerie Chinatown, its strangest haunts and its magnificent bridge. Nick has put his sleuthing career in moth balls for good. He and Nora are nothing but lots of peace, quiet and relaxation. It is New Year's Eve when they arrive at the door of their swank Nob Hill home.

And they walk right into a whoopee party. Half of San Francisco, society, policemen, bums, race track touts, ex-pugs and underworld characters are gathered to welcome them home.

The telephone rings. Over the wire Hammett introduces Nick's headache. Nora's aristocratic family, the stuffiest group to be found outside of a museum.

Nick and Nora are invited to dinner. Selma, Nora's cousin, is in trouble. Selma's estranged husband, Robert, has been missing for three days. Nora's testy aunt, an overbearing old dame, wouldn't have anything to do with Nick, but the family honor must be kept at all of the headlines.

At midnight, with Nora prodding him, Nick is at the Idcher, a Chinatown dive. Robert is found there with Polly, a singer, and Nick suspects "Dancer", owner of the cafe, with being involved in a blackmail scheme.

Robert leaves the cafe for home and shortly after is found murdered, shot to death. Selma is discovered with a gun in her hand. Selma who has always loved her, comes to the rescue.

The rest of the story is a deep, dark secret, the ending shocked to safe. To assure that the usual climax would not be prematurely revealed the last dance scene were not filmed until the rest of the picture was completed.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has spared nothing to make "After The Thin Man" the funniest, snappiest, most exciting comedy-mystery-drama criterion ever made. It is aimed at only one thing, sheer, unadulterated audience entertainment.

Clandette Colbert Seeves

The love story of a beautiful Puritan maiden and a dashing Virginia cavalier, laid against one of the most interesting periods in American history, brought Clandette Colbert and Fred MacMurray to the Belle yesterday in "Maid of Salem", a lavish and beautiful production produced and directed by Frank Lloyd who directed "Mutiny on the Bounty", "Under Two Flags" and "Cavalcade". A funny Bust Wet Tom Patricia Ellis multiple-reel city and "Yellowstone Park." a beautiful Travelaik in Technicolor completes a splendid program that will be presented again tonight for the last time.

AT THE CAPITOL

Gene Autry in "Oh Susanna"

Gene Autry, singing star, becomes involved in a new and exciting story treatment in his latest starring picture for Republic—"Oh, Susanna!" which comes to the Capitol for matinee and evening performances today and evening.

Instead of rescuing fair heroines and galloping to the aid of others, Autry spends most of the film footage trying to prove that he is not a killer and robber with a "Dead or Alive" price on his head.

Nevertheless his talents for song and music have full sway when he arrives incognito at an old Spanish mission. He aids his friend's daughter in entertaining cash customers while ferreting out the killer.

Smiley Burnette and Earl Hodgins, wandering troubadours, inject humour into the fast moving musical drama.

Of special interest to film goers are the Light Crust Doughboys a fine cowboy singing band who make their film debut in "Oh, Susanna!" The men featured singing on the radio in the Southwest, play any kind of instrument and sing to almost any key the situation demands.

Frances Grant already known for her work opposite Gene Autry in "Red River Valley" is featured as the bereved daughter of the dude rancher who strives to evade the law but gives in spite of the cloud of tragedy that hangs over her place.

Added Featurettes

An added attraction with this ace western thriller a number of select short subjects are shown. Latest Capitol News events, a fun comedy "Sidle Nellie Sidle", a musical comedy "The Stars Can't Be Wrong", a novelty Revue and a travelette headliner "Vanderbilt Troopers" complete this splendid two hour show.

Ends Today

Shown for the last times today are two swell features, a musical comedy, drama and action to the extreme. Jane Frazee "Frogs and The Stars" as shown as hit No. 1 featuring Barbara Stanwyck in a dramatic role, Ladies Love Danger and as hit No. 2 "Join The Marines" with Frank Albertson.

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATED BY FOXBORO COUPLE

Mr. And Mrs. George Smith Are Presented With Gifts by Friends

A GOLDEN WEDDING

Sincere congratulations!
And best of wishes too.
As fifty full eventful years
Are ending now for you;
How well worth while each year has been
Along your golden way;
How gay and happy you must be
To celebrate this way!

On March 2nd Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, Foxboro, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and entertained at high noon eighteen of their near relatives and friends.

The home was tastefully decorated, the corridors and arches being draped in gold and white, the flowers being golden daffodils. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were recipients of many beautiful golden anniversary gifts and cards.

At night the neighbors and oldtime friends helped to celebrate too with a social evening. Games and music were enjoyed by all. After congratulations were made the guests were then called to order by Mr. Clifford Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Smith were given a seat of honor. The following address was read by Mrs. J. Johnston:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Smith:

It is with feelings laden with pleasure and pride that your old friends and neighbors are here tonight, proud that we have in our midst a pair so loyal, kind and true — who have pulled together through a married life of fifty years, making and holding no matter what life dealt out to them. Our purpose is to take this opportunity to be with you and spend a pleasant evening on this your golden wedding day.

We all hope you will be spared to enjoy to us and extend our warmest and heartiest best wishes.

Please accept these gifts as a token of our friendship.

Signed on behalf of your friends Mrs. J. Johnston, Mrs. Nettie Longwell.

The gifts were: a floor lamp, a studio lamp and a beautiful potted plant. Suitable replies were made by Mrs. Mary Smith, Nellie, Mrs. Mary Bartlett, Nellie-Mae, Mrs. Christie. Mr. Smith made a very pleasing reply. Many old time songs were sung by everyone. Many amusing school day pranks were recalled from days long ago. Mr. Smith, now over the old age limit, sang, and voicing the golden qualities of health and groom of fifty years ago.

Mr. Russel Christie gave this beautiful reading:

The Pilgrim Way
But once I pass this way.
And then—no more.
But once—and then
The silent door
Swings on its hinges.
Once—and then
And no more I pass this way
Into the night.
With all my might,
I will essay
To comfort and delight
To all I meet upon
The Pilgrim Way
For no man travels twice
Life's Glad Highway
That climbs through Darkness up to light
Or through
To day.

A dainty lunch was served by the ladies and the very pleasant evening came to a close by singing "God be with you till we meet again." (Contributed.)

IN MEMORIAM

HASLIP—In loving memory of William John Haslip, who passed away March 12, 1935.
When the shade of night is falling
And I am sitting all alone,
There often comes a feeling
"If you could only come home."
Two years have passed, how long it seems,
But in my heart your face still beams,
Beautiful memories treasured ever,
Of the happy days we spent together.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Florence. m12-1i

HASLIP—In loving memory of our dear father, Wm. J. Haslip, who passed away March 12, 1935.
In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweetly tender, fond and true,
There is not a day, dear father,
That we do not think of you.
—Ever remembered by daughters, Marguerite and Julia. m12-1i

PRITCHARD—In loving memory of my dear wife, Almira Pritchard, who passed away one year ago today.
The loving stream of life rolls on but still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile of her who once sat there,
Her life was one long sacrifice, her heart was true and tender,
She toiled so hard for those she loved, then left us to remember her.
—Sadly missed by Husband and Family. m12-1i

Richards, B.A., B.D., president of the Bay of Quinte Conference and Miss Winnifred Thomas, general secretary of the Dominion Board of the W.M.S. The treasurer announced the organization raised $13,250 in 1936.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Sarnia, Ont., March 12 (CP)—Crews here at Lake Huron ice road ready reported for flying-out duty and negotiations are in progress between Canadian insurers and insurance companies to have insurance made applicable at least 15 days earlier than the usual opening April 1.

Berlin, March 12 (AP)—Col.-Gen. Wilhelm Hermann Goering signed an order today, forbidding paperhangers to make their pastes from flour of wheat, rye, maize or potatoes.

Foodstuffs should not be used for industrial purposes while cellulose pastes were available he said.

Rome, March 12 (AP)—Gabriele D'Annunzio poet-hero of Italy, celebrated his 74th birthday today at his centenary tasks.

Despite a recent letter in which he declared "I am now old and ill, so I am hastening my end," he seemed far from any thoughts of taking his life.

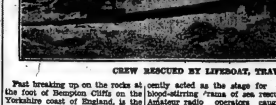
Edmonton, March 12 (CP) — Walter Bruno Rzembusch vouched for this year: A slightly inebriated customer tottered into his cafe yesterday muttered something about the last restaurant running out of eggs, ordered 40 soft-boiled, ate them, paid the $3.19 bill and tottered out.

Tulsa, Okla., March 12 (CP)—A small, Rhode Island red rooster here has something to say about —he's the new corn-eating champion.

At a poultry show he was pitted against three supposedly ravenous cocks, nearly double his size. The first aspirant gave up at 434 grains. A lusty challenger quit at 447. The best the runner up could do was 476, but the champ pecked steadily on, three times the judges brought more corn. Finally Bill Rachback, the bird's owner called a halt at 731 grains.

The winner pecked hungrily at outstretched hands as he was carried away.

Valencia, Spain, (Uncensored, by Mail to New York, March 13—(AP)—Odds against a government victory in Spain's civil war have gone up 5-1 even in this temporary capital of the government, and neutral observers say labors are hard to find.



The majority of observers here believe it will be June at the earliest before peace is reached.

CREW RESCUED BY LIFEBOAT, TRAWLER BREAKS UP ON YORKSHIRE COAST

Fast breaking up on the rocks at the foot of Bempton Cliffs on the Yorkshire coast of England, is the trawler, Lord Ernle, which recently aided as the stage for a blood-stirring drama of sea rescue. Amateur radio operators caught signals from the distressed craft when she was drifting towards the rocks and the Flamborough lifeboat went into action in a heavy sea. Heroic work resulted in the rescue of the entire crew of 18 by lifeline.

POWER PLUS REDWING TRIO PREPARE D TO DEFEND THE STANLEY CUP

Driving toward the American section championship of the National Hockey League with practically the same team which won last year, Detroit Redwings promise to be formidable defenders of the Stanley Cup when the lengthy major hockey playoffs get under way. Three of the strong cogs in Jack Adams' smooth-working machine are pictured above. This trio must be relied right up among the aristocracy of professional puck-chasers. Top left, is Ebenezer "Ebbie" Goodfellow fast-breaking hard-hitting defence ace and along side him in the team and league point-scoring champion, Larry Aurie. Aurie patrols the right wing first line. Goalie Normie Smith, is pictured below sprawled in front of the nets that he must defend against playoff opponents. Redwings have topped the American section for most of the season.

Flyers Lack Reserve Strength To Cope with Sailors' Speed Being on Short End of 5-0 Count

Port Colborne Continues in Allan Cup Play-downs by Win

BROWNLEE TOO SMART

Flyers Gave Everything in a Losing Cause And Not Disgraced

By KEN J. COLLING

Port Colborne, Ont., Mar. 12—Like the snake in the night the R.C.A.F. hockey team folded up in the hockey tent and silently disappeared out of the Allan Cup eliminations here Thursday night when the Fleet borne "Sailors" blanked the "Flyers" to the tune of 5 to 0, being much the better team throughout. It was the second consecutive loss for the Flyers at the hands of the Sailors and marks finish to the efforts of the intermediate "Aces" entrants, while the Port Colborne team advances to the second round of the Allan Cup eliminations versus Sudbury.

Before a small house of less than 1000 hockey town fans, the Sailors unleashed a dazzling system of combination, the like seemed not seen on the ice is what proved the difference and accounted for the poor showing of the Flyers in the weary Flyers. Alex Brownlee, the Portal netting goalie, was nothing short of sensational and repeatedly rose to dizzy heights to make miraculous saves while the Flyers tried in vain to beat him and suffered their only defeat when the now terminated season. Brownlee was given superb protection by Big Vince Dupuy, but the torrid back checking of the Sailors' forwards is really what hindered the losers every when they did manage to fathom the homeside defence.

Systemized Passing

The systemized passing of McGowan, Reynolds and Arnott, on one of Coach Ken Doran's lines coupled with the dazzling speed of Fitzgerald and Wade proved too tiring for the Flyers, who shorthanded through injuries and woefully weak with their reserves slowed by their easy victims for the more polished Sailors. The McNeeley twins led the Flyers on the attack, followed by Dan Cowley and Frank Carney, Patrick Carney's brother of the Flyers' rearguard effort, Johnnie Lalonde being considerably hampered with a broken thumb and playing with the aid of a cumbersome metal guard which mitigated his efforts going either way. Personal feelings ran high and the two teams were always on edge at all times, especially after Ernie McNeeley and Morrison tangled the latter clipping McNeeley over the open net on the off side goal-tender, McGowan being uncovered. Ernie McNeeley and McGowan tangled in a double penalty this period because personal feelings ran high and there was no evidence at all concerns of the rink, especially after play had been completed.

Teams Eliminated by Pembroke Get Another Chance

Ottawa, March 12 (CP)—Cecil Duncan of Ottawa, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced late last night Pembroke Little Lumber Kings had been disqualified from further competition in the Ottawa and District playdowns for using an ineligible player.

Four teams the Kings eliminated to win the Ottawa District Junior Crown were given another chance in new series for the title. Ottawa Fliers will meet Perth, while Barry's Bay engages Renfrew in a sudden-death games, both to be played Saturday night.

Duncan made the announcement following a conference with W. R. Elliott of Renfrew, President of the Ottawa and District Association, who suspended Carman Keon, Pembroke player, last week and ordered the Kings and Perth to replay their district final series.

Perth which lodged a protest with Elliott, claiming Keon was over the junior age limit of 20, referred to Ottawa by his order and took the stand. Pembroke gave up its chance to continue in the playdowns by using Keon.

Evidence Quite Plain

Duncan said that on the evidence at hand Keon was over age and therefore ineligible, and as the C.A.H.A. regulations were definite, that onus of establishing age eligibility resting with the club concerned, there was no alternative but to disqualify Pembroke.

Winners of the sudden-death games will open a two-game, total-goal, series next Monday and Wednesday for the district title. The survivors will engage Eastern Canadians for the Ottawa and District championship and the right to enter the Memorial Cup playdowns.

The mixup has forced re-arrangement of Ottawa and District playdowns. Duncan has the problem under consideration and a revised schedule will be announced within a few days.

Pembroke, Ont., March 12 (CP)—Disqualification of Pembroke Little Lumber Kings from the Ottawa and District competition came as a bitter blow to supporters here.

Club officials, however, contemplated taking no action to fight the ruling, announcing they would let President Cecil Duncan of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association...

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

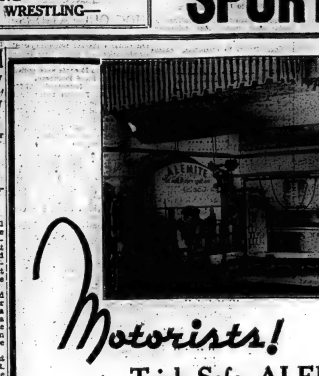
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 12.—(AP)—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Beach to talk things over with the Cards yesterday. Dizzy Dean stopped off at the filling station at Bradenton and in 15 minutes had 25 pitching quarters with the boys.

"Looks like I can pick up that $50,000 a year right here at home," commented Dizzy as he pocketed the change. Unofficial training camp in Florida is Detroit's because of Mickey Cochrane's "No Vacancy" sign on the door. You should have seen the almost bald head of pitching coach Bill Hallahan Bradenton and in 15 minutes he had 25 pitching quarters with the boys.

"Looks like I can pick up that $50,000 a year right here at home," commented Dizzy as he pocketed the change. Unofficial training camp in Florida is Detroit's because of Mickey Cochrane's "No Vacancy" sign on the door. You should have seen the almost bald head of pitching coach Bill Hallahan Bradenton and in 15 minutes he had celebrated his first day in camp by initiating all the rookies by sitting in the bleachers throughout the Reds' first nine-inning practice game.

The Yankees haven't given up on Lou Gehrig yet. They recall that the last time Lou was a holdout he and Col. Ruppert rode both out to the same train. . . Not a word has been heard from Jack Dempsey. . . . Baseball men who can't imagine a Yankee exhibition tour through the south and southwest without Gehrig to draw the customers, believe Lou will get his $40,000 if he waits long enough, but one man at least, Col. Ruppert is just stubborn to let Dimaggio sit at home for a year, paying the $25,000 he demands. In the meantime, the camp awaits the Ruppert arrival, now set for Sunday.



Casey Stengel still keeps in touch with his many baseball friends and writes, that his ears are just as big as ever. . . . With Sammy Byrd out of the way, Jack Saltzgiver of the Senators, who averages 74 on the links, will claim the baseball golfing championship. The Pittsburgh Pirates' begins to look like the real thing.

CARRYING PLACE DOWNS BRIGHTON

Winners to Meet Hinde And Duch Team in Finals

Trenton, March 12.—(Special)—An injury riddled Carrying Place hockey organization, figured in one of the closest games of the season on Wednesday night and trounced a stubborn Brighton squad 4 to 0, to accomplish another step in the race for the Courier Advocate trophy, which is held by Wooler. Carrying Place clash with Hinde and Dench on Friday night, when (according to rumour) Kingsley of National League hockey fame will be on deck to referee the referee duties. The Latour band earned their win over the Brighton team and displayed real class in eliminating the out-of-towners. The first period opened fast and furious with both forward lines laying on the pressure, Boldestone in the visitors' net was performing like a miracle man, while Dimmick was off for tripping. The claims stood with A. Lambert of Brighton in the cosy dog house, Place and during this hectic round the Latour men garnered three tallies and missed as many more. Davis is has-been stickhandled through alone to marshal a shot past Boldestone for Carrying Place's second goal.

W. Lemoine was sent to the cooler for roughing and Brighton made Bowers work hard in the Carrying Place net, while they had the man advantage. Bowers proved equal to the occasion and lengthened his string of outstanding presentations. Beaubien Anderson whipped a hot one by the Brighton pipe minder to chalk up Carrying Place's third counter. Bowers was credited with the assist. York wiggled through to take Vandervoort's pass on the fly and registered Carrying Place's fourth and final register. The game ended with Brighton removing the goal tender and playing six forwards. Teams:—Carrying Place, goal, W. Bowers; defence, Lemoine, Vandervoort, Anderson. Brighton—goal, Boldestone; defence, Dimmick, Alabert; centre, Thompson; wings Bush, H. Lambert; alternates, Keating, Mahaffy, Rundell, Cooper and Corbett.

Referee—Boomer Holway, Belleville.

CINCH FIRST PLACE

Howie Morenz Rests in Death On Mount Royal

(By John LeSaint, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Montreal, March 12 (CP)—Howie Morens, who symbolized speed and pulsating life for a generation of hockey fans, rested in death today in a snow-covered grave atop Mount Royal.

The great centre of Montreal Canadiens, taken in the prime of National Hockey League comeback, was buried yesterday amid all the solemnities sport could accord a favorite son. His burial evoked one of the finest tributes ever accorded a dead athlete anywhere.

Ten thousand hushed fans came to the Forum for the last service over Howie's body as it lay over the centre ice circle, where the drop of a puck had started him on countless occasions a rushes that gained him the title of "Stratford Streak." And another 15,000 milled outside the ice arena as they took the Canadien centre out of the building for the last time.

The restless Howie, still in that Forum for the first time, was given a funeral service that was short and of brief simplicity. A hymn, a prayer, and a eulogy, and they bore his body off to the Mount for the long rest he would not take in life.

To the thousands of admirers, it seemed hard to believe the great Morenz was dead, his 14-year career cut short by Monday night's sudden heart attack. It was only a few weeks before that Howie, his leg broken in an accident on the ice, was promised to be back next year, as fit as ever.

Bodies Sag In Dejection

Those fellow players were there yesterday, for the last service. Aurel Joliat, on the old-time Habitant line with Howie, stood guard beside his bier with Johnny Gagnon, centre Lions, Babe Siebert scored twice and Ralph Blyth, Eddie Ouellette, Phil Besler and Sutherland once each.

and the Maroons and the Toronto Maple Leafs, here for a game, added their personal tributes.

From the other National League clubs, and the officials and fans, came flowers, that told of their affection for the dead star, banked high about his casket as it lay in state in the Forum for 2 1-2 hours.

Rev. Dr. Malcolm Campbell summed up their unspoken tributes in his brief eulogy. "He never knew when to quit," he said over the body of his pershing friend. "He was a hero in the true sense of the term. He made hockey, for the goal, his life as he did in the game of hockey." And everybody, he said, loved Howie.

After he had spoken for the once-great Morenz, and as a long sigh escaped the crowd, six of Howie's teammates bolsted the casket to their shoulders and carried him off the ice pedestal he was a hero.

Through a dense mass of humanity, they bore him away from the Forum and out toward the Mount. There, as a late afternoon sun bore down from a cold sky and glinted on the mountainside's blanket of snow, they gave him back to the earth.

A brave figure, Mrs. Howie Morens stood at the graveside with young Howie Junior and with her father, as the sun dropped behind Mount Royal and on the life of the man called the greatest of them all.

Stunned to a stony silence, a large crowd of hockey fans sat in the home town rink the other night in Gravenhurst, and watched the flashing blades and stick wizardry of the Sutton Intermediate "B" squad trim the Gravenhurst 8-3 choice humble the colors of the Gravenhurst crowd and relieve them of any future worries as to where they would place the mug and title, if any..... Picked by the experts as the potential champs of the "B" series, Gravenhurst were bowed by Norries to cop the round.... They knocked off the Suttoners by a 6-4 count in the opening game, and that doughty Suttoners, insisting upon two referees, uncorked a brand of hockey, which surprised their own most ardent admirers, and not only blasted the eight goals to four returns from the Gravenhursters, but knocked them out of the running by taking the round 3-1.

Maxie Schmeling seems bound to win back the heavyweight title at any price. Going right from the rumaround by the Braddock-Louis open Monday in Belleville, Eddie Thomas, mentor of the Redmen, has been in fine condition with the exception of Fred Seibley, who is recovering from an attack of the 'flu, but who will be fit and ready next week. The team had a real practices since their series with Whitby and last night the Redmen were out for a long workout and Guy showed plenty of class. Bring on the conquerors of the suburbanites and they'll be ready.

Probably a momentous meeting as regards the future of baseball in Belleville will be held on Monday when the semi-annual meeting of the Central Ontario Baseball League meets for the purpose of getting the league in shape for the coming operations. There is a strong possibility that Belleville will not have a team in this loop this summer and this is to be regretted after the many fine years and the splendid record that has been achieved by baseball generally. Baseball is at a low ebb in this ballwick and the fans have been hard hit, and although some seem to think they have the key to the situation, despite the fact no move has been made to field a team as yet, it is the opinion, that a team representing Belleville will answer the call when it is sounded about May 24th.

Main discussion at the meeting will be the advisability of Belleville but the league heads will arrange a schedule of the kind of ball diamond and other incidental matters as well. It is up to the executive president of the loop, will be on hand to take part in the discussion. Practically every team in the loop have strengthened their ranks for the coming season, Trenton showing a marked desire to have a winning combination. Oshawa will have a new catcher, another pitcher and possibly a couple of fly chasers. It is understood Tom Fuley, first centrefielder for the Peter is now making suire in Oshawa and may be a decided acquisition to the team. Bowmanville, outfielder in the C.O.B.L. and that takes in a lot of territory, have lined up three or four couple of new faces in the lineup, while Peterboro, who is holding a meeting will likely rest the March 15th deadline with a couple of ball players, one of them being a right hander of note.

The Belleville Sailers have made the first port and on Monday sent an Towed set sail after the gaulgion in the North Hastings loop. The Sailers succeeded in scuttling the ship at Stirling, winning the round by 13-11 and earned the right to meet Tweed, who defeated Madoc in the other series of the semi-final draw. The teams meet in Tweed in the first game on Monday and play back in Madoc on Thursday next. Games will count and the team winning two will be declared champions. It was expected the Sailers might play their home games at the Belleville Arena but "Duke" Smith, the mentor of the team is going to stick to the north, where he has been all his league days during the season. The Sailers are a classy outfit and the series with Tweed should be a rousing affair. As it seems a custom for Belleville teams to be up in the hockey world this season, here's hoping the Sailors take Tweed in their stride.

Better late than never. The Intermediate softball team who won the O.B.A. championship in that series last season, has never been officially presented with the Trophy, but Charles Tebworth, who knows all the answers about softball, thought the Percival Stores had been given ample duty and as representative of that district, he decided to up with Vern McIlwraith of Guelph with the result that the trophy will be sent to Belleville pronto. The fine cup will be on view shortly in the windows of the Percival stores in this city and everyone will be glad to witness the result of the boys' labors during the season just passed. The names of the winning team will also be engraved on the trophy which in itself is some honor for the trophy being for perpetual competition will carry the name for many years and possibly children of the boys who played on the team, will live in future years to honor of winning the same trophy.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

The Fliers were a well-beaten team in Port Colborne last night, for many reasons. First and foremost, the Sailors possessed absolutely too much speed, while their play in all three zones at times caught the Fliers flat-footed. Tired, foot-sore and weary, sadly lacking reserve strength, coupled with Johnnie Lalonde's broken thumb all took their toll, but it was a game Belleville that went down to defeat in Port Colborne. They were eliminated by a better club and not only admitted it, but personal congratulations were extended after the game, despite the numerous personal feuds that marked the entire series, as the players on both clubs gave their all.

When hostilities opened last night the Port Colborne arena was not half filled, only the rush section being patronized to any extent, which was the surprise of the Fliers. To Alex Brownlee, the Sailors' goalie, must be given the lion's share of the victory, as he was nothing short of super-natural at times as he penched, kicked and batted the Fliers' drives into the clear and with ease. Vince Upper carried much of the work of the homesters on his shoulders, his blocking and rushing always effective, but his back checking and speed of the forwards is really what gave the Sailors their advantage. The better team won.

The McNeely twins brought many commendable words of praise from the patrons, as did Partridge and Cowley, but as a whole the Fliers could not cope with the well-balanced club garnered by Eric Dubeau, the Fliers being sadly lacking in reserve strength and their absence has only been capped by a long, hard and tedious season. They are still intermediate A champions, something that can't be taken from them and Goalie Leader Tommy Lawrence is still proud of his charges and he informed us long after the game the Fliers would have a hockey team second to none in 1938. So say we all.

The Belleville "Redmen" drew Sutton, who eliminated Gravenhurst in one of the semi-finals in the Intermediate "B" series to date in the next round, W. Hewitt tried hard to give the "Redmen" a round series before meeting Gravenhurst or Sutton but the matter of distance had to be taken into consideration, the western teams in the running refusing to come so far east. The series will open Monday in Belleville. Eddie Thomas, mentor of the Redmen, has been in fine condition with the exception of Fred Seibley, who is recovering from an attack of the 'flu, but who will be fit and ready next week. The team had a real practices since their series with Whitby and last night the Redmen were out for a long workout and Guy showed plenty of class. Congressional Action Necessary For Change

For any important change be- | yond these limits it would be necessary to pass a new law through Congress amending the charter. At the present time this appears to be very unlikely and no organized attempt has been made by any responsible quarter to introduce such a measure. If it were desired to do so, notice would have to be given to Congress and its introduction would become public knowledge. As Congress will probably not meet until June and will then rise until the beginning of the following year it would be very difficult now for any private member to bring in a Bill which may hope to obtain enough support to secure its passage before June.

The administration itself is certainly not responsible for raising the price of gold. The only reason why this question of gold has arisen in Washington and been discussed in stock market circles is because of the law which gives the power to the United States to pay for America's gold and securities. The administration has been concerned with ways chiefly to minimize the possible effect of a sudden withdrawal of support for these securities but not been prepared to lower the price of a metal—gold—for which it had paid large sums to effect a cure and which it has accepted as the equivalent in value for its sur-

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Some quarters are recommending the purchase of Wright-Hargreaves for investment. This security, it is pointed out, is attractive for the reason that the 60 cents annual dividend, which appears secure, indicates a yield of about 8 percent. on the stock. Wright-Hargreaves has ample ore reserves, is strong financially and well managed.

The recent over-subscription of an offering of 140,000 No Par Common shares of Mackenzie Air Service Limited by Collier, Norris & Henderson, Limited, Montreal and Toronto, is indicative of the increasing interest being demonstrated by Eastern Investors in the new mining area recently opened up in the North West Territories.

Although Mackenzie Air Service was only organized in 1935, the company has been largely instrumental in the development of the very promising mining areas in Mackenzie River Basin as the company operates in Northern Alberta, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Yukon and the North West Territories. Many Easterners are not aware that the Mackenzie River is the fifth largest river basin in the world, and, according to mining engineers, holds forth much greater promise for new mineral discoveries than either Golden or Canada. Eldorado, Slave Lake and Goldfields are only three of the big mining districts which are regularly served by the company and with which investors are already familiar.

One company that has experienced improvement from general business as well as the activity in the Turner Valley Area-Hargreaves, and this has been reflected in the fact that the company has placed the stock on a $4 annual dividend basis, compared with $3 formerly.

Some people are beginning to talk of the "new issue boom in market." They are pointing to the sensational bargains that were available in 1932 and 1933. Smelters, it is pointed out, sold as 25 in 1932 and this week crossed 500. However, it should be remembered that Chrysler in 1932 sold as low as 5 in the depression and last year distributed dividends on 814 in dividends. In this country, Canadian Foreign Investment sold as low as 2 in 1932 and is presently paying $1.80 a share annual dividends. If this country is to continue to prosper, as all signs would indicate, opportunities in the market will continue to abound, but it requires considerable foresight, not hindsight, to profit from the country's development.

plus of commodity exports. In other words, the United States had begun to cut the ground from under its own feet and to construct a comfortable credit base which it has every need of in order to further its own Federal schemes of social progress.

It would not only not be profitable for the United States to reduce its gold value as a purely Government bookkeeping transaction but it would cause a serious set-back to the business recovery and would destroy its monetary agreement with Great Britain and France. Apart from the domestic effects arising from the loss of confidence in the foreign exchange market which would further intensify the difficulties of the commercial situation. Therefore, in its own interests it would seem that for some time to come the price of gold is likely to remain at very close to its present level.

Hamilton Bridge

Business with the Hamilton Bridge Co. Ltd. has improved to such an extent of late that the forthcoming financial statement for the year 1936 will make that of reading the shareholders have had since 1931. Earnings will be highest in production, industrial and working capital position improved. The amount of work on hand is high, the factory and the outlook for further business is good.

Current assets exceeded current liabilities by $1,000,000 on December 31st, 1935. Such a condition brings up the question of whether Hamilton Bridge needs further financing in order to replenish this position. There are still some unissued preferred stock in the Treasury of the company and approximately 30 percent in arrears on its preferred and the company's business would normally have to be eliminated before additional shares could be sold.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, March 12.—(CP)— The golds were sold for heavy losses in today's trading session on the Toronto Exchange and moderate declines were posted by the base metals while the Oils Weakness ruled from the opening and up till the afternoon there was no rally of importance. O'Brien was a leader in the golds, receding back to close a loss of 80 cents and losses of 15 to 30 cents were recorded for Little Long Lac, Hollinger, Central Patricia, Preston, Premier and Stocks Kirkland Lake Shore weakened to 55, of more than a point.

Sell sports in the Base Metals included Noranda, Hudson Bay, Feld Credit, Consolidated Wasko-kana and Ventures. A majority of the Western Oils were down moderately.

Retail Merchants to Present a Petition

Toronto, March 13—(CP)—Proposals for negotiations between trade companies employing "Hawkers and Peddlers" will be presented shortly to Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Labor, by delegates from the Retail Merchants' Association of Ontario.

The deputation will also submit proposals regarding the bill being prepared by the Association's legal committee for uniform closing hours of retail food establishments. The executive announced the members also commenct officially for the association's drive regarding the new minimum wage bill.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, March 12 (CP)—The industrial list of Toronto Exchange was fairly firm in the early stages of today's session and moved on noon and at early afternoon times were generally higher although limited activity prevailed. After reaching 96, Consolidated Smelters backed down to 93¼ where it was unchanged for the day and International Nickel weakened a fraction.

Holders were not inclined to sell in large amounts and trading became decidedly dull. Steels, Foods, Utilities and Oils were all lower. Domestic Steel and Coal 3 eased off about a half point in quite heavy turnover and Steel of Canada Common at 80 showed a loss of 3 points.

Butter Production For Feb. Decreases

Ottawa, March 13—Production of butter in Canada during February amounted to 17,945,000 lbs. as compared of 6.8 per cent., compared with 8,031,377 in February, 1936, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported.

Output of cheese totalled 788,- 667 lbs., against 758,852 in February a year ago.

Canadian Radium Exceptionally Pure

Montreal, March 13 (CP)—Radium produced in Canada is exceptionally free from mesothorium and other impurities, Dr. G. C. Lawrence said in a paper prepared for delivery before the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy at the 36th. annual convention here next week.

In his paper Dr. Lawrence outlines the method of preparing radium needles for use in cancer treatment. Among other radium uses being investigated, he says, is the inspection of steel castings and welds for flaws where the metal is too thick for X-rays.

Recent experiments have shown, Dr. Lawrence says, that removal of a newly-discovered type method, however, is somewhat more complicated than either neulrons or X-rays, he says.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, March 12 (CP)— Wheat prices opened steady in sympathy with firmness of overseas markets but eased later on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Initial session prices were 1-2 cent lower in all wheat futures with May at $1.31 1-2, July 31 3-8 and October 31.19 1-2. Reports from Chicago on threatening rain in the United States winter wheat belt had a bearish effect on that market.

Liverpool closed unchanged to 1-8d lower.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, March 13—(CP)—Western Ontario market prices reported today by packers on hogs were $10.25 while other points noted gains. Increases of 10 to 15 cents were posted at Barrie, Hull and Peterboro.

Liverwights: Brantford $7.45; Guelph $7.75; London $7.75; Hull $8.10; Peterboro $8; Chatham $8.

Dressedweights: Barrie $10.25; Guelph $10.35; Kitchener $10.25; London $10.35 Hull; $11.15 Peterboro $10.50; Chatham $10.55.

'NICKEL' TO RAISE WAGES 10 P. C.

Will Re-open Levack Mine Closed Since Year 1931

Sudbury, Ont., March 12.—(CP)— International Nickel Company, Limited, will increase wages approximately 10 per cent. and reopen the Levack mine, closed since 1931. The Sudbury Star said it learned from authentic sources today.

The pay increase, involving distribution of an additional $1,500,000 annually to workers in the Mines, smelters and refinery in the Sudbury district and to workers in plants at Port Colborne, Ont., is the second within a few months.

Underground workings at the Levack mine have been maintained in good order. When operations are resumed there, all four mines of the International Nickel Company will be producing. Others are Creighton, Frood and Garson.

MEASLES AND FLU ARE FATAL TO 39

Far North Indian Settlements in Saskatchewan Quarantined

Prince Albert Sask., March 12— (CP)—Thirty-nine deaths were reported today in the measles and flu and influenza epidemic sweeping Ile A La Crosse and Beauval Indian settlements 200 miles northwest of here.

Pneumonia has developed from the measles and influenza and has brought deaths quickly.

Deaths in Beauval to date total 24, with 19 of the deaths in the Beauval Indian Mission School where 100 Indian children are cared for. Only a handful in Beauval village is reported ill.

At Ile A La Crosse, two treaty-Indians are dead and 13 non-treaty Indians have succumbed. Scores more are ill, it was said.

Measles Severe

Where the Indians have not had measles to contend with as well as influenza, the death toll is light.

The Indians in the area between Ile A La Crosse and Beauval, Lac La Ronge, having been through the influenza epidemic earlier, are believed to have recovered sufficiently to ward off the measles and pneumonia. No cases outside the two villages are reported.

Dr. E. J. Frederick, physician of Hudson's Bay post at Beauval, came this brief telegraphic message.

"Every family in village down with measles and pneumonia. Pneumonia setting in. Twenty-four deaths to date and many more not expected to live."

Emil Benoit, Canadian Airways Ltd. agent at Ile A La Crosse, wired: "Epidemic has not reached peak as yet. Twenty-three dead Indians and 13 deaths non-treaty Indians at Ile A La Crosse."

OPPOSE FOREIGN POLICY OF JAPAN

Opposition Chiefly Smoulders in The Ranks of the Army

(Copyright, 1937, by the Havas Agency and The Star)

Tokyo, March 13 (CP-Havas) —A new crisis brewed in Japan today as opposition to smouldered in army ranks against the declarations of foreign policy made by the new foreign minister, Naotake Sato, before the Diet.

Sato's declaration last night that the issue of war or peace in the Pacific depended primarily upon Japan's own attitude roused the fire eaters and army leaders. Unless appeased they may attempt to scuttle the cabinet of Premier Hayashi.

It was decided at a conference of generals and certain cabinet members on a special meeting Minister Sato to explain what the army leaders regard as a contradiction between his policies and those enunciated by Premier Hayashi himself.

The section of Sato's speech in the Diet last night which seemed to represent the widest divergence from the traditional view of the army had to do with the existence of the so-called "emergency" or "crisis" in Japan.

"Every quarter of the world, Japan included, now faces strained international relations," said Sato. "This, however, can be overcome by statesmanship. The present crisis, namely wel, depends on Japan's mental attitude."

DODDS KIDNEY PILLS

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Meeting Tides

By A. W. Peach

Mary saw the smokepiece speed up the tree-lined avenue to the door where the orderlies waited. Looking down from her room in the nurses' building, she watched the figure on the stretcher with some faint remembrance of having seen before the face of the quiet man who was being tenderly carried in. Her telephone rang softly; the message was brief "Emergency. Reynolds—Doctor Louis has the operation."

She went downstairs, thinking as she went that it was getting to be more and more of her fall somewhere who was called upon for the critical operations in the head cases. "If I only could love him as he loves me," she thought.

As she stepped into the room where the still form lay, a nurse looked up. "Quick, Mary, it's a serious concussion". She started to aid the other nurse when she glanced at the white face. The hard floor seemed to sink beneath her and something within her cried out with anguish. She was looking into the face of Allan Reynolds and in that look's space the past came before her—her hot accusations, his cold denials, refusal to explain. Then the last parting.

Mary had been to her task. As she removed the vest from the inside pocket a leather case fell at her feet. She picked it up and as she did so it opened, and there she saw a picture of herself.

The meaning of it—there could be but one meaning; he loved her; had been loving her for the eight years that had come and gone, and now the fates had thrust him before her, dying.

Doctor Louis was passing. He looked at her with brown eyes that always seemed to be hungry when they were turned to her. She caught his arm.

"Arnold, you must save him—you must—you—" Then she stopped, horrified and shrank away. His eyes were suddenly keen and cold.

"You mean—is he the one I have seen you thinking of when I was thinking of you?"

She nodded. She heard his quick breath, and when she looked she was frightened by the stark coldness in his eyes. That very coldness sobered her quickly. Logic forced her with all the fire of his nature; would he let a sentimental dare to fail to do something that ought to be done, just to prevent forever from her reach this old love that had come broken to her feet? It seemed hardly possible, yet—cold eyes were hard.

In the little anteroom to the operation room she made her preparations, then went in to her duties. The still face was wrested quickly in; and the old, old struggle began —he back from the living to keep forever the living.

The white-tiled, hushed room became for her a torture chamber in some wide corridor of hell. Her splendid training served her; she was able to work almost automatically. Her great fear passed; Louis was working as she had never seen him, with marvellous speed; and suddenly it dawned upon her that he was making his great sacrifice also as he labored with all the skill he possessed to save the life for her. The coldness that had been in his eyes was the coldness of men who summon their will to a great task and a still greater decision.

The bandages at last were woven about the crushed head and the quiet figure was wheeled out. Louis turned to her, his eyes dark with weariness and strain. "Mary, I am almost sorry, but I think he will live. He must have conscious care. I will have you assigned to his case."

There were hours of doubt and moments of intense question, when only the strong heart seemed to be faintly awake. Again and again she called Louis from his sleep; and again and again his ministrations rallied the quieting heart. At the end of one hour she turned to Doctor Louis. "Arnold, am I selfish?" she asked.

"Not if you love him as I love you," was his brief answer.

She caught his hand and drew it to her cheek impulsively. No other answer she had.

Then came the awakening. She had come into the room for her night watch and she spoke with the day nurse. Before she could answer there was a stirring in the bed, and a pain-wrenched voice asked over and over, "That voice? That voice?" Mary motioned the nurse out, then knelt by the bedside. She knew that she must reach in through the faint bit of consciousness that the sound of her voice had aroused. She caught the seeking fingers and laid her cheek against the bandaged head and spoke softly: "It is I, Mary who loves you. Sleep, I will be here when you awake."

She looked at the bandaged eyes. She knew that beneath their glassy stare if she could have seen there would have been a faint light of consciousness. In that light of consciousness her words reached. There was a slow relaxation of the body, a change in the heavy breathing—he slept. She drew her head down then bent and very lightly kissed his hot lips. The lost, unhappy years were forgotten. She knew that love soon would bring him back—all hers.

TARZAN'S QUEST (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Resolute 19.

"Tell Bruce?" Heather repeated. "That's what I said," Ellie said slowly, for emphasis. "I don't want Bruce to know one thing because he's like you—he wouldn't understand. After all, it's nothing terrible—just to go to a dance and get a bit excited and make a bit of a noise——" She stopped abruptly, as if conscious that her lightly spoken words did not ring quite true.

Heather took a step forward. "Oh, Vilette, you'll never do it again, will you?"

Vilette bridled. "Do—what?" she asked.

"Take too much to drink. I know it's not anything serious, but it's bad for you . . . and you're much too sweet to—to—" She stopped in deep distress, and Vilette said again, challengingly, "Do what?"

Heather took her courage in both hands. "To let a man like—like Paddy Jepson know that you—you . . . ."

Vilette laughed scornfully. "Do you think that I care about him, or that he cares about me? My dear Heather, why will you make a mountain out of a mole hill? When I was on the stage it was quite a usual thing to take half a dozen cocktails, and then wine. We all did; it's the usual thing anywhere, except in benighted holes like this! Why, on the boat coming home——" She broke off with a little laugh. "Don't you worry about me," she said, "I'm quite capable of looking after myself, but——"

"But all the same," Heather said quietly, "you don't want Bruce to know!——Doesn't that show that you're just a little ashamed, Vilette?"

Vilette flushed. "Of course I'm not ashamed; don't be such a prig." She swung back again to the mirror and began to redden her lips. "We won't argue about it," she said calmly, "but you might just tell Bobbie to hold his tongue too, will you? He'll probably listen to you, and after all, I wasn't so very bad." Her eyes flashed. "It's nothing to what I have been, I assure you."

"But Vilette," Heather began tremulously.

Vilette waved her into silence. "You're a little B. C. Heather!" she said lightly. "I've told you that before. Good heavens, I've had a drink enough time since I came home—it was a welcome home, to have a bit of fun last night."

Heather bit her without another word; it was useless to talk to Vilette when she was in this mood. She sought Bobbie and timidly broached the subject.

"Bobbie—you won't . . . I mean you won't tell any one about last night, will you? Not Effie, I mean, or any one else!"

"Well, I've never told any one before," he said offendedly.

"Before? Then—she hasn't—you don't mean that you——"

Bobbie looked a little confused. "Well it's not the first time," he said awkwardly. "You didn't know of course, but all the same . . . . no, I shan't tell any one," and then he said, "Look here, don't be sorry about Vilette. It only makes her worse when she thinks people all know and disapprove." He laughed uncomfortably. "Oh, it won't hurt her," he said. "People on the stage are different from other people—it's only that you've not used to them."

Heather turned hopelessly away. Perhaps even Bobbie considered she was "old-fashioned."

Vilette appeared at lunch looking very pretty and trim, and although she ate hardly anything, she was in high spirits, and informed the table that on the following day she was flying to Paris and back with Paddy Jepson.

Heather said nothing, but she felt as if the room in which she had so carefully guided the family for so many years had suddenly slipped from her hands.

Vilette left the house early the following morning accompanied by Bobbie. It was Saturday, and Saturday was always the day when Heather went shopping, so Effie found herself alone.

"It's too hot—I'd rather stay in," she said when Heather suggested that she go with her, but as soon as Heather was out of sight Effie went to the telephone and asked for Bruce Logan's number. When she heard his voice she drew a quick breath.

"Hullo! . . . it's me—Effie!"

"Effie!" she heard him laugh. "You're voice sounded just like Vilette's," he said.

Perhaps he was sorry it was not Vilette, she thought with faint chagrin, but she said, "I hope you won't mind—won't think it awful cheek—but can I see you?"

He laughed again, loud through the telephone," he told her. "But it this is an invitation—I shall be delighted to come down."

"I seems ages since you were here," Effie said impetuously.

"Only two days. I've been busy." "Well, when will you come—at once?" she asked eagerly, and then with sudden bravery she said, "Vilette won't be here—she's gone to Paris—flying!"

"Lucky Vilette," Bruce said lightly. "Well, I'll be down. Any of the family at home besides you?"

"Yes, Cæsar and Heather."

"All right—I'll be down before lunch."

Effie had a sudden qualm. "Bruce?" she pleaded, afraid he would ring off.

"Yes?"

"Don't tell any one I asked you."

There was a little pause before he said, "Certainly not. I will be as silent as the grave."

Effie hung up the receiver feeling absurdly guilty. What did she mean to say to him when he came? She was annoyed to find that all her fine resolutions had already oozed away through her fingers.

She wandered out into the garden and managed to find enough flowers to fill two vases. She took a long time to arrange them and was decidedly pleased with the result, and therefore it was a little disappointing when an hour or two later, Bruce drove up with a huge bunch of long stemmed roses lying beside him.

"I brought them for Heather," he said casually.

"Heather's out," Effie explained. "She's gone shopping.

Bruce stood still on the doorstep, hat in hand. "In all this heat? Shall we go and meet her?"

But Effie would not allow that; this was the opportunity she had wanted, and so she made an eager little grab at his arm to stop him. "No—don't do that. I don't know where she's gone, and besides . . . I want to talk to you—please!"

Bruce looked amused. "You funny kid," he said, but he threw his hat down on a hall chair and followed her into the sitting-room. Effie shut the door and looked at him, red-faced and nervous.

"I don't know how to begin—" she faltered, suddenly feeling very young and rather foolish.

Bruce broke in sharply, "Is anything the matter? Heather——"

Effie shook her head. "There's nothing the matter exactly, but it is about Heather—and I thought . . . there's nobody else! . . . you see, we haven't got any aunts or people like that," she apologized.

Bruce sat down on the edge of the big table and held out his hand. "Don't look so scared," he said. "Come here, and tell me all about it."

Effie went to him and laid her hand in his, and then meeting the kindness of his eyes, she broke out:

"Heather's unhappy—I don't know why, but I know she is. She looks ill too, though the others can't see it, and I'm so terrified that something might happen to her. What should we do if something did happen to her? We're all so horribly selfish . . . I'm just as bad as the rest—only I'm only just beginning to see it. Heather's had a dreadful life. She's never had any fun—she never even gets any new clothes; we get them all! I wanted to tell John what I thought, but he's always reading books and he wouldn't understand. Vilette's beastly to her—I heard her the other day—saying vile things. I know perhaps I ought not to have listened, but I did—I didn't hear it all, but I did hear her say something about someone who used to like her—Heather. I mean—and that he didn't like her now so he was trying to get him back . . . and she said it so horribly—I should have liked to kill her——"

Effie poured the words out in a torrent; they tumbled over each other, incoherently, apologetically, and yet with a sort of awful sincerity and distress in her voice that they sounded hideously pathetic. She went on breathlessly:

"I wanted to rush in and stop her, but I knew it would only make things worse—Vilette's so quick an awful temper and then . . . then I heard someone coming, so I ran downstairs and didn't hear any more. But afterwards, when I saw Heather—she looked so ill—all white and . . . " Effie began to cry. "Oh, I hate it because every one bullies Heather and always lets her stay at home, because she never, never, never has any fun or—or anything—so I thought you might be able to help me a little. I don't know how, but there isn't any one else who will, and she's getting older and older, and some day she . . . " Effie broke into bitter sobbing.

Bruce drew her into the circle of his arm, but he did not speak, and presently she went on:

"Perhaps you think I'm just—silly. But I think I've begun to grow—and—and to see things—and I think they're horribly unfair but I don't know how to make it any better . . . I just don't know how!"

He waited until her sobs quieted, then he said gently, "I don't think you've got things quite right, Effie—not quite right in some ways. You must not forget that it has made Heather very happy to look after you all—you . . . she chose to stay with you and look after you when she might have—" He broke off, and Effie checked her tears for a moment and looked at him pathetically.

"When she might have—what?" she asked in a quivering voice.

Bruce had turned his head away from her and towards the sunlit garden.

"When she might have married some one, and have gone away with him," he said. "But she didn't—she wanted to stay with you all instead, and so you mustn't blame yourself too much, and think that she hasn't been happy because . . . I think she has been happy, very happy, even if only because she knows she has done her duty!"

There was a deep silence, then Effie said bitterly, "He couldn't have loved her very much—that man!—to let her stay here and slave her life away—he couldn't have loved her very much."

"He did."

"I don't believe it!"

"It is true," Bruce said quietly. "I know, because I was that man."

WARSHIPS TAKE "BEATS" ON SPANISH PATROL

Naval Cordon Begins To Tighten About Spain And Isolate Civil War

Decrees Must be Promulgated by Each of 27 Nations

MUCH WORK AHEAD

British Patrols Biscay Coast to Cape Busto, West of Dijon

LONDON, March 13.—(AP) — The tightening of four great powers —Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany—today began taking over "beats" to police the coasts of war-scarred Spain and put teeth into the 27-nation non-intervention agreement.

Further vital steps, supplementing the naval cordon, remained to be taken, however, before the "hands off Spain" lines could be drawn tightly about the civil war.

These newly appointed supervisors of the International blockade, chosen as the non-intervention committee ended months of deliberation over details and preventive measures, met in London, Monday to complete plans.

Frontier Agents

They must provide for recruiting of frontier men to be stationed on the French and Portuguese borders of Spain. At last accounts members believed would require at least a week.

Each of the twenty-seven participating nations also must pass legislation to implement decrees providing for steps to comply with orders of the International Naval patrol.

Then, the committee hoped, the flow of munitions and volunteers to Spain would be halted.

The non-intervention committee, whose Admiral Sir H. Plunkett Forster, Commander of the Dublin Base, flies to Crete to direct the program, and put Admiral J. S. C. Gilbert, former Australian Squadron Commander, in charge of the naval patrol and Colonel Sir Herbert Lumsden in charge of the frontier guard.

Beats of Five Powers

The patrol beats were:

General Britain: The Biscay coast from the French frontier to Cape Busto, west of Ciliec; the southern coast from the Portuguese frontier to Cape de Gata, near Almeria.

France: The eastern coast from Cape Busto to the Portuguese border; the coast of Spanish Morocco, and the Balearic Islands at Majorca and Iviza.

HOUSE APPROVES INDUSTRY BOARD

Minimum Wage Rate to Effect 400,000 Workers in Ontario

TORONTO, March 13.—(CP)—Legislative action was complete today fore establishment of an Industry and Labor Board to have general regulation of Ontario Industry.

Unanimous approval was given on third reading by the Ontario Legislature yesterday.

Hon. David A. Croll, Labor Minister, on his 37th birthday, had the pleasure of seeing the important social legislation pass without opposition. Chief duty of the new board will come within the scope of the minimum wage bill now before the House.

The government will keep control of the board and is responsible for it. Three of its five members will be named by the Labor Act. Labor will name one and employers one.

Asks Reproval.

Recently-negotiated agreement between the Ottawa Valley Power Company and the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission was introduced for approval. Mr. Rowlands said its constitutional validity was open to question but provided for reference to the courts, if differences should arise.

The new agreement amends one originally made in 1931, for 40 years. Life of the agreement again gains the same but many of its terms have been altered. The original agreement was approved only by the legislature but upheld in the courts. The amending agreement ended litigation between the two parties over the original contract.

Next week the House will have a debate on a bill to establish the 33-mile speed limit on Ontario highways. A bill to abolish the limit was introduced by James Clark (Lib, Windsor-Sandwich). The government has refused to repeal the measure but may permit a non-party vote on it.

GERMANY, ITALY OFFER NEW PACT IN WEST EUROPE

Contents of Notes by Germany And Italy Are Not Made Public

NOTES NOT IDENTICAL

Franco-Soviet Agreement Believed to be Stumbling Block

London, Mar. 13 (AP)—Germany's strong objections, backed by Italy, to participating in a five-power Western European security pact along lines at present suggested were explained by German Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop today to Foreign Secretary Eden.

The German envoy called at the foreign office shortly after a Cabinet meeting which heard the long-awaited Locarno note reply—Germany's suggestion for a new Western pact to replace the agreement nullified by reoccupation of the Rhineland.

Hopes Are Diminished.

Hopes for a similar pact, to bolster the peace of western Europe, seemed dashed when Germany's rejection of the replies Germany and Italy handed to the British Ambassador in Rome and Berlin simultaneously.

Contents of the notes will be disclosed officially, however, until the British Foreign Office has had time to study them.

The Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact, which the authoritative quarters to be the stumbling block cited by the two replies, holds Germany and Italy adhering to enforcement of the agreement impossible until France turns her back on her Russian ally.

Germany To Pay Visit.

Von Ribbentrop's call was expected to be followed early next week by a foreign office visit from Dino Grandi, the Italian Ambassador, for further talks about the Locarno situation.

Though the German and Italian replies, answering a note Great Britain sent last November also to Belgium and France, were framed and delivered in concert, it was learned two sets of notes are identical.

Germany's new policy toward Belgium—sacrificing her agreement with France and Britain guaranteeing Belgium's neutrality, was said to have made some divergence in their answers.

Balance of Power Disturbed.

Informed sources in Rome declared Italy's and Count Ciano's Franco-Soviet Pact destroyed the delicate balance of power created by the old Locarno Treaty and that Belgium wants something for nothing —security guarantees without responsibility.

Bells to Ring in Canada As New King is Crowned

Some of Provinces Will Send School Children to Witness Ceremonies—Cana da to be Represented by Dominion Delegation

For the first time in 26 years Canada will unite May 12 to celebrate the coronation of a new king, George VI, first crowned successor of his "country-father" father, the king whose death Jan. 20, 1936, grieved an empire and the world.

In Ottawa, the nation's capital, and most other centres plans remained in formative stages, but most provincial and municipal governments appeared determined to make the occasion a memorable one for citizens and children, particularly. The Dominion government has not yet proclaimed the day a holiday, but it has decided to send a considerable parliamentary delegation to the coronation in London, apart from the Imperial Conference that will follow the festivities.

Church Plans Services.

Church authorities already have indicated bells will ring throughout the land and worshippers flock to offer prayers for the reign of the slim young man who will head the empire in place of his kindly father and the elder brother who held the reign of kings for a few months before abdicating.

Ottawa's officialdom believes a nationally-proclaimed holiday a certainty in perpetuation of the coronation tradition, and it is believed none but essential work will be done for a few months in connection therewith to receive the homage of the world's biggest empire.

Canadian Delegation.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King will head Canada's delegation to the coronation. Opposition Leader Bennett has invited the premiers to have government and opposition (Continued on page six)

SKIERS APPRECIATE HEAVY SNOW FALL

Local ski enthusiasts, with anticipatory glances at some two inches of snow which filtered down over this district last night, were carefully waxing and polishing their winter footwear today in hopes of enjoying at least one more week end of their favorite sport before spring's arrival. The Oak Hills district, as it was over the week end last week, will again be the favorite airway for the majority of local residents if snow and conditions remain favorable.

COMMITTEE INSPECTS CITY OWNED YARD

Following a complete inspection of the new city yards and buildings on south Church Street made yesterday afternoon by a special committee of city council composed of Aldermen Clapp, Greenleaf, Thompson and Barlow, together with City Engineer Chas. Mott and Chief Mahaffy, city foreman, a full report of what further construction or work on the yards may be needed this year will be given city council at its next regular meeting.

TWO STOVES NEEDED

An appeal for two stoves both for cooking and heating purposes for two needy families of the city was voiced today by officials of the Central Relief office. Whether in good repair or not, any donation which may be made will be called for by truck upon receipt of a telephone or personal call at the office.

TRUCK IS LOCATED BUT BADLY DAMAGED

Stolen from his garage at Coe Hill earlier this week, a truck owned by Joseph Benamith has been found by its owner in the long swamp half way between Coe Hill and Apsley. The truck had been almost completely destroyed by fire.

POLICE BLOTTER

Two minor accidents marred the peace of the city yesterday, when automobiles driven in bicycles in separate parts of the city. One driver emerging from the Maple Motors yesterday on Dundas Street collided with a bike ridden by a local boy. The youth was uninjured, while the bicycle received a badly bent frame. A bicycle alleged to be carrying no lights or reflector collided with a car driven by a city resident last night, when the latter attempted to make the turn on Church Street from Bridge Street East. No serious damage was done to either car or bicycle.

Accommodation of knights of the road maintained its low level yesterday, only two travelers seeking the overnight hospitality of the cell block at the police station.

BIRDS

The Editor, Ontario Intelligencer, Dear Sir,—

I am no naturalist, like the person quoted in your yesterday's paper, but I must take exception to his information headed to your reporter, that the birds seen on local lawns are Coldfinches. This is positively ridiculous and that naturalist should get a book, a Bird Book, that will inform him at least on the habits of some of our commonest birds like Robins and Coldfinches.

The birds in question that have been seen in flocks of 6 to 15 are Evening Grosbeaks, and they come this far south in winter in search of food. In summer they range from the Rocky Mountains to the Arctic.

Probably also some people wonder what that star is, that is so bright in the western sky these evenings. It isn't a star at all, it's the planet Venus.

Yours very truly,
Globerobin.

TWO ARRESTED IN FARADAY TWP.

David And Elmer Woodcock Held For Thefts From Cottages

Culminating a series of investigations conducted by Provincial Constables Everett Smith of Belleville and A. E. Dymond of Madoc into depredations in summer cottages in Faraday township in the vicinity of Bancroft, David Woodcock and Elmer Woodcock are being held in custody to answer charges arising from vandalism and removal of articles from several of the summer residences.

Cottages were broken and entered, with interiors in some places destroyed by means of a pick and an axe. Searching the woods in the vicinity of the cottages the police officers discovered a cache of articles, which had been identified as those taken from the summer homes. Police believe that with the arrests of the men they have been taken up a gang, which have been operating in the north country for the past few years.

Obituary

MRS. JAMES M. SCOTT
(Unity, Sask.)
(Contributed)

Mrs. James M. Scott passed away following an operation at the hospital at Unity, Sask., on March 6th.

The late Mrs. Scott was born near Verona, Ont., on Oct. 26th, 1876, her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Hosea Turner. In the year 1904 Mrs. Scott and her husband moved to the Province of Saskatchewan, where they have farmed for some years, later retiring to live at Unity, Sask.

Mrs. Scott was a woman of most admirable character and was held in high esteem by many friends in the town and district where she lived. Old friends in Hastings County will regret to learn of her passing.

Left to mourn her loss are her husband, Mr. James M. Scott, Unity, Sask., three daughters, Mrs. (Dr.) S. Argue, Nanne, Alberta; Mrs. G. Macdonald, Saskatoon, Sask. and Miss Muriel Scott, who is a teacher in the Unity School.

The funeral was largely attended and there were many beautiful floral tributes. The members of the Eastern Star and Rebekah lodges attended in a body.

Among the mourners were Messrs. Herbert Turner, Verona; Earl Simmons, Mr. Ralph Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ashley and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McMullen.

PIECE OF TRACK TORN AT HOARDS

Traffic Re-routed After Accident on Belleville-Peterboro Line

Because a broken wheel on a freight car resulted in a tie-up of traffic on the Belleville-Peterborough line of the Canadian National Railways, mail train, No. 11 due into Peterborough at 2.20 o'clock yesterday morning had to be routed via Port Hope. The train steamed into Peterborough forty minutes late. A manifest freight, which pulled out of that city early yesterday morning met with the accident on the east-bound run, tearing up a large section of track near Hoard's Station just east of Omemiceford. It was reported, when one of the wheels of the car broke. The morning mail from Belleville to Peterborough was rerouted by Port Hope.

FLOOD CONTROL IS DISCUSSED

Committee of Council to Meet Member For South Hastings

Flood control of the Moira River through some method yet to be determined will be given full consideration at a meeting of a special council committee chairmanship of city council composed of Mayor Arnott and Aldermen Thos. Wills, C. H. Clapp and H. Greenleaf, and City Engineer Mott who will meet Mr. Arthur Martlett, Rogers' constituency, and Roberts Maywood with whom Dodds is in touch, at the earliest possible date in the year, all are interested in the flood control question and their presentations were of a most interesting character, having just the right touch to make their parts natural and easy.

Character Actors Excellent

The character actors in the play were excellent. They were Miss Audrey Rowland as Grandma Bascom, the Sheldon housekeeper, who had a very difficult role sustained perfectly throughout; Mr. Bert Girling as Seth Pittman, an aged and lovable resident of the village, who was never out of character and Miss Mabel Peck as Lidey the maid with independent ideas, who usually had the last word in any battle of wits. These players deserve special credit for the finished way in which they executed exacting roles.

Mr. Lorne Andrews had the unpleasant part of the shyster lawyer and gave a fine portrayal of this trickster, who endeavoured to disarm his victim with apparent friendliness. Miss Edith Looker played the role of his gentle wife, who was completely dominated by her husband.

Rev. A. J. Sinclair who introduced the members of the cast, expressed appreciation on behalf of all for the splendid attendance, so encouraging to those, who had given so much of their time in the preparation. He thanked all those, who had assisted in the program in any way. Mr. Sinclair announced that the beautiful cast on the curtains, which all had been admiring was the gift to the R.Y.P.U. from Mr. Robert Orr, who made it.

Between acts, Miss Dorothy Croft played delightful piano selections. At the conclusion of the play Miss Mildred Lloyd was presented with roses by the cast in appreciation of her interest and tireless efforts in their behalf.

THE DRAMA

"Clearing Skies" Admirably Presented by S.R.T.C. at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church

The Sunday-School room of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church was filled to capacity last evening for the presentation of an interesting comedy-drama "Clearing Skies," by the B.Y.P.U. The performance was so well received by the enthusiastic audience, that it will be necessary to repeat it.

Under the able direction of Miss Mildred Lloyd the little village of life in Oldport Maine, was splendidly told for the whole cast cast. The scene of the play is the living and those in charge of the stage pleasant part of the shyster lawyer; management succeeded in presenting a very attractive set, well lighted and artistically furnished. Apropos the background the story of a hectic search on the part of the heir for the wealth, his grandfather, Sim Sales (Jack), the excitement lent by the danger of a rascally lawyer stealing the treasure before its rightful owner. The only clue provided is that the jewels and bonds are hidden in the "B. D." and the many suggestions of building place these letters present added to the hilarity of the play.

Mr. Bill Hales as Roger Williams Sheldon the heir and Mr. Bert Orr as Dolph Jergins, his friend with a California complex, with Miss Mary Orr as Marion Bartlett, Roger's childhood friend, and Babette Maywood with whom Dodds is smitten in love, portray the young people in the play, all are commendable actors and their presentations were pleasing, having just the right touch to make their parts natural and easy.

ALBERTA BUDGET PREDICTS DEFICIT

Session Closing Before Easter to be Shortest on Record

Edmonton, Mar. 13 (CP)—Cabinet ministers were predicting today the Alberta legislature will wind up the session by Easter, making it one of the shortest in history.

Provincial Treasurer Low presented the budget address in the assembly, featuring higher taxation on corporations and an anticipated deficit. Liberal Leader Bowlen will lead off the budget debate Monday but it is not expected to last long.

The biggest obstacle to early prorogation is the government's debt-reduction act which may not be introduced for another week. Blocked by the courts in one attempt to reduce debts by attacking interest rates, the government is expected to make reductions in principal.

Liberal Hon. Hugh Allen

To fill depleted coffers in the treasury, the government selected banks, insurance companies, trust companies and corporations generally as the best medium from which to raise $572,000 extra revenue.

The two per cent sales tax will remain in operation with the list of exemptions narrowed to create additional revenue this year.

Alberta will continue to pay half interest on bonds, debentures and guaranteed securities in 1937-38. Making the announcement, Treasurer Low said it was impossible for the province to pay full rates, considering the financial picture. The saving in the full year will be $1,415,000.

The treasurer made no budget provision for sinking fund payments except on irrigation and drainage district debentures guaranteed by the government. This will result in a saving of $958,453.

18 MINERS DEAD 9 BODIES FOUND

Tons of Slate Block Way to Nine Other Bodies

Logan, W. Va., March 13.—(AP) —Rescue workers dug wearily for the dead and for survivors today in the mine in the blast-torn Macbeth Mine.

Nine bodies of 18 who lost their lives in the terrific explosion at the Stollings Mine Company shaft were above ground—lying in funeral undertaking parlors near their homes in the bleak McBeth community. Through the night, rescuers pushed into the mine and removed debris where the nine other bodies were found.

They worked in crews of 12, stumbling and crawling into the ruins of the shattered mine to a small entry where the 18 were driven to death through the West Virginia's worst mine explosion of the century.

Leaders of the crews expressed fear that seven of the nine left in the mine might be buried under the shambles. They said two others, both machinemen—were trapped behind the almost impenetrable mass.

FRANCO'S DRIVE LOSES IMPULSE

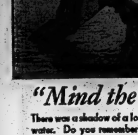
Madrid Forces Take Offensive After Hard Attack

Madrid, Mar. 13 (AP)—General Francisco Franco's drive to break Madrid's northeastern defenses has spent much of its strength, the government declared today, and Madrid's militiamen have been enabled to take the offensive.

The capital's war-weary soldiers, however, faced one of the grimmest week-ends of the war on the bloody Guadalajara front, about 44 miles from the city.

Nature was their ally. Snow, sleet and rain turned roads into quagmires, impeding the march of the Italian-Moorish-Spanish Fascist insurgent army, officers reported.

They hoped Franco's vast war machine, checked by including 30,000 china, described by them, permitting Italians, would bog down, permitting successful counter attacks or at least continued resistance.



Minor engagements were reported on Madrid's southeastern front, in the Jarama River valley, but the deadlock there has unbroken.

There was a shadow of a log deep down in the amber-coloured water. Do you remember? And he took it!—the Big One under there! Gee! What a strain for a light rod! . . . And at last — you GOT him!

Do you remember how pleased you were — and how you pulled out your pipe and filled it with fresh, fragrant Old Chum before you did another thing? Boy, oh boy! Tweed and District

Tweed—The following ladies attended the Annual Woman's Missionary Society Presbyterial in Trenton on Wednesday and Thursday: Mrs. W. S. Gordon, Vice-president, Madoc District, Mrs. Claude Barnett, president Tweed United Church, W. M. S., Mrs. H. Vance, Mrs. H. Grier, Mrs. Em. Rath, Mrs. S. H. Connor The last three ladies sang a trio "Consecration" at the afternoon session on Wednesday.

Miss Grace McVean, teacher of the Junior Third Class of Tweed Consolidated School has been ill during the week. Her room has been closed. A great many children are suffering from colds and influenza. Some classes had an attendance of less than fifty per cent of the enrolment. Others were affected to a somewhat less degree.

The Marion Dean, Evening Auxiliary met on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. A. B. Allen. There was a good attendance. Miss Isabelle Campbell presided. Miss Mary Logan gave an interesting account of a chapter of the Study Book, She was assisted by Mrs. H. Paterson and Mrs. A. J. Maynes. An Easter reading was given by Miss Myrtle Clark. Mrs. B. Connor sang "At the End of the Road". The Peace Secretary, Miss Florence Blancy, discussed the present European situation. At the conclusion of the meeting, lunch was served.

Mrs. (Dr.) M. G. Dales has been confined to her home for several days owing to illness.

Cottage prayer meeting was held on Friday night, at the home of Mrs. Carman Kleinsteiber. Rev. R. R. Nicholson was in charge.

A meeting of the group leaders and officers of the W. M. S. of the United Church was held on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John McGowan. Plans for the Special Easter Service to be held on Good Friday evening when an Easter Pageant will be presented.

According to a report from Ottawa a new post office costing $15,000 will be erected in Tweed some time during the present year. This will be much appreciated by the public and will enable the staff of the local office to carry out their duties more easily and efficiently. The site of the new building has not been chosen. It will probably be constructed so that the Public Library may be located therein, as well as be made to serve as a place for the holding of small public meetings. The new office will be a decided acquisition to our town and further enhance its attractions.

A local bootlegger pleaded guilty in a special session of the local police court held on Tuesday evening before Magistrate Lloyd. The charge was laid by Constable J. C. Hayes after searching the premises and finding the accused selling liquor illegally.

PRINCE TASSO DIES IN ITALY

Husband of Granddaughter of Late Hiram Walker Was 56 Years Old

Detroit, March 13.—(CP)—Prince Alessandro di Terre Tasso, 56, Duke of Castel Duino and husband of former Ella Walker of Detroit is dead in Trieste, Italy, friends here learned today.

His wife is granddaughter of the late Hiram Walker, founder of the Canadian Distillery that bears his name at Windsor, Ont.

The Prince was descendant of an old Lombard family whose lineage goes back to the Twelfth Century. He met his ber marriage to him in 1932, the former Miss Walker had been married Count Manfred Matuschka, Hungarian nobleman whom she divorced in 1926, and James Hiram Hyde, son of the founder of the Equitable Life Assurance Company, whom she divorced in 1921.

CANADA WANTS TO HELP YOUNG BOYS REV. A. WALLACE

Toronto Editor and Boys' Worker Guest Speaker at Banquet

MANY STORIES

Advises Boys And Fathers to Be More Pals Than Relatives

"There never was a time in the history of Canada when the older people of Ontario wanted to stand more behind the younger fellows than now; they are behind you solidly," the Rev. Archer Wallace of Toronto, Associate Editor of United Church publications and author of several books for boys, told approximately two hundred and twenty-five fathers and sons at a banquet held in Bridge Street United Church last night under the auspices of the Men's Association of that church.

Dr. Wallace appealed to his youthful audience and their parents, not through the brilliant eloquence of straight sermony but rather through the medium of his brilliant wit, and irrepressible humour, in long connection with boys' work and a thorough knowledge of the problems of the youth of the land was evident at once. Before at times held his listeners spellbound with the actual force of his eloquence. A sparkling repartee between father and son, an apparently endless fund of anecdotes and appropriate stories, told in typical Wallace style, made the speaker as one of the outstanding orators ever to appear in this city. His philosophy of life coupled in such language as was readily understandable by the youngest boy present, interspersed by the dry wit and humor characteristic of the man, was thoroughly enjoyed by all who had the privilege to hear him.

A Little Truth

"In thinking of the present day relationship between father and son, I think of the Scriptures when the Israelites were homesick at the fact that they were virtually destroyed," said the speaker. "They dug up an old proverb, "Fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge." They blamed their fathers for their troubles, and they were not altogether wrong."

When boys today sometimes get in trouble and blame their fathers, there is often a little bit of truth in what they say, asserted Mr. Wallace.

"I don't believe in spanking adults in the presence of children, but there are some facts to remember. Nobody can make us do wrong if we don't want to do wrong."

"Temptation is like a spark," the speaker continued. "A little will go out if it falls on ice, but if it lands in a gunpowder keg there is a terrific explosion and temptation is only a spark. It is the reception it gets which is most important.

"I have a cabin in Newfoundland from which I can see boats pitting against the powerful currents in the Straits of Belle Isle, because of their position. With religion and the grace God has given us, we don't have to go with the current of evil. We have the power within to give us the right to fight."

"Never has there been a time in the history of Canada when the older people wanted to stand behind the younger fellows," Mr. Wallace declared, addressing his remarks to the boys. "They are behind you solidly." The speaker illustrated this point with a story of an 85-year-old farmer, who shamed a town council into rescinding their actions of turning a group of boys out of the town hall which they wanted to use as a gymnasium. "They are boys and you are a man 85 years of age backed them up."

"Dad, there's lots of things you don't know," smiled the speaker. "Just the same as you fellows think that three-year-old sister doesn't understand, so does dad. He doesn't want to hurt you. He wants to save you pain. And you boys of today are fortunate. Boys in England 100 years ago, had little or no education. Only one in seventeen could read or write. 157,000 worked in factories and shops. Today everything is striving to help the younger generation."

JUDGE PARKER IS GUEST SPEAKER

Native of Stirling to Address Bible Class of Presbyterian Church

Stirling, March 13.—(Special)—Through the efforts of St. Andrew's and Young Men's Bible Class, one of the strongest organizations of its kind in the Stirling District, many outstanding and notable orators have been brought to Stirling to address special gatherings held under direction of the Class. On Sunday another series of special interest will be sponsored by the group, when Judge James Parker of Toronto, former resident of Stirling, and student of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday School will be the guest speaker.

Judge Parker, who has gained renown in the county court of the city of Toronto, was born in Stirling and for many years attended Sabbath School at St. Andrew's Church. Next Sunday he will return to his old home church and deliver an address on the subject "Things that Matter". Receiving his early academic training in the schools of Stirling he left his home town, he visit to the haunts of his childhood will be one of unusual interest. At the present time he is an elder in Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and active in all phases of church life.

Judge Parker, Stirling approximately thirty years ago he maintained contact continually with his many friends of this district and his return visit is looked forward to with great interest. He will be introduced to the Stirling audience by Mr. F. W. Ward, who was his teacher in a Bible class similar to that which he will address. Special music and other features will also have a part in the service, which will be directed by the Class President, Mr. Thos. Ward. Throughout the past year this organization has made rapid progress due to the efforts of the following group of officers:—President, Mr. Tom Ward; 1st Vice President, George Tulloch, 2nd Vice President, Mr. Ernest Cain; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Roy Juby.

MYSTERY INSECTS

Possibility that the "mystery insect" ravaging silver birch trees in the Kawartha district may be the common bark beetle attacking birch trees that had been weakened previously by tent caterpillars which scourged the north country with their numbers last season, was expressed by Mr. A. B. Baird, chief entomologist of the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory.

"Of course, we would have to see some of these beetles before we could make any affirmative statement," added the entomology expert.

According to reports from timber cruisers of the Fort Arthur area, mile after mile of silver birch territory has been denuded by the insect which is believed to have made its appearance from the west for the first time.

The new FORD V-8 has everything that makes a quality car!

That quality look—outside and in

There's a quality look in every line of the new Ford V-8. Its curves are clean and right. Exterior hardware is beautiful and flattering. The smart sloping windshield opens in closed body types. The top is one smooth sweep of steel. Interiors are newly furnished and appointed with care for the small details that delight women. Window mouldings and new instrument panel harmonize with the rich upholstery.

Easy-Action Safety Brakes—all-steel body

Brake response is instant—a quicker straight-line stop—because car momentum is used to help stop the car. Feather-light pedal pressure. The Ford Easy-Action Safety Brakes are of cable and conduit control type. "The safety of steel from pedal to wheel." The Ford body is all steel too — top, sides and floor and the frame structure — welded into a single unit of great protective strength. Safety Glass all around at no extra charge.

Entirely new standard of economy—traditional V-8 performance

Owners advise us that the improved Ford V-8 engine establishes the highest mileage records per gallon of gas of any Ford car they have ever driven. They add, too, that it provides the brilliant performance for which the Ford V-8 engine has always been famous, split-second acceleration, and plenty of smooth reserve power for any emergency.

Big-car comfort and roominess

The spacious, relaxed riding comfort you associate with a car of much higher price is another quality feature of the new Ford V-8. Refinements of Ford Centre-Poise design, all the head, leg and arm room six passengers need, and deep, restful seat and back cushions make the new Ford V-8 the comfort car for 1937. You'll want to ride in it—drive it. See your dealer about taking out a new Ford V-8.

MULTIPLYING SAFETY

In "Readers' Digest" there recently appeared a formula for motorcar drivers, which the Industrial Accident Preventive Association has seen fit to send out as a special report. It concerns the distance required before the pedal is touched by the foot, and these old figures cannot be repeated too often in an age which thinks of top speeds not always, but almost always. Here it is:

"Barney Oldfield, dean of American race drivers, presents the formula for safe driving:

"When your speedometer goes to 50, think of 55 feet. That is how far the car will travel after you decide to stop, before your foot can touch the brake pedal. When the speedometer says 40, think of 44 feet; if 30, think of 33 feet; and so on. Experts call this the "reaction distance."

"To find out how much room you need to stop safely at 40 or 50 miles an hour, Oldfield's formula multiplies the 'reaction distance' by three. At fifty miles an hour you would multiply 55 by three, they know that a distance of 165 feet would be necessary to stop the car."

These are not the top rates for many drivers, whose speeds are not unusual on the highways. Unfortunately these drivers do not try to use a little arithmetic to see what trouble they may be running into when there seems no limit to their speed.

'HOME FRONT' and 'FOOD FRONT'

Interesting in the light of the contention made by the Right Honorable David Lloyd George on Friday in the British Commons, that Britain had to guard the British food front against the vulnerability of attack in the event of war, is the raising not long ago of the cry of the "home front", by Sir William Beveridge in three articles in The Times of London. Their title was "The Home Front in War." New York Herald-Tribune says their "implications are almost breathtaking". The two viewpoints are however, quite different.

There is a civil angle to the new preparedness of Britain, Sir William, who was in the Munitions and Food Ministries during the war, declares in these articles. He contends that preparedness includes such things as the advance preparation of plans for controlling foods, drafting labor, fixing prices and so on against the possibility of war. The Herald Tribune, noting that such proposals are common in the United States says it gives one a shock to read of consideration of "the socialization of a large part of wartime industries from top to bottom, replacing the profit and wage system by a system of nationgal service at pay for all ranks alike."

The Herald Tribune refers to the greatest shock in the reference to the need of these precautions "now".

Sir William advocates the organization of a standing, trained force for civilian aid to quell fire and panic in event of war, maintain vital services and combat gas attack. He then urges economic survey of all vulnerable areas, production of foodstuffs there and readjusting distributing facilities to counteract the dangers of air attack or meet the problem of mass evacuations.

He refers to the necessity of stopping the growth of London and scattering of population by peacetime location of industry or denying war-risk insurance.

He points to the necessity of a feeding policy and says that meantime agricultural methods must be remade in accordance with it. He even suggests that haymaking is an inefficient way of utilizing the feed value in domestic grass crops and proposes the installation of "grass-drying plants" to replace the haystacks which are so lovely a feature of the landscape of England. That dairy herds should be greatly increased to provide live stores of beef which can be drawn down in war, though meanwhile yielding milk which can be drunk in peace.

It is such consideration that leads Sir William to the proposal of the establishment of a "general staff for the home front" — a sort of Department of the Civilian, to be erected besides its martial counterparts of air, war and navy", the Herald Tribune says.

One of the peace time blessings of the scattering of population and drinking more milk will add to peacetime wellbeing. The Times is quoted as saying that only by sacrificing "the outward tokens of a free life" can "freedom itself be preserved."

Mr. Lloyd George's attitude presses towards improvement of agricultural conditions. He says while money is being spent by millions on armaments, the distressed farm areas are being neglected to strengthen the weakest link in the chain of defence — the food front — weakness of which he says almost brought Britain to her knees in the days of 1914-1918. He pointed out that before the war 7 per cent of Britain's population lived on the farms and today only four point six per cent as compared with 20 per cent in Belgium, 25 per cent in Holland and 30 per cent in Germany today. He said the food ship was fragile and subject to attack by bigger and greater airplanes and submarines.

These are the serious problems that British Parliamentarians have to face in the rearmament era. Life is becoming very earnest in the Old Land with the preparedness of the nations against surprise.

WEDDINGS ARE SUCH FORMAL AFFAIRS THAT FOLKS DO NOT LOOK for sensational thrills, but once and a while something does happen at a wedding which makes the Front Page. At Chattanooga, Tennessee, a wedding was scheduled for the Cumberland Presbyterian Church recently. Just before the wedding the preacher was informed that the couple had been married secretly some time before. There were 500 engraved invitations, the church had been decorated, and a reception at the home of the bride arranged. The minister was in a dilemma, he could not be a party to such a deception without injury to his conscience and self-respect. He told the man, who promptly fainted, then revived and discussed the matter with the preacher until dawn. Three evenings later the guests assembled for the wedding heard Minister Johnson invoke the usual nuptial blessings upon all concerned. Then he said:—"We are gathered together for the announcement of the wedding of this man and this woman." The guests gasped and leaned forward in the pews with added interest..... Said Preacher Johnson:.. "Mary Smith, have you broken this man to be your wedded husband:.. Have you loved, honored and obeyed him?".... "I have," replied the bride that was... "Frank, have you taken this woman as your lawful wedded wife? Will you provide and care for your worldly goods?" queried the minister. "I have," replied the groom that was... "Let us pray," said the preacher.

TYRONE POWER, Jr., IS A WORTHY SON OF HIS FATHER. Many theatregoers will remember with pleasure Tyrone Power, the father, in various Canadian cities, and now the son has become an outstanding figure in Hollywood and the cinema world generally from his work in "Lloyds of London." The father while at work on "The Miracle Man" in 1931, suffered a heart attack. It was then the younger Tyrone had rather a rough time trying to get a foothold in the theatrical business. He understudied in several stage productions then came to Hollywood where he played some small parts. Now Darrell Zanuck, a larger one in "Ladies in Love," then his great chance in "Lloyd's of London," in which he made more than good. Tyrone Power, the elder, left a good name and a memory revered as a good actor and good citizen. Tyrone Power, the younger, is carrying on the family tradition for hard, painstaking effort and respect for his calling—may he continue to walk in the footsteps of his father and if when his last curtain falls folks can say he was as good a man as his father life for him will have been worth while.

WOMEN ALL OVER CANADA ARE TAKING A KEEN INTEREST IN THE HOME IMPROVEMENT PLAN. Naturally any home improvement affects the women of the household for they spend the most time in the home, entertain their friends there and have work to do every day, active or supervision, keeping the home clean and in order. The more comfortable the home the more hospitales there is bound to be within its walls. With happiness health must be considered, and the home to be perfectly happy must be healthy. Hence the interest women all over Canada are taking in the home improvement plan. Husbands can no longer pull a poor mouth—can't afford to modernize and make sanitary the bathroom; can't afford to make working in the kitchen a delight instead of a drudgery; can't afford a modern living room, a modern basement, or modern attic. In other words he can't be taken out of home life by the H. I. P.' which cans most of the can'ts. Mother knows that Daddy can get the money at the bank at the lowest interest rate ever offered for home improvement purposes, and three years to pay with easy monthly instalments. Money spent on the home protects and enhances the investment besides bringing into the home circle that pride of home in its appearance and appointments that adds so much to material happiness. There are so many things about the home that can be improved under this plan that a careful study of its provisions should be made by every family. For a small monthly payment any home can be made healthier and handier, more comfortable and of better appearance, adding materially to its value.

The first of the bridges to be carried away by the spring freshets on the Moira River at Belleville was on the site of the lower bridge and the event happened on March 22nd, 1865. It was a wooden structure built upon the top of iron girders, which at high water were almost washed by the current and was erected in 1857 by the county, to which Belleville was then attached. The girders were swept down stream to the sawery and were used later in rebuilding the upper bridge which was destroyed by the flood of 1866. A second bridge at the site of the lower bridge was carried away by the ice some years later.

Parliament Hill Hears

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ralph Maybank, one of the Liberal members for Winnipeg, tells a quite anecdote on himself in the latest issue of the same name in Alberta, who achieved some reputation as a goal-keeper in hockey games several years ago, and who was outstanding in a series in which he kept goal for the province.

One morning the Winnipeg paper carried the usual social night-column line: MAYBANK SAVES ALBERTA. It was just after the Winnipeg member had been elected to office. Manitoba finances and politics were just then in an extremely critical state, threatening to collapse any moment.

It is little wonder then as he proceeded to his law office that morning, Ralph Maybank, who himself was repeatedly hailed by people who knew him, felt the need of them taking being the very natural question why, if he was in the "saving" business, he wouldn't start in on his own province!

o—o—o

I hear — that Liberal members in caucus were overwhelmingly in favor of getting through the session by Easter — that the Conservative leader thinks it might be accomplished, if the government will drop the contentious Transport Bill — that a few members are privately criticising the government for its apparent slightting of the session for the purpose of getting decks cleared for the coronation — that after a series of exceptionally busy summers, the top-notchers of the service are glad of the prospect of a quiet recess with the leaders away in London — that the confidential advices of the government from British and foreign capitals justify it in not the conclusion of informed observers in the press about the war situation in Europe, namely, that it can be averted for another six months or a year, probably can be avoided for at least a decade or more, with Britain's strength the chief deterrent factor.

o—o—o

I like this anecdote because it throws so much light on the zeal of Mackenzie King and the characteristics of Hon. W. R. Motherwell.

It happened at Melville, Sask., in the campaign of 1926. Mackenzie King had a heavy schedule and he won out, was passing through Melville in the afternoon on his way to another point, where he was to speak that night. The arrangements called for him to pause at Melville, rest quietly in the hotel for several hours, and then proceed on his way.

It was Dr. Motherwell's riding, and he was anxious to have the Liberal leader speak. Just the same the chief's wishes must naturally be respected.

So when the leader's party reached Melville, the Minister of Agriculture did no more than mildly admit that a number of Liberal women had gathered in the town hall and would be glad to have the Liberal leader come over and shake hands.

Mr. King's first impulse was to say no, he was resting. But it seemed hardly gracious not even to put in a momentary appearance before the waiting ladies.

When he arrived at the hall, there seemed to be about a thousand women present, and they were all Liberals. Mr. Mackenzie King mingled with the crowd and seemed to be enjoying himself.

Then the minister later he came to Dr. Motherwell, and said he had enjoyed meeting in the crowd say a few words.

Dr. Motherwell dismissed the suggestion, said Mr. King must rest. But perhaps he would want to meet the ladies.

The Liberal leader did meet a few more and then sought out the Minister of Agriculture again.

"I really think I ought to say a few words," he suggested again.

Dr. Motherwell was still adamant. No speeches.

But the prime minister was now fully in the spirit of the gathering. For minutes later he came back a third time, quite insistant:

"I really must make a brief speech."

So Dr. Motherwell, having accomplished what he was angling for all the time, relented, and the Liberal leader was escorted to the hall. Some time later Mr. Mackenzie King proceeded to his hotel, having made a fighting speech of about an hour and a half!

The quite of Dr. Motherwell comes out also in the anecdote they tell of his difficulty with his colleagues when Fielding was Minister of Finance.

Economy was the watchword of the period. Fielding was making estimates right and left. Dr. Motherwell took a stack of his own one day before the treasury board and was aghast when Fielding took them in his usual cheerful way with four in a ruthless manner.

"You don't have those again," he said. "I'm afraid I didn't quite catch the situation. They will have to be gone over in committee. Let me have them and bring them back."

The story goes that he brought them back, another quite unchastened, except that he had been careful to place at the top an appropriation for a new experimental station at Kentville, N. S. or some other project in the Motherwell constituency, of course, a great enthusiast about the Maritimes. He got away with the appropriation again, his blue pencil poised gangerously.

His eye took in the purport of the top item. His cry warmed. He consulted his colleague on his wisdom in electing to go ahead with such a valuable development.

Then he said: "We've a lot of things to do to-day and I think, now that you've gone through these again, we'll just show them through as they are....."

Which suited Dr. Motherwell to a tee.

Did you know ... that Hon. Ian Mackenzie often gets letters from his "home folks" written in Gaelic? At this point the secretarial staff, normally so efficient, admits defeat. The Minister answers these personally.

CHICAGO'S UNDERGROUND FREIGHT SYSTEM HUM

While a taxi-cab tie-up still hampered the city's street transportation system, 450 underground tunnel workers went on strike in Chicago, paralyzing the city's $300,000,000 underground freight transportation network and leaving thousands of dollars worth of perishable goods standing in railway terminals. Huge quantities of ashes, cinders and garbage usually removed from hotels and restaurants by the underground method were piling up while the strikers, clad in heavy clothing to resist the underground chill, held the freight system idle. A group of strikers are shown here munching sandwiches and drinking coffee supplied by sympathizers.

Letters to the Editor

BEACH NAME

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,

So much has been said regarding a name for Belleville's summer resort, how about— Harmony Beach or Georgian Beach?

FOOLING THE VETERANS

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir,—

During the War, our Governments made many promises to us while in khaki "We will look after you, we will see you get a job when you return", but now when our age prevents us from securing positions on the labour market, we are fooled by politicians. In fact in the local staff of the liquor store, three ex-servicemen are dismissed, without cause, and three civilians take their places, in another case a civilian employee of the supervisation, is appointed to fill a position which it seemed rightfully belonged to some ex-serviceman. When exception occur in the local civil service staffs, these are immediately filled, by transfers-in from other parts.

"Dismissed Veteran"

With four and half years' war service.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma brawt home a skopicious looker square package today, and after supper I said, Hay ma, what's in that package you brawt home?

O yes, I almost forgot, lucky at cards, unlucky in wright, ma said, and pop said, How's that again? and she said, I mean the prize I won was a 2-pound box of my favorite chocklits and I don't know how I'm going to say from them and I dont know how I'm going to eat them and still keep my weight down to per level.

Well O, ma, I got an idea, I said, Why don't you give me a piece every time you take one yourself, and then you'll be sure you got to many because you know how you feel about me eating too much candy. How's that for a idea, ma? I said, and she said, It has flaws.

I can suggest a way pop said, You mile put the box on some high and distant object such as one of the rafters down the cellar, and then you'll not only have to make quite a rip to get to it but you'll also be compelled to drag the ladder half way across the celler, he said, and I said, I got another idea, ma why dont you leave me be your trainer and I will give you more than 2 pieces a day I dont care if you get down on your knees.

At that rate it wont be long before I have practically 2 pounds of wonderful candy stale on my hands ma said, and I said, No you wont ma, because it will be on my hands, and no candy ever really seems stale to me.

My my how thankful ma said, and pop said, You mile make it a rule to eat it only while standing on the top of a stepper, that awt to spare you many a nourishing morsel.

You bet, I'll solve the problem in my own way, ma said.

Which she started to do, opening the box and picking out special pieces she liked the shape of and eating them while she read a article in her Modish Lady magazine called Count Those Calloreis.

Absence of Snow Saves $5,000 To Belleville is Estimated

"Sissy" Winter Nears Close After Most Unusual Behaviour

EFFECTS ON SPORTS

The "sissy" winter of 1936-37 promises to become famous in local reminiscences. Grandchildren in the year 1960 may even refer to it slightingly as the year of the "big thaw".

For such is it already known in local records. Search through those that have been kept at city hall and elsewhere for the past many years fails to produce records of any winter which might even closely duplicate the present one, in continued mildness, lack of low temperatures, and general all around "open season". There have been alternate wet and dry, snowy and fair days, but the chief characteristic has been the lack of snow both in the city and through the rural districts.

Belleville alone will save in the neighborhood of $5,000 in snow removal costs this year, it is estimated by City Engineer Mott, money ordinarily spent on men and trucks for removal of the ice and snow mainly through the business sections. How much the County of Hastings will save has as yet not been estimated. But snow fences erected by the county, equipped their up this year merely as a matter of formality, it was indicated.

Railways Benefit

Railroads in their Ontario divisions will also realize a tidy saving from snow removal budget. All the complaints that have been heard come only from those, who at considerable expense, equipped their heavy trucks with plows, then sat back and wailed for the snow which did not come.

Loud also in their lament have been the skiers and skaters who this year have found bare ground and dust instead of ice and snow popularly supposed to cover this region during a certain portion of the winter season. For a long time before Christmas, a procedure that has been an annual event for many years was carried out. Skis were taken out of attics, lovingly waxed, boots were greased and clothes repaired in anticipation of fun on the hills where snow is generally found. But the annual sport this winter has been afforded.

Taxis Lightened

Janitors this winter have found their tasks lightened, in the matter of firing boilers and heating systems at any rate. R. H. Greer, United States coal mining representative, a visitor to Belleville recently estimated the drop in fuel consumption in Ontario this winter to be about twenty per cent below that of normal, according to statistics of the various companies.

But, offsetting the benefits received have been the bad effects. Respiratory diseases in Belleville and district this year have reached a high level, due for the most part to the irritation suffered from the breathing of gritty particles of dust which have blown for days at a time from bare city streets like miniature storms in the Sahara.

"Our greatest concern has been felt in this type of disease this winter," declared one prominent public health nurse. "Our cases have been doubled, it is almost safe to say, in this respect."

Snow As Sanitation Agent

Snow, the great sanitation agent which blankets and holds to the ground these flying particles of grit, is one of the valued blessings it was pointed out.

Fears of a flood this spring have died daily in official circles. Though ice of a respectable thickness has been harvested from the bay. Quinte this year, the rampaging Moira of last spring will be by no mere trickle lately, following some swelling due to mild winter rains which filled creeks and streams. Only once did the river freeze across, a shallow surface, which broke up repeatedly under the onslaught of rain and mild weather.

Local record keepers keeping tab on district conditions day after day are agreed the present winter will be listed as one fit to be called "a slushy one".

Plans Told for Salvaging Lusitania's Gold Bullion

New York, March 13—Detailed plans for the expedition which will go to the floor of the Atlantic off the Irish coast this May in an effort to salvage the millions in gold bullion which went down with the torpedoed Lusitania more than twenty years ago were revealed for the first time today by Captain John D. Craig, famous deep-sea diver who has devised special equipment for the purpose.

Writing in The American Magazine, Captain Craig states that the position of the lost liner has been located exactly, that a diver has already stood on her slime-covered hull, and that he feels confident that the vast treasure she contains will be recovered.

Incidentally, if the expedition is successful, it is expected to settle definitely the long-disputed question of whether the Lusitania carried a cargo of munitions for the Allies, as claimed by Germany and denied by Great Britain. In this connection, there is possible significance in Captain Craig's statement that before the ship is actually entered, the divers must report by radio to London for "information of great importance" before they proceed. What this information is, the Captain says he does not know.

The expedition will operate from the British salvage ship, Orpheir, eleven miles off the Old Head of Kinsale, Ireland, where the Lusitania went down in fifty-two fathoms of water on May 7, 1915, with a loss of 1,198 lives.

Craig states that he has already tested, in 300 feet of water, a light rubber diving dress of his own invention which will permit him and his men to explore the secrets of the sunken liner and retrieve the treasure in her storeroom and safes.

"From the deck of the Orphir," he says, "we are going down to a depth never before conquered by men in rubber suits, to seek a precarious working base on the silted hull. Struggling there against a two and a half knot current, under a water weight equivalent to 154 tons, we expect to blast our way through her inch-thick plates, tailor a path into her hold through a labyrinth of wreckage and debris, and tear out her gold and mystery with gigantic irons.

"My own crew, consisting mostly of American college men and technicians, now busy will co-operate with a British diving crew in reclaiming the Lusitania's treasure, but, as its special job, will take motion pictures of every step of the operation at the bottom of the sea. To do this we shall have to carry daylight down with us. The lamps we have perfected for this purpose are even brighter than day. They will illuminate the hull with the light of 250,000 candles."

The rubber suits which Craig and his men will wear are fitted with a helmet of light alloy, stronger than aluminum, and are "self-contained" — that is, they carry their own air supply, several containers of oxygen and helium under 2,000 pounds pressure. In experiments already made with the suit in Wisconsin rock quarries under 300 feet of water, Craig discovered that he could breathe air without nitrogen hat as well as the earth's normal atmosphere, using helium in its place.

"With our helium mixture to breathe," he says, "we can work two hours at a time at the tremendous depth of 312 feet, and our decompression time from that depth is just one-seventh that required by the standard diving dress. This is because helium escapes from our tissues in one-seventh the time of nitrogen. Our dress is so light that we may be lowered by a cable snapped into our helmets which will not break under the light weight of our equipment, and we don't have to worry about getting airlines fouled."

Anchored buoy cables will be used as "elevators" by the divers. But if they lose their way on the bottom, they have no need to worry. Simply by inflating their suits they can rise to the surface where their bright helmets will be visible to those on the salvage ship. Also, they carry battery lights in their suits with which they may communicate with the surface.

High explosives probably will be used to blow in the upper side of the ship, after which grisly looking hooks will tear out the loosened plates. Specially devised cameras will picture the whole operation, being motor-driven for the exploding shots, at which time the men will be out of the water.

Craig has had long experience in diving and submarine camera work which has taken him to forty-five different countries. His crew includes Gene Nohl of Milwaukee, his co-cameraman; Jerry Crockett of Hollywood, chief cinematographer; Jack Brown, Milwaukee amateur youth who has been diving to wrecks since he was fifteen, and Tom Whitely, co-director and film technician, who incidentally was aboard the Titanic when she sank in 1912.

The diver who actually finds the Lusitania's treasure, if it is there, will receive 5 per cent of it, under international salvage laws, estimates of the amount run as high as $15,000,000.

EAST SEYMOUR

East Seymour.—Miss Eva Milne has returned from an extensive trip embracing Lockport, N. Y., Guelph and Toronto and extending over five months.

Rev. T. A. McMillan and Mr. Roy Wilkinson from St. Andrew's Church Session, Burnbrae, attended the Kingston Presbytery on Tuesday, March 9th, and were accompanied by Mrs. J. A. McMillan, also Misses Alice Hume and Marion Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Howe spent the super hour on Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hume.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Oddie, Misdames J. Thompson and John Rannie attended the funeral of Mrs. Ed McFarlane of Toronto on Monday. The deceased had been in ill health for some time and finally succumbed to a severe heart attack.

Mr. John Glassford of Campbellford was found dead in her home on Sunday, March 7th. She lived alone, had been getting her mid-day meals at a neighbor's and except on Saturday nights also slept out. On Sunday when returning from church a friend called on her and was unable to get any answer. She notified Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnston who were close friends of the deceased. Mr. Johnston was obliged to crawl in the bathroom window as all doors and windows were securely locked and found her dressed for retirement, unconscious on the bathroom floor, with the electric light still burning. Her sister Mrs. Brennan of Toronto was wired and arrived on 8.30 p.m. Sunday. A nurse was procured and everything was done to revive her but she gradually grew weaker and departed this world at 5 p.m., Tuesday, March 9th, never having regained consciousness. The deceased's maiden name was Ella Benor, a native of Campbellford and a highly respected citizen, a member of St. Andrew's Church, a generous friend and neighbour, who will be greatly missed in her wide circle of friends. Her husband predeceased her about five years ago. There remain to mourn her loss one sister, Mrs. Brennan, Toronto; one brother, James Benor, of Florida; two nieces and two nephews of Campbellford and Corbyville, also a step-son, Mr. Ross Glassford of Hamilton. The funeral took place on Thursday, March 11th, Interment in Campbellford cemetery.

Death rang quietly to Mrs. Robert Matthews on Saturday morning, March 6th, following a stroke early Friday morning, never having regained consciousness. She had been in ailing health for many months and after a fall in October breaking several ribs, she gradually grew worse until the Angel of Death relieved her of all suffering and pain. The deceased was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ketchen, a native of Seymour; of a retiring quiet nature she was devoted to her family and to her church, Burnbrae Presbyterian. Left to mourn are three daughters, Mrs. Harper Rollins, of Stirling; (Ruth) Mrs. Sills, of Toronto, and Miss Loetia Matthews, at present in Florida; two sons, Robert and William of the Seventh Concession of Rawdon; four sisters, Mrs. Tack, U.S.A., Mrs. Thos. Barginson, Hawkins; Mrs. H. Johnston, Tyrenion; Mrs. Butters, Toronto; four brothers, Gilbert and Alex in the Western Provinces, John and James, Havelock. The lovely floral tributes were silent symbols of the esteem in which the deceased was held. The funeral was held on Monday March 8th. A short service was held in the home, then Rev. McMillan conducted the service in Burnbrae Church, assisted by Rev. R. J. Kofford of Stirling. The choir sang "Sometime We'll Understand". The pall-bearers were Messrs. M. Totten, W. W. Little, Wm. McKenzie, Robt. Clough, W. A. Hume, S. Linn. Interment was made in Burnbrae cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Golden

Town Hall at Roblin's Mills Scene of Festival

REMINISCENCES

Fifty years ago, in the old Spencer homestead on the Fourth concession of Ameliasburg Stephen A. Vancott took the eighteen year old Emma Spencer to be his bride. On Tuesday evening of this week, on March 9th, to be exact this spirited couple whose life together down the long trail of Time has been the exemplification of mutual love, contentment and happiness celebrated the golden wedding anniversary surrounded by a large number of friends and relatives.

Time has been generous to Mr. and Mrs. Vancott. Sitting among over one hundred guests in the Town Hall at Roblins Mills last Tuesday evening with the congratulations of their friends, which are legion ringing in their ears; with the soft light from a huge wedding bell some three feet in diameter and encircled with a wide band of gold ribbon suffusing their faces in a rosy glow, this fine old couple with the light of happiness showing in shining faces and twinkling eyes, culminated fifty years of wedded life with the same enthusiasm as they started on life's broad highway on that memorable days of yesteryear.

Lives Reflected by Health

As before mentioned the hand of Time has left no outstanding marks on Mr. and Mrs. Vancott. The reflection of lives well and truly lived shows on features that still exude a rosy glow of health. Mrs. Vancott's brown glossy hair is still of the same sheen as it was on her wedding day. Not a single strand of silver mars its deep, rich color. Yesterday in the privacy of their small well-kept dining room of her home, she bustled about the preparation of the mid-day meal.

Twinkling eyes shone from beneath the brown trimmings of her hair. "Old?" she echoed, in reply to a query, "Why I am as young as a fiddle string and as merry as a cricket's harp". "Then to what reason do you attribute your fine appearance?" she was asked. Quick as a flash came the reply. "Because I was married when I was eighteen years old. Why had I waited until I was twenty five before I married I would have looked twenty years older today. Add to that lots of work, and a life well and cleanly lived and you have the answer."

"I have worked hard all my life and expect to until I am called away. Every day I do all my own housework, and take great enjoyment from it. Mrs. Vancott's sentiments regarding her longevity and young looking appearance were echoed by her hardy spouse. "Certainly it agrees with one," he said. "I have worked all my life and never had a sick day until a few years ago when I developed a touch of pneumonia, and last year when I fell off a hay wagon and broke a small bone in my foot."

Always a Farmer

Referring to his life Mr. Vancott stated that "Prince Edward County was always good enough for us. We were born here and have lived all our lives within a small radius of the place in which we now live."

An inherent love or things agricultural and a natural aptitude for the better things of farm life brought Mr. Vancott to the forefront of farmers in his district. Not once in his long tenure of life and surroundings did the temptations of a life in the city or town appeal to him. "I have always been a farmer and have lived my life so far in rural surroundings and have in the midst of the things I love so well I expect to die."

Mr. Vancott can lay claim to something of a record for only once has he changed his post-office address during his seventy five years of life and that when rural mail delivories came into being.

He joined the Methodist Church some forty-seven years ago, and during that time has been a valued member of the United Church fold.

Politically, a devout interest in things pertaining to the welfare of his country has been a feature of his life. He has been a member of the Liberal party and a staunch supporter of the party's principles.

He joined the Masonic Order and is a member of Mizpah Lodge, Wellington.

Mr. Vancott was born in the Township of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, on March 9th, 1862, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Vancott. He received his education in the district schools of his native township.

Mr. Vancott's father was a native of Holland, coming to Canada when a young man. He was a farmer and a cooper by trade.

Mr. Vancott's mother was a native of Ireland, coming to Canada when a young girl.

Mr. Vancott has been a member of the Methodist Church since his youth.

Mr. Vancott's father died when Mr. Vancott was a young man, and his mother married again, her second husband being Mr. Thomas Hall, of Ameliasburg.

Mr. Vancott has been a farmer all his life, and has lived on the farm on which he was born for the past 75 years.

Mr. Vancott's brother, Mr. Peter Vancott, died in Belleville about 15 years ago.

Mr. Vancott's sister, Mrs. Hall, died in Ameliasburg about 15 years ago.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"After The Thin Man" Four Weeks Lowe's Theatre, Toronto

"After the Thin Man", starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, one of the Belle Screen's new still better day, maulnee daily is a sensational sequel to "The Thin Man", produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in response to remarkable public demand for another mystery by Dashiell Hammett.

Powell and Miss Loy excel their stellar performance in the original and the story is even more intriguing. Supporting cast of favorites includes James, Elissa Landi, Joseph Calleia, Jessie Ralph and others. A smart little wire-haired terrier that played such a clever role in "The Thin Man".

The picture was directed by W. S. Van Dyke, managing director of the first picture, who is an ardent mystery story reader of his own accord. Hunt Stromberg, former star newspaper man was the producer.

"After the Thin Man" presents a sparkling comedy-mystery placed in San Francisco. Powell, as the detective, Nick Charles, arrives home after a New York venture determined to abandon the profession of sleuthing. But he encounters immediate mystery, murder and intrigue and finds that extricating himself from the aristocratic heights of old Nob Hill to the underworld opium dens of Chinatown.

It may be set down with definite certainty that no one in the audience will guess the solution of the mystery in advance. The writer candidly admits to amused confusion all the way.

"After the Thin Man" is a picture that will run in original a close race for popularity. It is more than a sequel for it picks up the high gear where "The Thin Man" left off and it never slackens are pace.

"After the Thin Man" comes to the Belle Theatre, still more stars at Lowe's Theatre, Toronto.

Community Sing

Something new and refreshingly different is announced for presentation on the same program, when Belville's Community night features Community sing, will be presented on the stage of the Capitol Theatre, Wendall Hall, Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, comedy singing team, are featured for exhibition on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.15. The feature attraction starts daily at 3.00, 7.30 and 9.40 p.m.

"Wings of the Morning" — Belleville and vicinity screen lovers will be pleased to learn that the Belle Theatre, will present commencing next Saturday, the all-technicolor production "Wings of the Morning" featuring Annabella and Henry Fonda and Leslie Banks. This production reveals tender romance, flaming action, drama, spectacle and comedy, the after five weeks at His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal, and is now the talk of Toronto.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 12 (CP)—Patrolman William Race's description of a "pre-world boy who was working too hard in pushing a baby carriage" was read in police yard. He filled the blanked, found the casualty and identified.

The boy was arraigned in children's court on their charges.

Jerseyville, Ill., March 12 (CP) The ham that wouldn't stay stolen is dead of natural causes. Five times after chicken thieves made forays on Edward Sutherland's roost, the hen managed to find her way home. Sutherland said once she was gone for weeks before she returned to her nest.

"Horse Feathers" and "Private Worlds"

Commencing Sunday midnite at 12.05 and playing Monday and Tuesday, the Capitol presents two great revival hits of yesteryear. Continuing our policy of presenting only the great hits we are pleased to offer Marx Bros. in "Horse Feathers" and Claudette Colbert in "Private Worlds".

If it's really a long, loud laugh that this country needs, Groucho Marx and his gang of nuts are of it at the Capitol Sunday midnite, when four Marx Brothers, with more cocsanity than ever, are carrying about in "Horse Feathers", shown as revival hit No. 1.

This time the setting is the old Huxley College, with all four of the Marx-men determined to fight thereby their alma mater, against the threatening gestures of rival Darwin. Groucho is the college president, a post he has accepted because it seems the only way in which he can get his son Zeppo out of college. Zeppo has been a freshman for twelve years. Under Groucho's tutelage he wins his diploma, his letter in football and the girl—one at a time, of course—after some of the most ferocious sequences this reviewer has yet seen on the screen.

Harpo and Chico Marx are as whimsically funny as ever. Harpo is the town dog-catcher until during his way through college, chases cats all the time, instead of girls. Now and then, however, he errs, but the girls are so pretty that it's quite the human thing to do. Chico is an amorous iceman and a football star in the rough-and-tumble in fact, that even the referee quails when he starts through the football field with a football under his sweater. At the end they literally tear the field to celebrate Huxley's touchdown, and what matter if the college is burning and the while these nit-wit Nero fiddle. Dance and music are mixed with the campus cuties? It's all in fun!

"Private Worlds"

Phyllis Bottome's widely read and engrossing story of a woman who learned to cast aside the dream of love for reality, "Private Worlds" with Claudette Colbert in the starring role, shown as sce revival hit No. 2, commencing Sunday midnite.

A psychological love drama revealing the inner mental inhibitions that are the true villains of romance, "Private Worlds" is a play of the strange and dramatic background of a hospital for the insane.

Its heroine is a woman of unusual beauty and charm, a woman of sweetheart she lost in the war. She has fought into the mental ills of others but does not realize that this strange attachment is threatening her own mind.

Her two professional colleagues are Dr. Mal McCrea, whom she loves and respects, and Charles Boyer, a Frenchman who has had unfortunately dislikes.

The tragic drama of this little group reaches its climax when Mc-Crea is lured from his wife, Joan Bennett, by the doctor's vampire sister and Miss Bennett becomes involved in the plot to wreck the hospital endangers all their lives.

Under the supreme stress of emergency Miss Colbert and Boyer forget their inhibitions and learn to set things right again and discover in the progress that their pretended hatred had really bidden a growing love for each other.

Today Only

Shown today only matinee and evening, new mirth and melody adventures with your singing sweetheart Gene Autry in Oh Susanna with Smiley Burnette. Also an interesting array of short subjects, latest Capitol news, novelty musical comedy, vaudeville sketch and comedy complete this splendid two hour show.

SUTTON "IRISH" TO MEET REDMEN HERE ON MONDAY

Third Round Battle in Intermediate "B" Series Should be Fast

LOCAL TEAM READY

Sutton Has Powerful Defence With Fast Skating Forwards

Expecting to celebrate the conventional "17th of March", the Irishmen's day of rejoicing, the Sutton "Irishmen", conqueror of the fierce Lakeshore Intermediates, will invade the Belleville Arena on Monday night to do battle with the Belleville Redmen in the third round of the intermediate "B" play-downs. The winner of this series will undoubtedly advance to the intermediate finals, so important is the series.

The Redmen elevated their status in the O.H.A. final by virtue of their clean-cut victory over the Whitby Redwings, who were touted as the potential intermediate finalists, after having won the intermediate "B" championship in 1935 and continuing to the intermediate "B" finals again last season, at the expense of the Redmen. This season, however, the Redmen gained sweet revenge when they soundly trounced the Whitby Redwings and advanced to a position as stalking threats in the intermediate O.H.A. circles.

It has been many years since a Belleville hockey team has advanced to such a lofty position as enjoyed by the Redmen today and with the urgent demand for tickets, all indications are to the effect that a capacity crowd will welcome the gladiators when the "Irishmen" and the "red-clad" Belleville pucksters line up in battle formation on Monday night in Belleville. As is conventionally the system the series winner will be determined by the total goals scored on the round, Belleville having the advantage of playing the first game.

Manager Thomas stated today he intended using practically the same team that eliminated the Redwings in the previous round, the "boy-boy" played great hockey against Whitby and although the fans did their share, sterling game in Belleville last week when he won over the Redwings. It is an firmly convinced the patrons will get their greatest hockey thrills in the season on Monday night when they boys take on the Sutton team. Any club that can defeat the Redmen must have potentialities and we are looking for a terrific series with Sutton and there is little doubt but that the winner will advance to the International Group" stated Manager Thomas today. Insofar as the Sutton team is concerned, the only change personnel of the club is unknown in these parts but Sutton has been rapping at the intermediate O.H.A. play-down door for some years and doubtless will be a formidable foe of rubber-chasers on Monday night at the arena.

The probable line-ups of the intermediate finalists are:

Belleville—Goal, Watt; defence, Bentley and Murphy; centre, Wm. Jackson; wings, Tompkins and Wm. Jackson; subs, Barrage, St. Louis, Whitton, Bowen, Gay, Gerow, Creary.

Sutton — Goal, Smith; defence, Shupe and Burkholder; centre, Millroy; wings, Carpenter and Burkholder; subs, Schmidt, McKenzie, Brady, Calvert and McCrea.

Incidentally Watt, the last named player on the roster of the Sutton club, is a former Belleville junior player, who learned the rudiments of Canada's national sport right in Belleville.

Maroons Have Hopes of Passing Habitants in Final Drive

LEAFS MEET HAWKS

Boston Bruins Take on Detroit And Can Improve Position

There are still possibilities of a driving finish in the National Hockey League. If it is to develop the teams who could make it a hot race for the last week must win this week-end when four games bring all eight clubs into action. After Sunday there will be only ten games to play, the schedule ending next Sunday night.

The Canadian division promises the best prospects of a fight. Trailing the Montreal Canadiens by two points, Montreal Maroons still retain a chance to displace the Habitants into first place and meeting Detroit Red Wings for the league title.

But to score five more points than Canadiens' when both teams have only four games to play is an almost impossible task. Conversely the Hart-la team crumbles and there is no indicai of that happening. Manager Fred McLaughlin teams the same band of youngsters onto the ice as he did Thursday against Boston.

Maroons will have stiffer opposition tomorrow night in New York, when the Rangers, with Lester Patrick determined to avenge the 4-1 defeat Red Dutton's men have shown few signs of letting down since they were knocked out of play-off contention. The Americans are having trouble with revenge and may turn back the Montrealers.

A game between Boston Bruins and Red Wings in Detroit Sunday completes the week-end schedule. Principle interest in the contest will centre in Jack Adams' ability to find the right wing spot left so vacant by the leg injury to Larry Aurie.

While Aurie is likely to linger out for the season, Adams will try veteran Hec Kilrea in the role with Marty Barry and Herb Lewis. He is bringing Norman Gainor up from Pittsburgh Horsets to take Kilrea's place on the third line.

Havana, March 13—New York Giants, having met with little opposition against Cuban opposition of the minor league brand, today began to get down to business with one of their most dangerous National League rivals this season—the Brooklyn Dodgers. Manager Bill Terry flattened to throw Hal Schumacher, Cliff Melton and Clyde Castleman against the Gas House gang today, and follow up with Carl Hubbell, Freddie Fitzsimmons and Harry Gumbert tomorrow.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Manager Joe McCarthy named a trio of rookie hurlers to pitch for the Yankees in today's "Grapefruit League" opener against Boston Braves here Sunna, with the pick battle with Kemp Wicker and Jim Tobin, following Red Ruffing, one of Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey suffering from a lame leg to field somewhat of a makeup outfit.

Clearwater, Fla.—Heinie Manush's clouting is giving Burleigh Grimes visions of a Brooklyn Dodger comeback with a lot of punch this season. The big flychaser, making his debut in the National League after years of the other side of the by time has been batting all brands of pitching all over the lot in intra-nooad exhibitions.

PUBLIC CHOICE GRAND NATIONAL GOLDEN MILLER

Making His Fifth Start in The Most Difficult Jumping Event

HARD TO BEAT

American Owned Horses Appear to Have Little Chance

Liverpool, Mar. 13 (CP)—Ocidon Miller in all probability once again will be the public choice Friday when the pick of the world's steeplechasers go to the post at Aintree for the centenary running of the Grand National.

Miss Dorothy Page's Gallant Gelding will be making his fifth straight attempt in this biggest of jumping events and his record comprises a victory in 1934, a fall, a refusal and an unseating of rider.

Of all the outstanding hopefuls of a few weeks ago Golden Miller has also sustained his great reputation in pre-Liverpool trials. Choosing his fences without effort, without the semblance of a mistake, the veteran has displayed all the class opponents a jumping lesson.

But Aintree is a law unto itself and Golden Miller is not as young as he was. The difficult course of 30½ miles finds out the weak spots in the best of them, and no matter how beautiful a steeplechaser may be over a park course, if he has not the Aintree style and build he will be lucky to survive.

From time to time there are horses who by make and shape are the master of negotiating fences are rendered paralysed and helpless to Aintree and it is to these that trainers and other experienced judges look for the winner of the most important steeplechase in the world.

Aintree Record Not Good.

With the exception of 1934, when won, Golden Miller's Aintree record has not been impressive. Yet his bone to beat him is hard to find. Second to the gelding in the betting is Lloyd Thomas Royal Mail, the favorite until last night when he was replaced because of his poor showing in trial events.

Royal Mail is a beautifully proportioned horse, and shows fair action in all his paces. Yet at Kempton Park early last week he finished fifth behind Golden Miller. He ran well enough considering his blunders and at Worcester a week ago could do no better than third.

Favorite during the interregnum between Royal Mail and Golden Miller was Vivian Smith's Ready Cash, who is now under a cloud owing to his training injury. He ran well to gain a second trial, but after news of his injury was announced he fell off in the wagering from 12 to 1 to 50 to 1.

Reynoldstown Not Entered.

Of the other candidates, Sir David Llewellyn's Ego and F. Thrale's Crown Prince came second and third, respectively, in last year's National, but lagged far behind the winning Reynoldstown, who was not entered for the 1937 running.

Another veteran of the Aintree course is J. F. Brown's Delaneige, who has been a gallant but unlucky performer in recent years. Last year he fell, in 1934 he placed second to Golden Miller, and in 1933 was fourth. But this year he is a 12-year-old and in the long history of the race no horse of that age has won. Two horses were successful at 11—Why Not in 1911—and Shrapnel in 1919.

Of the American horses, Whist Have You has attracted considerable attention. This nine-year-old was bred and owned by Thomas Hitchcock and will be ridden by the American amateur Quirin. Of Streett's big, good-looking chestnut with plenty of quality. He is a free-running horse and as such is unsuited to heavy going. His English debut at Newbury was inauspicious, the horse finishing last in a field of seven.

OLD and NEW

By George H. Carver.

All was hilarity at the arena last midnight.—Night owls going home stated that the place was a whirling of noises, groans, strange squeakings, and many squawks. Dr. Dubois, who was on the police.....There was no need for alarm, however, for it was only the Queens Hotel Refreshment Dispensers crooning their songs with a group of Commercial Travellers..... The Knights of the Samples and Order proved doughty opposition for the foam-clerks but by the time the other books had been written, and the fire and smoke of combat cleared the count was tied at three-all.

For the first time since the menarchs Horsemen series of a few years ago, Stratford is in the throes of a hockey fever..... Davis Cup has built another formidable puckchasing machine in the Ambidextrous fans are building high hopes.....And to prove that they have class, and what it takes to make a champion team, the Pitchmyrites are once again up on the highly touted St. Michael's Majors the squad which cooped off the wins and have picked for the Dominion Junior title..... Up to date they have the Stratford crew the beardless St. Mikes which is the cream of the prep sept junior crop, and they might turn out to be the class..... However, the Stratford kids are one up on them in the present series, and should they cop the title from those who have seen the squads in action, they should cop the series and go a long way in their quest for the title.

Belleville's Bangalang Redmen will be against the stiffest opposition of the current season on Monday night when they cross sticks with the Irishmen from Sutton, on the waters of Lake Simcoe.....The series between the local intermediates "B" hopes and fans alike should be productive of some of the finest hockey seen here this winter. And that is the main reason why local fans should be out in numbers to cheer their vocal to the lads in the scarlet jerseys.....The same goes for Monday night should be one for the book for the Redmen are rarin' to go against the Sutton five, who take out Gravenhurst are not a bunch to be sneezed at.

LARRY O'CONNOR TIMBER TOPPER BREAKS RECORD

World 60-yard Hurdle Mark Broken by Fifth of Second

ROMANI ABSENT

Glen Cunningham Had Easy Win in Mile Feature

Toronto, March 13.—(CP)—Touring truck Mans moved on to Hamilton, Ontario, today taking with them world records garnered in thrilling competition at the Maple Leaf games here last night. A third Canadian record was amassed in the evening's program in part to atone for the non-appearance of Fanny Blankers-Koen.

The withdrawal of the young Italian from the featured mile removed much of the drama from that event but sterling performances in other events assured the fair-sized crowd home satisfied.

Larry O'Connor, University of Toronto timber-topper, clipped one fifth second from the world 60-yard hurdle record by leading Eugene Record of Montreal Amateur A.A. to the tape, over the jumps in 7.3 seconds.

Fred Feuerbach, Toledo was responsible for the second world record. Doing the "Feuerbach" specialty, Toledo's Polish University sprinted 60 yards in six seconds flat to trim Jesse Owens's old one tenth of a second. Two Toronto A.A.A. performers, Ronald and Jack Brown, chased the versatile negro into the record-smashing performances.

Romani Not Present

Without San Romani in the race, observers had anticipated an exciting finish between Cunningham in the mile feature, Lons-renowned United States star, showing up their pace and the former Kansas Collegian in the early stages of the long mile. Unable to force Cunningham in a Canadian record, Romani's fast finish nevertheless threw a scare into him and was only three yards behind at the finish.

Cunningham's time of 4:18.2 was the best recorded this season on Manager's winning effort last year. Joe MacCluskey of New York, finished in third place.

Hank Cleman, Toronto's most versatile performer, completed the 3,000 metre walk for the third consecutive year, in the fast time of 14:29.2. Cleman's record was set by Dec Wass, both of Hamilton, Ont., were second and third.

Harold Brown, virtually unknown University of Toronto athlete, was the surprise upset on the program. The stocky student, jumping 6 ft. 2 inches to defeat Richardson and Peacock, ranking negro broad jumpers of the world's history. His best leap was more than a foot short of the Canadian record.

Elden Stutzman of Scottdale and Al Threapleton of Philadelphia repeated their 1936 victories in the pole vault and high jump, respectively, equal their previous records.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Once every year the Irish have their day, which is conventionally recognized as the "17th of old Ireland"—March the 17th to you, us, we and Timmy Sullivan. But, whilst the Irish of Limerick move into Dublin and endeavour to celebrate, slightly premature, the fat is in the fire and the "red really burns". Now we have "Irish" and "Red" all concerned which no less than boils down to the Sutton "Irishmen" meeting the Belleville "Redmen" (get the "red and Irish" element) here on Monday night. The position of the ground Belleville have become quite hockey-conscious of late and the fans are naturally with and behind the Redmen in their quest for further O.H.A. honors. The R.C.A.F. "Flyers" have already annexed the intermediate "A" title and judging from reports from different parts of the province the Redmen are "tops" in the intermediate "B" circles.

What Belleville and district fans like and go for is personal contact and we have been reliably informed that the Sutton "Irishmen" are a bruising sextette that will be encased their way through the recognized hitherto invincible Gravenhurst defence. Much to the surprise of Billie Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A., we have asked manager Thomas to be prepared to play in Gravenhurst if the Redmen do not have to paddle their canoes across Lake Simcoe, which is a mere matter to trip along to Sutton with a substantial goal lead next Thursday, we hope. Insofar as press reports are concerned, we are loth to believe that the Redmen intermediates are a really tough hockey organization. The outfielders, including our friend Bill McGeoghan, informs us the Sutton squad is a tough aggregation.

Insofar as we can discern the Sutton team depends much on their fast-rear-guard, which is composed of a couple of two rugged defence players. After wearing down their opposing attack, the Sutton forwards really go to work, but that signed hockey bunch of backline Sutton defence may receive a severe jolt when the Jackson kids start rushing around on the ice like the proverbial hoop around the well-known barrel. Getting into matters—Belleville is a recognized goalie, but Shupe and Burkholder will have to be extra especially good to stop Eddie Thomas' flying forwards who, incidentally are considered every bit as fast as they rubbed out the Whitby team. Ginger Carpenter up the pivot post and the same team that beat Whitby to the punch in the playdowns will be on sale in saying the Sutton opposition will have plenty of trouble on Monday night's tilt at the local arena is over.

Reminicing—it might be of interest to Belleville fans to know that the R.C.A.F. hockey squad had as their porter on their trip from Port Colborne, Clayton Trout, colored porter and perennial custodian of the welfare Of the Trenton Flight hockey club. Mr. Trout was quite content to see the Flyers win another two, until some person sashied into the situation and shouted "Let's Lets' Lets to hear Clayton". From that point the Flyers, and as a matter of fact the entire party, were on their own, simply because the boys put the "Lets" theory to Mr. Trout, purely in fun of course.

From the ridiculous to the sublime—after the Flyers were rubbed out by Sutton and all enthused up, they returned to their hotel quarters in Port Colborne to listen to their idea in mind — namely — Lacrosse. Lacrosse from sheer Major "Jock" MacLean, a former Quinte resident and a member of one of the stranded-Flyers (we'll have to answer for that one later) crack) and put his automobile at the disposal of the Flyers after the game and the boys in the party really went to town, as Major MacLean's chauffeur hurtled the boys over to Buffalo—not "shuffled off". Incidentally Major MacLean was a war-time buddy of our own Dr. George Stobie and wished to show his appreciation for favors already received by placing his sedan at the disposal of the Flyers. We really appreciated Major MacLean's most generous proposal.

Back with hockey again—we are highly indebted to the R.C.A.F. hockey club for a bus trip through the Niagara peninsula and to the Falls, Sunday to Thursday night's game with the Welland Canal Flyers in Welland and the entire party motored over to Niagara Falls (both sides indefinitely) and did we have fun? Then after the Flyers were rubbed out Major MacLean came to their rescue and saw the boys were taken to Buffalo and through the night life, but with too much reliability, that is to believe the stories subsequently related. Here and now we make humble apology in our haste of filing the account of Thursday night's game, we kicked the goal judge's decision at not give "Cab" Carling-Kelly his share of honors. Without fear of contradiction "Cab" played his best game of the season, whilst relieving Lalonde. We are not arguing too many orchids, however, to know why we should give you Cab, when we say we think you deserve credit for one occasion. Joking aside Carling-Kelly carried the puck well and was deserving of press dispatch recognition. We repeat — if the management of the Belleville Arena, would but get smart and announce their intentions regarding the artificial ice plant—it might halt certain movements in Trenton along the same lines.

It's either "in or out" for senior baseball in Belleville today and it looks like curtains. Really it is too bad to have the contracted several really good baseball players in Belleville thrusting their new trips with the Flyers, but unless some local concern assumes the baseball-ire it's curtains for baseball in Belleville today. Really it is too bad to see one of the remaining chartered O.B.H. clubs fold up without at least a struggle.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, March 13—The industrial share market displayed moderate recuperative powers in the closing session of the week without showing much in the matter of volume.

Nickel and Smelters were unchanged while the price was higher for Ford A and lower for Brazilian. United Steels stepped up at the opening to 27¼, but weakened to show only a minor gain at the close.

All the leading oils added fractions and in the Utilities Consumers Gas set a new high at 211 and B. C. Power, Class A, Canada Cement preferred stocks advanced and gypsum closed with a minor gain.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, Mar. 13 (CP)—Mining shares were traded in a mild way in today's short session but trading was on a fair scale and the undertone was slightly under the morning highs.

In the golds Bidgood-Kirkland closed around $1.38 for a net gain of almost 3 cents, unchanged from yesterday.

In the oils Calmont was about the strongest, showing an advance of 10 cents.

Of the base metals only Aldermac showed any material change with the price lower at 1.62. Ventures, Lake Shore, Calmet, Coniagas, Noranda and Pen Orelle was up 15 cents.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, March 13—Selling in steels and stocks put a damper on the stock market today and many issues fell back fractions to a point or more.

Except for a lively opening, and a moderately pickup near the close, dealings were on the quiet side. Transfers were around the 1,000,000 share mark.

Among principal share losers of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, National Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Shoe-Sheffield, General Motors, Chrysler, Electric Auto-Lite, Du Pont, Loew's, General Electric, Anaconda, American Smelting, Kennecott, Westinghouse Air Brake, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Goodyear, Goodrich, Pajar-co Sugar and Johns-Manville.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

MARKET COMMENT

Base metal stocks have been begging for attention the first half of 1936. Sales of National Breweries held up well, but there was some decline in gross business during the latter two months of 1936. Because of the necessity for absorbing the 2% increase in sales tax, effective last May, consolidated year amounted to $2.19 a share, as compared with $2.46 a share for 1935, but the $2 dividend rate is considered secure. Costs of 1937 brews will be higher, but the long-term outlook appears satisfactory.

Area Revenues

Recent rapid upturn in copper prices has prompted revision of activities on the property of Area Mines, adjoining Waite-Amulet in Dufresnoy township. A diamond drilling program is in progress at present under the direction of Smith and Travers.

Hve Excellent Record

English investors have an excellent record as security appraisers. They bought heavily here when stocks were low, as at the end of New York, and they already have very large profits. They do not make a practice of in-and-out trading as we do on this side of the Atlantic, and they almost never jump into a situation without first conducting exhaustive survey from every angle. Under the circumstances, it is reasonable to assume that our British friends will be sufficiently farsighted to know when such stocks have reached their full value and get out of the market before another crash takes place. And if they do their selling should tend to dampen enthusiasm here at least when it will do the most good. Our last stock market crash was the result of unrestrained enthusiasm on the part of our own investors and speculators, many of whom never took the trouble to enquire into values. If we have another crash it will be because these same investors take another jump into the unknown. The British investors probably will not be anywhere near the scene of the accident.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, March 13—The industrial share market displayed moderate recuperative powers in the closing session of the week without showing much in the matter of volume.

Nickel and Smelters were unchanged while the price was higher for Ford A and lower for Brazilian. United Steels stepped up at the opening to 27¼, but weakened to show only a minor gain at the close.

All the leading oils added fractions and in the Utilities Consumers Gas set a new high at 211 and B. C. Power, Class A, Canada Cement preferred stocks advanced and gypsum closed with a minor gain.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, Mar. 13 (CP)—Mining shares were traded in a mild way in today's short session but trading was on a fair scale and the undertone was slightly under the morning highs.

In the golds Bidgood-Kirkland closed around $1.38 for a net gain of almost 3 cents, unchanged from yesterday.

In the oils Calmont was about the strongest, showing an advance of 10 cents.

Of the base metals only Aldermac showed any material change with the price lower at 1.62. Ventures, Lake Shore, Calmet, Coniagas, Noranda and Pen Orelle was up 15 cents.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, March 13—Selling in steels and stocks put a damper on the stock market today and many issues fell back fractions to a point or more.

Except for a lively opening, and a moderately pickup near the close, dealings were on the quiet side. Transfers were around the 1,000,000 share mark.

Among principal share losers of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, National Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Shoe-Sheffield, General Motors, Chrysler, Electric Auto-Lite, Du Pont, Loew's, General Electric, Anaconda, American Smelting, Kennecott, Westinghouse Air Brake, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Goodyear, Goodrich, Pajar-co Sugar and Johns-Manville.

Area Revenues

Recent rapid upturn in copper prices has prompted revision of activities on the property of Area Mines, adjoining Waite-Amulet in Dufresnoy township. A diamond drilling program is in progress at present under the direction of Smith and Travers.

Hve Excellent Record

English investors have an excellent record as security appraisers. They bought heavily here when stocks were low, as at the end of New York, and they already have very large profits. They do not make a practice of in-and-out trading as we do on this side of the Atlantic, and they almost never jump into a situation without first conducting exhaustive survey from every angle. Under the circumstances, it is reasonable to assume that our British friends will be sufficiently farsighted to know when such stocks have reached their full value and get out of the market before another crash takes place. And if they do their selling should tend to dampen enthusiasm here at least when it will do the most good. Our last stock market crash was the result of unrestrained enthusiasm on the part of our own investors and speculators, many of whom never took the trouble to enquire into values. If we have another crash it will be because these same investors take another jump into the unknown. The British investors probably will not be anywhere near the scene of the accident.

NO MEDAL GIVEN BRAVE BROTHER

Hamilton, Ont., March 13 (CP)—Seven-year-old Jimmy Lee Witherbrough, who rescued his six-year-old brother Billy from icy waters of Ofonaher River Thursday, will receive no award from the Royal Humane Society of Canada, it was learned at the office of the society here today. This is not because the society does not appreciate the unselfishness of the act but because it does not make awards to persons who rescue their kin.

"When a person rescues a relative this is not considered an act of bravery but a natural human impulse," explained H. McLaren, Honorary Secretary of the society. "Along with the Royal Humane Society of Great Britain and the Royal Humane Society of Australia Carnegie Hero Fund Trustees in the United States, the Royal Humane Society of Canada considers that the rescue of a relative does not require the unselfish sacrifice that is required to rescue a non-relative," he said.

CITY MARKET

Brilliant sunshine with just a hint of warmer weather brought a fairly large crowd of farmers to the city hall and shoppers to the city market this morning. The prices remained fairly steady although potatoes and eggs showed a slight downward trend from previous days of the week.

Dairy produce, butter and eggs were in plentiful supply, the latter showing in good variety, and with no noticeable difference in price.

On the outside market winter apples and vegetables dominated a slow moving market. No fresh maple syrup has put in an appearance as yet on the city mart.

Potatoes were fairly plentiful with top prices quoted at $1.00 for the 90-pound container. The majority of vendors however quoted their stocks at prices ranging from as low as $.75 to $1.00. Peck lots remained firm at 35 cents.

Carrots, beets, parsnips and onions remained firm at last week's prices. Winter cabbage was quoted at prices from five to ten cents per head, this barb sold at 10 cents per bunch with celery going slowly at 10 cents and two bunches for 15 cents. Sauerkraut moved briskly at 10 cents per quart. Pork hocks and fronts were offered at 14 and 12 cents per pound with beef quoted at 8 and 10c.

Eggs Fluctuate in Price.

Northern Specials selects were offered at 32 the hamper lot with the cooking variety meeting at 21. A fine variety of Stark Delicious sold well at $1.25 the hamper with Red Sikha listed at 82.

In the inside market egg prices fluctuated as buyers held out for lower prices. Although the more popular price for "A" large was 22 cents, some vendors held out for one cent more with 18 cents being asked for the medium. Pullet graded lots were offered at 16 cents the dozen.

Farmers' butter sold steadily at 32 cents the pound. A few vendors offered two pound rolls for 65 cents to a slow moving market. Honey remained firm at 50 cents for 2 sections pails.

Chickens sold fairly well and were quoted at the same price as those of a week ago. Choice ducks were offered from 75 cents up to $1.40 with an inferior quality going at from 50 cents up.

Muckets at 15 cents the pound, winter caught whitefish and cold salmon sliced at the same price appealed to fish lovers. Finnfish at 15 cents the dozen sold well to a brisk market.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Mar. 13—Produce markets here yesterday had a steady tone, prices showing little change from previous days. Trading was fairly active, however, with a fair volume of business reported.

Sales on the Canadian Commodity Exchange were 200 boxes of Quebec buyer's inspection butter at 25¼c, at which price the market was quoted at the close, with 25½c bid for Quebec spreads, 92 score. On the open market No. 1 in cartons or l.c.l. lots was 25½c to 26c for solids and 27c to 27½c for prints.

On the egg market dealers decided to defer the question of an increase in prices to the retail trade until Monday. Wholesale shipments of eggs in cartons or l.c.l. lots were mainly quoted 32c for A large, 30c for A medium, and 19c for A-pullets. Offerings at these levels were posted at the Commodity Exchange.

DENIES

Letter of Protest

He explained that as a Canadian—"I think his name was Northgrave though I can't remember his first name"—he wrote a letter protesting against his references to Canadians.

"I replied," the former continued, "that my allusions had not been to Canadians in general but to Pension Commissioners, explaining all over again about cheap labor depression in Canada. Just as the Japs had done in California.

"And now, apparently, he had printed a private letter that I wrote to him as a matter of courtesy."

'This Bird'

At another point Mr. Pitkin referred to the Canadian who wrote him as "This Bird" and said he thought that was unfair.

When a despatch to Mr. Bouchard's protest Hall was read to the New York educationist he noted that "it doesn't say when they're going to mobilize the Canadian navy" and added laughingly that when fighting starts I'll offer him my services to the war department."

CHRYSLER STRIKE NEARS SHOWDOWN

60,000 Idle Workers Are Involved in Injunctive Proceedings

Chicago, March 13 (AP)—The Chrysler Motor Corporation's dispute with union leaders, major eyesore in the United States industrial landscape, approached a showdown today.

Sixty thousand idle workers were involved in the corporation's proceedings in equity courts asking aimed at removal of 5,000 strikers who have held his eight Detroit plants for a week.

Insistence by the United Automobile Workers of America on recognition as exclusive bargaining agency for employees was expected to precipitated the strike. Union officials asked Circuit Court today to show cause why the 50-down strikers should not be enjoined.

Chrysler's move came on the heels of conferences between U.A.W.A. and the General Motors Corp. had failed to prevent a walkout from the G.M. strike which ended February 11.

Ford Not Entitled

The pact, yet to be ratified by representatives of local unions, provided for seniority rights and older employees' rights, and for collection demands for a national minimum wage "or equal" to 30-hour week. It arranged for a "grievance board" under which plants would be operated pending adjudication of future disputes.

The Chrysler strikes, from the U.A.W.A. demand for exclusive bargaining rights, affected the Hudson Motor Company plants at Detroit and the New Motor Car Company plant at Lansing, Mich. closed. Ten thousand Hudson workers and 1,200 Lansing employees were involved. There was no settlement in sight for either strike.

The impasse in the dispute at Bedford, Ohio, between Robert C. Atkin, Akron, O., persisted, keeping 11,500 workers on the Strike Committee's picket line in their fight for union recognition as sole bargaining agent through a seven-man arbitrary board.

KING APPROVES APPOINTMENTS

Duke of Gloucester And Duke of Kent Given New Ranks

LONDON, March 13—(CP Cable)—The War Office today announced the King has approved the appointment of the Duke of Gloucester to be Colonel-in-Chief of the 10th Royal Hussars, the Royal and Inniskillen Fusiliers and the Gordon Highlanders.

He will also become Colonel of the Scots Guards.

The Duke of Kent was appointed Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Welch Fusiliers, a Colonel in the army and a group-captain in the Royal Air Force.

DROUGHT KILLS 3,000

Chungking, Szechuen Province, China, March 13.—(AP)—An unprecedented drought, reducing two thirds of the inhabitants of Szechuen province to the verge of starvation, has killed 3,000 persons since Jan. 1, it was estimated today.

EX-KING FINDS CHAMPION IN LLOYD GEORGE

States Cutting Him Off Civil List Would Be 'Height of Meanness'

DUKE BUYS NEW PLANE

London, March 13.—(AP)—David Lloyd George championed the Duke of Windsor's financial future today with the assertion that cutting him off from the Royal purse would be "the height of meanness".

The Rees Chronicle said the elder statesman would protest to the committee which is to consider the Duke's civil list against any lack of provision for the abdicated monarch.

Lloyd George, who will be a member of the committee, said, "It is scandalous if the ex-King is left out," adding:

"All the members of the Royal family have been provided for except the ex-King who, it is generally admitted, behaved very decently.

"He abdicated in order to make no difficulty for the reigning King and if there is made no provision of any sort for him—well, it is the height of meanness. There is a lack of vindictiveness about it."

Meanwhile, reports were reported to have decided to purchase a $30,000 airplane after selling a plane bought when he was Prince of Wales. The old plane, which has been 25,000 miles, cost $25,000 in 1933.

The new ship is being tested at Portsmouth by Capt. Edward Fielden, who was "Captain of the King's Flight" when Edward was King. It will have a maximum speed of 310 miles an hour and a 700-mile cruising range.

It is a British-made cabin monoplane with two engines and seats for six.

SIMEON SCHRYVER 93 YEARS OLD TODAY

Congratulations and best wishes from his many friends were being received today by one of the city's best-known residents, Simeon Schryver who today observed at his home, 81 Richmond Avenue, quietly as he had in the past, the 93rd anniversary of his birth. The happy occasion finds Mr. Schryver still blessed with the same good health and cheerfulness that has been characteristic of his life.

SPECIAL INDUCEMENT FOR CHEESEMAKERS

Under a new plan to promote the making of better cheese, cheesemakers of the counties of Lennox and Addington may be granted a special price of $25 each month for the best batch of cheese made during that month.

S. H. McNeil, cheese instructor of Moscow, stationed on the Frontenac County Council on Thursday afternoon and asked that the price of $25 be utilized as prize money for the leading cheesemakers of Frontenac-Addington. The request has been referred to the finance committee.

Mr. McNeil will make a similar request on behalf of the cheesemakers of Addington. His intention, he explained, is to have the cheesemakers enter one cheese each month for competition. Cheese will be judged on a score at the next convention of cheesemakers to be held in Napanee or Kingston. It is hoped to improve the quality of make through the district.

ART ROSS DEMANDS CANCELLING FRANCHISE CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS

Detroit, March 13 (CP)—Manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins today demanded that the National Hockey League cancel the franchise of the Chicago Blackhawks on grounds of the latters' "All-American" game Thursday night.

Ross, protesting the game in the game 6-2, charged that "never in hockey history has a game been so badly perpetrated on a National League player as Eddie Shore was in the five American-born recruits, Ross said, made the game a laughing stock.

Besides making cancellation of the Blackhawks franchise, he made support to the league's ruling of professionals only in the game.

Ross charged that the Blackhawks used the five rookies under an announced policy of playing only American-born athletes. Ross referred to them as "poor kids who don't get a single shot" at the Boston goal while the Bruins received a six of their scores during the recruits' presence on the ice.

Faces Serious Charge After Paying a Fine

WINDSOR, Ont., March 13—(CP)—Fined $34 in Windsor Police Court yesterday for leaving the scene of an accident, Albert Bisette, Windsor, was re-arrested today by Provincial Police on a charge of assaulting a 12-year-old girl. The child had identified him as he appeared in the court room as the man who drove her out to Sandwich East Township February 2 and attempted to attack her.

Inspector Phil Walker said the child was not harmed but that she ran away from the car when the man after attempted to force his attentions upon her. The case will be tried in County Police court.

Small Loan Companies Described as 'Sharks'

Ottawa, Mar. 13 (CP)—Small loan companies were described as 'sharks' and their conduct as 'legalized robbery' as members of the House of Commons last night divided on a motion for the second reading of a private bill respecting the Industrial Loan and Finance Corporation. On a non-party vote of 53 to 46 the motion for second reading was adopted after considerable debate.

Two bills of a similar nature were up for second reading and the debate was on both. Premier Mitchell Dunning suggesting that they be given second reading and sent to committee. Sixteen Liberals voted with the opposition which urged no further legislation be given these companies pending passage of a general act dealing with small loan companies.

Only the bill first moved was officially dealt with on the records of the House. The second will be moved as private bills are up for consideration again, and probably will be committee without debate. The four for private bills had expired when the first measure had been dealt with.

Both bills had passed the senate before coming to the House of Commons. One sponsored by Thomas Ellis, Liberal, Wellington-Grey, would modify the rights of the Industrial Loan and Finance Corporation respecting loans and charges, making the aggregate charge not more than one cent. per month. The other, sponsored in the Commons by J. A. Duffus, Liberal, Peterborough West) would also fix a flat monthly rate of charge and increase the capital of the Central Finance Corporation. It also provided for a change in the name to the Household Finance Corporation.

OSHAWA SCHOOL GAINS GOAL LEAD

Marmora High School Beaten 6-0 in First Game of Final Series

Madoc, March 13 (Special) — Oshawa Collegiate gained a one-goal lead in the Ontario High School as a result of a 4-3 win in the first game of the home-and-home series at the Madoc arena on Friday night. Dunlop, Madoc defenceman, the visitors held a decided edge over Marmora throughout the game, but failed to take advantage of several defence, deserved more than a one-goal win.

The Oshawans were unduly nervous and the team had been often a one and two man advantage but were unable to capitalize on their opportunities. Marmora was slow and at times produced little better than mediocre hockey. In the first period, only strict work by Referee Hodgson kept the game up as O'Neil of Marmora joined combat with a couple of fists and Jade Arron and were chased.

Too much aided by the visitors hockey's history for their gaining by Oshawa's rough play. Salter in the second half of the game was lucky on several occasions to keep Marmora out of the nets and Daniels, Jimmie Loveless and N. O'Neil were the Marmora marksmen with the latter banging in two.

Oshawa: Goal, G. Salter; defence, Haines and L. Wilson, centre, McMaster; wings, Hodgson and W. Wilson; subs, Morgan, Goddard M. McDonald, Daniels and Morris.

Marmora: Goal, Hart; defence, N. O'Neil, O'Neil; centre, Leonard; wings, Knorr and McKeown; subs, Loveless, J. Loveless, Gray, Prentice and Rogers.

Referee—Hodgson. Shiway, Belleville; G. Pollard, Oshawa.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Marrying Off Amelia

By H. Louis Raybold

It was a source of considerable humiliation to Lucy Barnes that of the four sisters she was the only one that had had no wedding in the family. True, she had but the one daughter, yet this fact in a way made the matter worse, she felt.

If Jane could marry of her three and Bessie her two, surely she ought to be able to find a husband for her one.

And it wasn't as if Amelia were homely or old maidish or anything undesirable. She was a young woman as pretty as accomplished, as agreeable as the average. But she did not care for the boys.

She said so quite frankly to her mother's disgust. And she proved that her words were not an idle affectation by refusing, now and again, invitations to this or that affair from eligible young men. Once Lucy had feared she was interested in the boy next door but he had money and then she had regretted her fears had been without foundation.

"Do you want to live and die single, Amelia dear?" demanded Lucy one afternoon after hearing her daughter amiably decline to go to a picnic with none other than Niles Fairbanks, the postmaster's son. "There are worse fate in life," replied Amelia calmly. "I'd rather be Abigail Cooke than Timothy Flinth's wife."

"As if," retorted her mother, "all single women were rich and clever like Abbie, or all husbands treated their wives like Tim Flint. Do you mean to insinuate that Niles Fairbanks will act like Tim towards his wife when he gets one?"

"Well," said Amelia pleasantly, "probably poor Nelly Flint wasn't expecting she'd get what she got or she wouldn't have married him. It's a gamble."

Lucy opened her mouth. Then she shut it abruptly. But that night she remarked regretfully to her husband, "It sickens me to hear a young person so cynical as Melia."

"Melia?" asked her husband, his mind really on his favorite comic strip. "What's that? Amelia cynical? Oh, she'll get over that. Don't worry."

She lay awake for a long time that night, thinking. She always fancied she had her best ideas when the house was quiet.

Suppose she tried combating cynicism with cynicism. No, Amelia would be suspicious of any such change of front. Suppose she gave a party or two for the girl and then made her accept the invitations which would presumably follow. Suppose — his memory was dozing in there she went to sleep.

Next morning at the breakfast table she reported a strange dream.

"I thought," she said, "I heard somebody whistling under my window. And then I thought I heard a giggling and laughing. And then the sound of something falling."

"What—what a funny dream!" said Amelia nervously. "It must have been those clam fritters we had last night."

"Most likely," said Lucy. "Awfully unhealthy things—clam fritters."

But that night she ate no clam fritters and, some time after she had gone to bed, she woke with a start. There was really somebody whistling this time, and if not actually beneath her window, it was under the next one to it which belonged to her daughter.

In two seconds, Lucy had on her dressing gown and was in Amelia's room. Perhaps she expected what she saw. Perhaps she didn't.

"Take of that hat and coat!" she commanded. "Shut that window immediately and unpack that bag!" Then she sank down weakly into the nearest chair.

"Who," she demanded accusingly, "is the young scoak who don't dare go to your father and ask for your hand outright?"

Amelia giggled. "Henry," she said. "It's Henry."

"Henry Powell, who lived next door and moved three years ago?" said the one, modest. "Why, you promised each other we'd be true and not so much as look at any other sex. He said he'd come back for me when I was twenty-one, while you—"

"Mother, you're dear. Ask dad. He has known all along."

ROSLIN

Roslin, May 13—Rev. F. C. Bester attended the funeral service for the late Rev. J. C. Dixon which was held in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, on Wednesday afternoon. Interment was in Cataraqui cemetery.

Rev. Dixon who had been in poor health for a number of years, and whose death occurred in Kingston on Monday, was well known here having been rector of Roslin parish from May 1908 to December 1909.

Surviving is his widow whose maiden name was Margaret Hudson daughter of the late Dr. Samuel Hudson and Mrs. Hudson of Roslin, and to whom the sympathy of her many friends here will be extended.

On Monday evening March 8th the regular meeting of the Young People's Union was held in the vestry of the United Church. There was an attendance of nine.

The Vice President Mr. Frank Abbott was in charge of the meeting.

Miss Lorna Maxwell read the Scripture lesson. Minutes of previous meeting read and approved. Roll call for next meeting to be answered with a verse containing the word "Worship". Some plans for the box social were made.

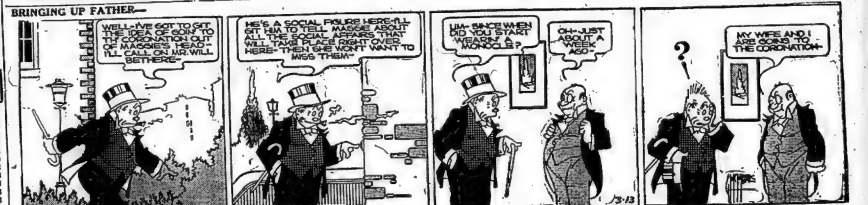
After some community singing, Mrs. Frank Abbott gave an interesting talk on the topic "Your actions speak louder than words."

Miss Blanche Reid read an account of a missionary's first ride in an aeroplane to China.

All joined in a contest and the meeting was closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

MELROSE W.M.S.

The March meeting of the Melrose W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Wright on Wednesday afternoon, March 3rd, with an attendance of 22.



Mrs. Bunnett, the president opened the meeting. Mrs. W. Snider was the delegate chosen to attend the W.M.S. Presbyterial at Trenton March 10th and 11th. Letters of appreciation were read for bales of clothing sent to needy families in the west. It was decided to hold a Thank-offering service in the church Easter Sunday night. Short readings were given by the Peace and Temperance Secretaries, Mrs. G. McLaren then took charge of the remainder of the program. Readings from the Study Book were read by Mrs. G. McLaren, Mrs. Young, Mrs. E. Badgley and Mrs. A. English. Mrs. McLaren invited the members to her home for the April meeting. She and her group intend serving a 10c tea to the ladies.

Collection $4.20. Mrs. Rev. Clarke offered prayer. Meeting closed with the hymn "The Day Thou Gavest" and benediction.

"I have gained 10 lbs of Pep and Health!"

SOME months ago, Miss Irma ... was wishing that she could find some way of increasing her weight to normal and improving her health. Her happy letter tells how she did did:

"I started to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a few months ago. I am now taking my fifth package and during this time I have gained 10 pounds of pep and flesh."

Another young woman, Miss Jean ... was worried about her falling health and loss of weight. But after taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills she writes:

"About eight months ago I was looking half sick. Tired all the time. No pep. Was continually losing weight. I had my blood tested and was told I was anaemic. So I started in taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was the turning point for me although I have continued the treatment and I am now feeling like a worth living again."

There are hundreds of other letters like these which testify to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Take them yourself to build up your health, give you more vitality and help you gain solid flesh if you are under normal weight. Price 50c.

Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills regularly for a while and if you don't feel better, stronger and healthier, your money will be refunded to you.

HIGH NOON

Instalment 14

Effie raised her eyes to Bruce's averted face. "Did you know him then?" she asked.

"Yes," Bruce said.

"He must have been horrid," Effie declared. "He couldn't have been nearly good enough for Blue, her mother, or he'd have come back. Why doesn't he come back now, to be loved as he's worth it, now she—nearly grown up, anyway! We can look after ourselves now."

But her own confident assertion seared her, at once again she visualized a future in which there might be no Heather any more.

Bruce looked at her. "Perhaps she doesn't want him now," he said, and then he took his arm away from her and stood up, walking over to the window.

Effie dried her eyes and stuffed her damp handkerchief into her pocket. "Are you angry with me?" she asked timidly.

"Angry?" Bruce laughed and came back, touching her shoulder in a gentle caress. "You're a dear little girl," he said. "And I should like to help you—perhaps I can."

Effie flushed eagerly. "If you'd only tell Vilette not to be such a pig!" she said ingenuously. "She was quite would listen to you but she hasn't to any one else. I don't know why it is, but we all seem to be afraid of her," she added quaintly.

Bruce frowned but he made no reply, and Effie went on, "I thought when people fell in love with other people it meant for always! It does in books and things, but I suppose it's just make-believe. Do you think it is?" she appealed.

"Not always."

Effie sighed deeply; she was feeling very perplexed and unhappy, as if she were standing on the threshold of a strange room which was filled with all kinds of unfamiliar things and as if someone had told her to set them out and to give each one a name. If this was a grocers called growing up" she was not at all sure that she welcomed it.

She started at the sound of Heather's voice in the hall. "That's Heather," she whispered, "I don't want her to see I've been crying. You talk to her. I'll go out through the window."

"And don't come back yet awhile," Bruce said quickly.

Effie nodded and made her escape.

Bruce stood very still, listening to Heather's voice. She was telling Priddy that she had forgotten to order the letters sprouts. "I'll ring for them," she said.

"We shall want them for lunch. seeing that Mr. Logan's here," Priddy answered.

"Mr. Logan!" Heather said sharply.

"He drove up in his car half an hour ago," Priddy told her.

Heather made no comment, but Bruce that she had turned towards the stairs. Bruce went out to the hall and heard her step and blood still, one hand on the stair-rail, looking up at her.

"Here I am," he said.

She looked round then and ignored him. "Tullo! I hope Nettie has been entertaining you—every one of the family has gone to Paris, and—" she broke off, only conscious of the hand gripping the stair-rail so tightly that her fingers were numbed.

"I've missed you some years," Bruce said.

"For me? . . . How kind of you —I love roses."

She spoke mechanically, but all the time there seemed to be a second voice in her heart which was saying insistently, "Don't be a fool —why can't you behave naturally? Go back and shake hands with him —for heaven's sake behave naturally!"

But it was almost a physical effort to move her hands from the side of her skirt. She hurried into the study, and when at last she did so she felt like a drowning man who is at last forced to let go of the frail spar that has supported him.

She walked past Bruce into the schoolroom, and picked the roses up from the table. "How lovely. It's very kind of you, Bruce. I'll put them in water at once. Thank you very much."

She turned to go but he barred the way. "Effie said I was to come in the old dad's when I brought you these flowers, Heather," he said in a shaken voice.

Heather stood still. She could feel her trembling body slowly growing stiff and cold, then with a supreme effort she raised her face.

"Why, of course," she said faintly, but Bruce laid his hands on her shoulders, gripping them so that she almost cried out as, bending his head, he pressed his lips to hers for a long kiss.

The first time for seventeen years!

For a moment she was conscious of a wild longing to put her arms round him, as once she would have done, to cling to him, and to bury her face against his shoulder. She felt just a girl again, still as young as she had been long ago when he first kissed her in this very room. just as passionately in love as she had been then; nothing was changed except that she was thirty-four, and that he was no longer hers.

No longer hers! She let the roses fall and struggled free of him, and Bruce said hoarsely, "And now will you tell me again that I must not marry Vilette?"

Heather covered her face with shaking hands; she was terrified—afraid of herself, of him, of the depths of her own emotion.

She thought of the family, and at once they seemed to come crowding around her with clamoring lips and hands.....Don't go, Heather—you leave us—what shall we do without you? Don't go, Heather."

John, Vilette, Bobbie, Effie, Caesar—even old Priddy seemed to join them and to beseech her, just as years ago their childish, anxious eyes had pleaded when she told them their mother had gone away and perhaps would never come back again—"But you won't go, will you, Patty?"

Funny, she had almost forgotten all that, but now it came to her that in those days had been Matty—funny still that they never seemed to have forgotten.

And then she...ot Bruce's hands on, he had overheard his voice, shaken and infinitely tender: "Oh, my dear, my dear, I love you, Heather." And then he broke off sharply, violently—as if he had heard the frightened scream from the garden broke the silence.

"Heather!..... Heather! Come quick!.... Come quick!"

It was Effie's voice, and before they could move she came rushing into the room, her face quite white, her eyes wide with terror. "It's Caesar! Oh come quickly! He's thrown Peter, and I—I—he doesn't speak—he doesn't seem to see me! Oh, please come quickly!"

Bruce ran across the garden and was gently chafing Caesar's hand before Heather and Effie joined him. "We must get him into the house," he said. "I don't know—" He looked round helplessly, and then rose to his feet. "Stay with him while I fetch some one."

Heather sent Effie for Dr. Willis and sat down in the grass beside her father. Gently she lifted his head into her lap. When she also laid a hand under his coat she could feel the slow, faint beating of his heart. It seemed an eternity before Bruce returned, followed by two men. The three carried Caesar into the house and laid him on the couch in his study just as the doctor's car drew up in the drive with Nettie in the front seat beside the chauffeur. He hurried into the study.

Effie sat swilling, a little, a little huddled heap on the stairway.

Somebody, Effie didn't even notice who, telephoned, an ambulance drove up, and Caesar was taken away. Effie stole up to Bruce who was standing at the open front door. "Is he dead?" she asked.

He turned, taking her hand. "Of course not—they've just taken him to a nursing home, where he will be properly looked after. Don't cry Effie," he added, with the first note of impatience she had ever heard in his voice. "Cheer up, and do all you can to help Heather."

And then Bobbie arrived, Effie caught the words "doctor" and "operation" and she felt shocked because the thought rose at once to her mind, "It's shan't be able to go to Weymouth after all."

Heather had gone to the nursing home with Caesar. When Dr. Willis brought her back in his car, she tried to eat something—but that one attempt gave it up and leaned back in her chair, saying, "I'm going to die, Bruce! Did Dr. Willis say he would die?"

"No, my dear, no."

There was a little silence, then she said restlessly, "I ought to have stayed with him this morning, he said he didn't feel very well. I ought—to have stayed with him," and again she seemed to feel the family crowding around her and to hear them pleading. "Don't leave us, Matty, don't ever go away."

And it seemed as if the ties that had bound her to them for so long grew strong again—fetters which could never really be broken, although this morning, for one mad moment, she had though—wondered and dreamed.....

She gave a little sob, and Bruce moved his hand, covering hers in a strong clasp.

"I'm here, Heather," he said.

And again that desperate desire to turn to him, and to sob out her troubles against his heart, swept through her. "I'm not desperately longings, so that she dared not trust herself to speak or to meet his eyes. But the moment passed, and presently she could smile.

"I know she said, and then, "thank you, Bruce."

INSTALMENT 15

Later in the afternoon Bruce drove Heather to the nursing home. He walked over to the window of the matron's room while she looked with Heather, but it was impossible to hear what was said.

It appeared that the doctor would like a second opinion if the family approved; he had mentioned (she named a well-known specialist) and if possible wished him to be sent for immediately.

Bruce came back then and stood beside Heather. "I think that is very wise," he said quietly, and Heather asked, "Does that mean—he is seriously ill?"

"Not necessarily," the matron answered kindly. "But it is as well to take every precaution. I think it will be better if you did not see your father now—he needs perfect rest and quiet—but later on—"

Heather looked at Bruce, for almost the first time in her life feeling utterly lost and helpless. "Then I suppose that's all," she said vaguely.

"Not a smile. "I'm not hungry."

He turned to Effie. "Ask Priddy to bring some tea, and something to eat—you must have had lunch."

Heather turned to him when Effie had gone. "Do you think he will be ill—very ill?" she asked, trying to hide the fear in her voice.

"That is just a wise precaution, my dear—your father's constitution won't be much, my dear." Caesar has a magnificent constitution. He took that wretched fall as if it quickly away."

"It will nerves," she apologized with a little ashamed laugh. "And it's not like me a bit, but—"

"Of course not," and her when she would have passed him.

"Heather, don't! There's nothing you want. I mean—money—there are bound to be a great many expenses, and—"

He stopped as she flushed sensitively. "Heather, you know that I can manage," she said quickly, "I don't—you've my big heart, and it doesn't speak—he doesn't seem to see me! Oh, please come quickly!"

Bruce ran across the garden and was gently chafing Caesar's hand before Heather and Effie joined him. "We must get him into the house," he said. "I don't know—" He looked round helplessly, and then rose to his feet. "Stay with him while I fetch some one."

FLOOD SCENES OF ONE YEAR AGO

Belleville Residents Rescued from Flooded Homes

Devasting Floods Inundate City of Belleville

With ice fams breaking, releasing what are claimed to be the worst spring floods in years, many districts in southern Ontario have been devastated, and some districts are still in danger. Its streets like foaming rapids, three feet deep in swirling water, Belleville suffered unlimited damage. Traffic was entirely disrupted, and boats were used in the main streets. From a special chartered aeroplane reporters and photographers viewed the flooded areas. ABOVE is shown a general view of Belleville with the flood waters covering all but a few open areas with six feet of water in places.

Minature Icebergs Fill Streets of Belleville

Warm rains and mild weather sent the Moira River on a rampage causing inestimable damage as the swirling water, floating huge masses of ice, invaded the city of Belleville, endangering the lives of residents. Brick buildings had holes torn in them as the ice was forced through by the rushing current, and water rose to a depth of eight feet against them by rushing current, and water rose to a depth of eight feet in some parts of the city. Many people were marooned in their homes and had to be removed with the aid of boats. Above is shown ice blocks jammed into one of the streets of the flooded city.

Flood Threatens Stores

While water swirled through the streets of Belleville, Ont., in the worst flood that has ever hit Central Ontario, citizens worked frantically to save their building. Above a group of men are shown keeping ice away from store fronts.

to get them out of the way—off your hands—send them along to me. And if you want the use of the car—well, Peter can bring it over as any time. He really hasn't got enough to do."

Heather tried to speak, but she could not; she was trembling with her distress he said, "Well, I'll be off. You know my telephone number, my dear, and you've had gone before she could try to thank him.

She stood where he had left her for some minutes, trying to control herself; she wondered why it was that she had not understood this man better and realized his worth. Bobbie and Effie had gone out into the garden. Heather sat down at the table again, but when she tried to life her teacup her hand trembled so that she gave it up.

Bruce moved suddenly and sat down beside her. "Caesar is not going to die," he said. "Heather, where is your courage, my dear?" There was pity in his voice, scorn in his eyes, although for her sake he spoke almost sharply. "Heather, it's not like you to give way!.... Heather!"

But she only shook her head, shrinking from him. "My courage has all gone," she said. "I can't stand any more. I can't.... Please leave me alone.... oh, please!" she cried, and hid her head in her folded arms and sobbed.

Bruce looked at her face suddenly white. The silence of the summer evening was broken save for her piteous sobbing. Perhaps Bruce realized then as never before what a struggle her life had been. The eternal struggle with an unduly large family—the lack of money—the constant self-sacrifice—the efforts to keep her courage up in the face of one difficulty after another. And then in retrospection he seemed to see her as she had been years ago —seventeen years—when they said good-bye. Young then, younger than Vilette was now—just a girl eager for happiness who had loved ... but it seemed too good a chance to miss—flying to Paris, I mean. And then if I had known you were coming—" She stopped, not liking to tell him how much she had known changed and interest and success, but here!....

He looked down at Heather's bent head and a wave of passionate remorse and pity swept through his heart. Why had he allowed it to be? He longed to take her in his arms, to comfort her, and for something in her helplessness and silence had always prevented him and warned him that this was not the moment; but as he heard the sounds of an arrival in the hall he bent hurriedly and touched her hand with his lips.

Heather looked up sharply, her eyes a mute appeal as Vilette's gay voice broke the silence. "Where's every one? Are you all dead?"

Bruce went out to meet her, closing the door behind him. Vilette looked very gay and pretty, and Paddy Jepson was standing behind her. Their faces changed when they saw Bruce.

"How long have you been here?" Vilette demanded with great suspicion. "Where is everybody—why didn't you let me know you were coming? We've been to Paris," she explained flippantly as Bruce did not break. "By air.... It was simply thrilling. I—" she broke off to ask again sharply, "What is the matter? Is anything the matter?"

Bruce told her, and her gay face softened a little though she spoke only sharply, "Well, I'm not surprised. I wonder why he's not all dead living in this dull hole." She met his eyes defiantly. "I suppose that will mean the end of Weymouth," she added.

Paddy Jepson moved. "Well, I'll be going," he said awkwardly. "I'm awfully sorry, Vilette....if there's anything I can do—"

She shook her head. "There isn't thanks....goodbye—and thank you for a lovely day. I'll give you a ring to-morrow."

When he had gone she had shrugged her shoulders and picked up a cardboard box he had laid down on the hall table. "Why didn't you tell me you were coming, Bruce?" she asked again.

"I made up my mind only this morning."

She looked at him, and her eyes grew wistful. "Are you angry with me?" she asked with the soft frankness that other men had found irresistible. "I'm sorry I was not

FIREWORKS PLANT BLOWS UP, 28 KILLED

20 to 50 Persons Missing In Terrific Explosion Near Manila, Philippines

Most of Victims Are Filipino Women Who Were Trapped

ONE EXIT USED

Some Jump Out of Windows Into Deep Water And Are Drowned

Manila, March 15 (AP)—Twenty-eight persons were killed in a terrific explosion of a Chinese fireworks plant today at Pasay, a suburb of Manila. Some officials estimated 20 to 50 were missing.

Fire followed the explosion. The force of the blast was felt over a radius of two miles.

Most of the victims were Filipino women who had no chance to escape through the one exit of the plant.

Police reported a number jumped from windows into a swamp, where they were trapped in mud and water and were drowned.

Brakeman's Death Found Accidental

Kingston, Ont., Mar. 15 (CP)—Inquest into the death of Harry Buchanan, Havelock brakeman, killed on March 6 near Echo Siding, was held Saturday at Tichbourne, 46 miles north of here, the jury finding that the brakeman's death was accidental.

Evidence was given that the Canadian Pacific Railway freight train left Smith's Falls for Trenton about 11.15 p.m. Buchanan was on the cab with Engineer Harry Bernard and at Echo Siding, six miles from Tichbourne, he dropped off to open a switch of the cab and made ready to throw the switch to allow the freight to take a siding. It is not known if Buchanan actually jumped from the train or fell.

When the switch was not opened other members of the train crew did so and a search for the missing brakeman disclosed the body of Buchanan almost dead from exposure and who had been dragged some 40 feet.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Baseball and the weather! Baseball and the weather, as do other games. Nine years ago this year in baseball is now aimed at the training centers in the South. There the average temperature for March and April, the early months, are within one or two degrees of the average summer temperatures of the large northern cities where the big league games will be played. The players are then acclimated to their training to the weather they will experience when the runs really count.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, March 15 (CP)—An area of high pressure centred over Minnesota extends eastward across Ontario and Quebec to the Gulf of St. Lawrence and southward to the Gulf of Mexico. Within a shallow depression covers the Atlantic coast states and a secondary is also relatively low over Alberta and the lower Mackenzie Valley. Light local showers or flurries have occurred locally in the Maritime Provinces and Southwestern Ontario while in other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair with below normal temperatures in most districts. Winds are light to moderate.

Lake Region—Moderate winds; fair today and Tuesday; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—Fair; slightly with statistical change in temperature today and Tuesday; probably southwest winds.

Singing Mouse Will Come Back

Woodstock, Ill., March 15 (AP) —Minnie, the singing mouse, is being groomed for a comeback.

Three months ago Minnie went on the radio and waved with from coast to coast by her canary-like warbling.

Like many others, fame was riveting for Minnie and since those golden moments before the microphone, life has been pretty dull for her.

The Woodstock Civic Club, believing Minnie has one more big career for herself, hopes to do something about it. Negotiations are under way to get Minnie booked for some performances. Money realized from any bookings would go largely to the Chicago Industrial Home for Children.

Meanwhile, Dwight L. Hobby, club member and keeper of Minnie, reported she's feeling gaily and enjoys all the mousy comforts an appreciative community can bestow.

QUEEN MOTHER TO THE BALKANS IS HOLDING HER OWN

Serious Illness Develops Into a Partial Paralysis

STRICKEN AT OPERA

Three Physicians in Constant Attendance on Dowager Queen

Bucharest, Rumania, Mar. 15 (AP) —Marie, Dowager Queen of Rumania and "Queen Mother to the Balkans", was reported holding her own today after being suddenly stricken with a serious illness that developed into a partial paralysis.

The 61-year-old queen, whose children through their marriages had virtually linked the Balkan States in a family alliance, became ill Saturday at the opera.

Her illness was described by a member of the royal household as an attack of kidney ailments complicated by an intestinal inflammation.

Saturday's attack of tradition was said to have taken a turn for the worst and a high fever developed, "somewhat over 100 degrees," the official said.

Two physicians were in constant attendance on her and a Vienna specialist in diseases of the alimentary tract was reported enroute to Bucharest.

Not Considered Dangerous.

Court circles, while making no effort to minimize the seriousness of the queen's illness, said she was not considered in immediate danger.

Shortly after the lifting of a strict censorship ban that had been in force throughout the night, her condition was described reliably as "stationary."

The fact Premier George Tatarescu left Bucharest for a Sunday outing at his country estate was considered a reassuring sign.

Queen Marie's youngest daughter, the Archduchess Ileana of Austria, married Archduke Sysnberg, her residence near Vienna, said the latest report of the queen's condition sufficiently favorable for her not to plan to go to Bucharest immediately.

Royalty Entertained.

King Carol and his sister, the Queen Mother Marie of Yugoslavia, were in the sick-room most of the time, however, the court said the household said.

The queen, writing and charities have filled the Dowager Queen's life since the death of her son.

Part of the time was devoted to a large correspondence with Canadian and American friends, and mention is made on her five-weeks' tour of Canada in 1926 of the queen and royalty feted from coast to coast.

Two Children Die As Result Accidents

Manitowik Que., March 15—(CP) Two children died today as result of accidents, here over the weekend, one from a broken neck and the other crushed by the wheels of a motor vehicle.

Michael Tache 2 1-2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henri Tache died when she stumbled and fell backward, striking her head on the rung of a stool at her home. The child died instantly.

The other victim was Jean-Marie Valiquette, eight, killed when crushed against a telegraph pole by the bumper on a automobile. The youngster had been playing on the road with two companions when an automobile, skidding, struck him. Lionel Villeneuve, was forced to swerve to avoid hitting the children. Manitowik is 80 miles north of Ottawa.

Legal Betting Centres Favored

Toronto, Mar. 15 (CP)—As a step towards eliminating the prevailing gambling here, Mr. J. J. Mc-Grath of the Roman Catholic Adjustment Bureau today suggested the establishment of legal betting centres.

Father McGrath said the government was able to put a "severe crimp" in the bootlegging business by establishment of liquor stores and beverage rooms and he expressed the belief legal betting centres would hit the professional gamblers. Legal betting offices, he said, were already established in New Zealand.

"Thirty countries are financing welfare projects by the government by means of gambling," said Father McGrath.

Work Much Easier on Farm Says Woman 100 Years Old

'Never Had Tomfoolery Like Modern Appliances in Homes'

HARD WORK BEST

Twin Elm, Ont., Mar. 15 (CP)—Mrs. Isabella Allen, never sick in her life until two weeks ago, when she suffered a slight indisposition today celebrated her 100th birthday anniversary and attributed her longevity to lots of hard work and a contented mind.

Mrs. Allen, member of one of the oldest pioneering families in Elgin-ton County, emphasized that hard work, not idleness, was largely responsible for her reaching the century mark. "Why the people of today don't work half as hard as we did 75 years ago on the farm," she said.

"In the old days we had nothing else to think about but lots of hard work and raise our family," continued Mrs. Allen, who reared 11 children, seven of them living.

"We never had such ton-foolery in the old days." Mrs. Allen remarked when asked how she enjoyed modern appliances in her home such as the radio and electric light.

Canada Invited to Cooperate in Supply of Air Pilots

Sir Philip Sassoon Offers Suggestion to Dominion On Training of Pilots

Says Britain Welcomes Canadian Fliers in R.A.F.

PLAN IN ANTIPODES

Australian And New Zealand Scheme Offered as Example

London, Mar. 15 (CP)—Sir Philip Sassoon, Undersecretary for Air, introducing the air estimates in the House of Commons this afternoon, invited Canada to co-operate in the supply of pilots.

"I want to say a few words about Dominion co-operation," Sir Philip said. "There is already in operation a scheme whereby pilots are trained as cadets in the Royal Australian Air Force and then serve a term of years with the air force of this country. Afterwards they revert to the Royal Australian Air Force reserve.

Scheme in New Zealand.

"New Zealand is establishing a similar scheme and also a system whereby candidates who apply for the Royal Air Force are medically examined locally so as to ensure that they are not turned down when they come to this country.

"We should welcome adoption of a similar system by Canada, from which Dominion so fewer than 100 young men have come on their own and have been accepted for short service commissions. We welcome these pilots. They are first rate young men and we wish to do everything in our power to facilitate their entry."

16th Counterfoil Drawn Went to Canadian Holder

Names And Addresses of Lucky Canadians Not Announced Due to Lottery Restrictions—Over Eight Millions to be Distributed in Dublin Draw

Dublin, March 15 (CP Cable) — A Canadian ticket was the 16th counterfoil drawn from the whirling drums of chance as the draw for the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, with a prize fund of $8,311,265, started at the Mansion House.

The counterfoil, drawn on Spoonbud, a 30 to 1 shot, was that of the Grand National Steeplechase, was marked "Badly Needed." The ticket number was 121-77898.

The names and addresses of lucky Canadians were not announced on account of the Dominion's lottery restrictions.

Officials of the Sweepstakes, the world's largest lottery, announced the total intake from tickets was $13,972,190 of which $8,311,165 would be distributed in prizes throughout the world.

Number of tickets on horses finishing one, two, three in the race will receive prizes of $150,000, $50,000 and $25,000, respectively, while those whose tickets draw a horse will receive a minimum of $2,000 each even though the horse is a non-starter.

Stranded Dublin nurses, chosen by lot, paraded to Mansion House with carefully-guarded bags of counterfoils early today, bearing the hopes of millions of ticketholders dreaming of wealth.

SUDDEN DEATHS IN ONTARIO TOTAL 7 OVER WEEKEND

Only One Mysterious, That Being Murder of Taxi Driver

DOCTOR SUICIDES

Found Dead in Garage With Engine of Car Running

(By the Canadian Press)

Ontario's toll of sudden deaths over the week-end stood today at seven, including the murder of a taxi-driver near Hamilton and the death gave Ontario Provincial Police a mystery assignment. There was no immediate clue, as to who shot and killed Lawrence Hewitt found beside his taxi-cab early Sunday.

Other deaths were by violence and accident, little mystery attaching to many of them. Ewert Steiner, 18-year old Waterford farmer, and his father, Frank Steiner, were killed when a drove his motor car into the side of a Lake Erie and Northern train at Mt. Pleasant, near Simcoe, late Saturday.

The accident occurred in daylight at a crossing which provided an unobstructed view for several hundred feet. The Messears knew the highway well.

NIAGARA TOURIST IS QUITE CHANGED

Curio Shop Dealer Tells of Change in Curios in 25 Years

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 15— (CP)—Niagara Falls souvenir dealers complained today that Niagara's brief scenic offerings this season have driven away several tourists to Callander Ont., to see the Dionne Quintuplets.

That wouldn't have happened in the old days when a trip to the falls was a real excursion and not just an afternoon automobile jaunt, declared Canada's oldest falls souvenir dealers collectively.

Ever so, thousands of automobiles invaded both sides of the border over the week end attracted by a belated display of winter ice formations bestowing two weeks ago with its ice bridge across the gorge.

Why sightseers in the old days brought their families, and a trunk, and settled down for three or four days, declared Paul H. Carson. He ran a curio shop for 26 years before turning to the souvenir and jewelry.

"And souvenirs—say, they wouldn't think of leaving without buying a Niagara Falls memento for each of their friends."

But the modern day sight seeker whisks around the reservation in his car and is gone in four hours.

Instead of the Indian relics and curios, people formed a by-gone day for animals,

FREE STATE AIM EXPORT INCREASE

Balance of Trade is 35 to 1 in Favor of Canada

By JOSEPH DENNIGAN
(Canadian Press Dublin Correspondent)

Dublin, March 15 (CP)—Although no definite proposals have been advanced, Irish Free State officials appear to be anxious to increase trade with Canada by the end of 1938.

Trade returns issued here show Free State imports from Canada in the year 1936 amounted to $8,026,446 while exports of Canada amounted only to $228,261. In other words, for every dollar Canadians spent on the Irish Free State, the Irish spent $35 on Canadian goods.

Canada buys Irish textiles for suitings and ladies' coats, washed wool blankets, linen goods and whisky are negligible, according to Irish figures. Free State Dominion the Free State imports wheat, newsprint, soft timber, electrical goods, cotton flour and agricultural machinery.

May Name Commissioner

One move which some quarters believe would help restore the disparity in trade figures is the appointment of a high commissioner to represent the Free State in Canada. Such a move has often been suggested but up to date no definite decision has been taken. Canada has had a high commissioner in Dublin for some years, James Cormack.

Irish officials point to the increasing Irish exports to Canada as recognized by the Department of Industry and Commerce. Canada already has some trade with most of the principal products which the Free State has to export. Irish eggs are sold in the cases of Australia, New Zealand, India, Malaya and other distant parts of the Empire, trade experts say.

TRIAL BEGINS AFTER 31 YEARS

Rocco Esposito Taken From Canada to Newcastle, Pa.

New Castle, Pa., Mar. 15 (AP)—Rocco Esposito, 54, went on trial today on a charge of murder for a killing 31 years ago.

Esposito was arrested at a New York City restaurant last December following an investigation, into the death of Francesco Romeo.

Esposito, a native of New Castle, was also indicted but was exonerated. Assistant District Attorney Freidland said:

"I am not guilty of the murder of Francesco Romeo. I never saw Romeo in New Castle."

Esposito after leaving New Castle as a youth, went into the Northern Ontario gold mining country and later became an agent for the Mine Owners' Association, specializing in the apprehension of several criminals.

He settled down in Toronto for the north country, married and became the father of four sons and daughters.

MOTIVE SOUGHT FOR SLAYING OF LAWRENCE HEWITT

Taxi-Driver of Kitchener Found Dead, Sprawled in Ditch

ROBBERY NOT MOTIVE

Called by Telephone on Saturday Night And Not Seen Again

Kitchener, Ont., March 15 (CP)— Criminal Investigation Department of the Ontario Attorney General's Department today was delving into the motive for the murder of Lawrence Hewitt, Kitchener taxicab proprietor found in the body, shot through heart was found yesterday at nearby Queensville, where he lived, only about five feet from his car.

There was no sign of a struggle Kitchener, Ont., March 15 (CP)— —an unknown man, said to be short, were reported by police in their investigation of the mysterious murder Saturday of Lawrence (Dick) Hewitt, whose bullet pierced body was found in a ditch by his taxicab five miles from here.

They have few clues to aid them in their investigations, however, and Criminal Investigation Inspector A. Boyd of the Criminal Investigating Branch of the Ontario Police. They were told a weird story of Hewitt's car at 11 p.m. with a man at the wheel, presumably Hewitt, and a short, dark man and a woman—standing outside the car.

Powder marks on the man's clothing. The death weapon was found beside the body of Hewitt in the car and the fact he had been shot at close range, the car had been left close to the machine gun bullet.

Near his hand were the keys to his car and a pocket-knife was borrowed on and the battery dead. Robbery as a motive for the crime was discounted when $17 in cash was found in the man's pockets. A cigarette lighter but not smoke a

Jailed to Frighten Husband Now She Can't Get Out

Told Police Too Many Things, So They Investigate

ALL OVER SPAT

Detroit, Mar. 15 (CP)—Getting into jail here was part of a plan to frighten her husband because of a spat, Mrs. Mary Wheeler, 22, Detroit, admitted, but she was still confined to a jail cell today—which emphatically did not figure in the arrangement.

Mrs. Wheeler first told her story to members of a police scout car yesterday after calling the police department from a gasoline station and saying she had no money and no home. To clinch the case and make sure she would be arrested, Mrs. Wheeler added that she was a fugitive from United States illegally. She was born in Ottawa, Ont., she said. That detail checked. Police took her at her word and will have immigration officials check her story. Maybe while she must remain behind the bars.

"I got myself in jail and now I don't know how to get out," Mrs. Wheeler said. She claimed that although she was born in Ottawa, her parents were American citizens.

Mrs. Wheeler said the argument with her husband, Jesse, 23, of Detroit, broke out when he refused to take the bus of a friend and that "she decided to get even with him" by getting arrested.

NAMES OMITTED FROM HONOR LIST

In the Honor Roll list issued from Queen Alexandra School and printed in the Ontario Intelligencer, the names of Mildred Church and Helen Ranjah were omitted. These names should have been included in the list of the Senior Fourth Class.

PRIVATE BILL TO BE HEARD ON TUESDAY

The Private Bill respecting the formation of a Public Utilities and appointment of a City Manager will come before the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature on Tuesday. A. K. Cochrane, K.C., City Solicitor, will appear before the committee to conduct the case for the City of Belleville.

HEAVY 'CUT' TAKEN FROM TIMBER LIMIT

Though hampered by unfavorable weather conditions and a general lack of snow this winter, a fairly heavy "cut" of wood will be taken from his new timber holdings in Tyendinaga Township by Mr. Harry Smith of this city whose modern camp, 18 miles northeast of Belleville, has been busy all this winter. It is estimated that 125,000 feet of hardwood and 25,000 feet of maple will be shipped this month, the latter being the last maple season's work. A force of 22 men has been engaged throughout the winter months at this camp.

SNOW CARPETED HILLS SPLENDID FOR SKIERS

Winter picknicking was enjoyed by scores of Belleville and district, and the ski-ing slopes on the Park Hills district on Sunday where snow conditions were provided another week end of skiing, snow shoeing and allied winter sports. Though not of sufficient depth to afford the more expert skiers the more desirable thrills, the snow was sufficiently heavy to provide amateurs with needed practice. Hot coffee and sandwiches were carried by the majority from this city.

TWO CANINES ARE TAKEN TO POUND

Two dogs in a very poor state of health were found wandering at large by local police and turned over to Thos. Thorne, local pound keeper, over the week end. One of the animals was a red retriever and were a collie but was in a weakened condition owing to the lack of nourishment. The other was a black spaniel. Both were fed and will be retained for the usual period of 48 hours before being disposed of.

A NEW RESIDENCE FOR BLEECKER AVE.

At the half way mark of the month of March, today, contract building permit has so far been issued for the month by the office of the city engineer. This permit authorizes the construction of a new residence on the corner of East Bridge Street and Bleecker Avenue at an estimated cost of $6,000 and will be occupied by Dr. E. Platt, of Plainfield.

DUMP IS SEARCHED FOR JUNK METAL

Vast holes and mounds are being left in the wake of burly workers on the east side dump, where men are still engaged in pulling out old car bodies, rusted tanks and other heavy metal which has defied second depths. Due to the increasing rise in price of old metal the city has been scoured during the past several weeks for junk of any kind. A veritable gold mine of old engines, car bodies and other waste has been uncovered at the city dumps, now almost bare of their treasure due to the efforts of searchers.

OVERHEATED FURNACE PIPES DAMAGE STORE OF H. E. HALES

A slight blaze caused by overheated furnace pipes in the grocery store of H. E. Hales of Olive Street caused slight damage to stock in the cellar when water applied by fire squads answering an alarm, seeped through the flooring. No other damage was done, fire squads answered another alarm shortly after eight o'clock last night when a car parked outside the Boyce Garage on Front Street suddenly burst into flame. Prompt application of preventatives by city firemen prevented serious damage from the blaze which is thought to have started from a short circuit in the electrical wiring.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCE BOARD MEETS MAR. 18

With a number of new applications on file and routine business to be dealt with the Local Board of the Mothers' Allowance Commission of Ontario will hold a meeting on Thursday, March 18th in the office of the Hastings County Clerk.

Mr. Alex Moore is Chairman of the local board.

MORE SNOW SEEN NORTH OF BELLEVILLE

"The weather is grand down here, but there is sledding in the north country" stated County Treasurer James Haggerty this morning. "The Hinchinbrook district of Ivanhoe have a good covering of snow and on my way back there yesterday I saw several cutters on the roads."

"I saw no evidences of sap-making though" declared Mr. Haggerty "but it looks as though maple sugar may be scarce this year than before, I noticed several piles of freshly cut maple, and they appeared to be dry on the ends. Ordinarily as this time of year, the cut ends are wet with sap."

Construction Company Prepares for Spring Work on Highway

Indications that preparations for the spring operations on the Faulkner Flight are well under way, today, were evidenced on Saturday afternoon, when officials of the Campbell Construction Company, rushed through an application for twenty men, to start work on the highway projects near Gilmore this morning.

Eight men from Belleville, six from Deseronto and one each from Point Anne were rushed to the north country early today by trucks and were taken from the relief rolls of the different municipalities. It was stated by Superintendent D. Ross of the local Employment Bureau.

"There is no lack of work this spring for the young fellow who wants to do something" Mr. Ross said. "We have plenty of applications for men, and more are coming in daily. With the scale of wages offered by farmers higher this season than it has been in a number of years, a lot of the unemployed will be much better off by working on the farms, than remaining over a long period of the time in order to get jobs on the highways with their more lucrative returns."

"The call for trained domestics is on the increase, and the employment superintendent stated. We are getting calls daily for this class of help and those no doubt will continue to increase with the Spring housecleaning in full swing. Day work and odd jobs have been scarce up till now but the warm weather and cleanup campaigns usually indulged in at this time of year should result in an increase."

BAND CONCERT IS MUCH ENJOYED

Aims And Objects of The Beach Committee Given Audience

Eminently successful both in attendance and from a musical standpoint, the Sunday evening free band concert provided by the Belleville Beaches Association under the direction of bandmaster Lt. Fred Jobson, and made possible through the courtesy of the Capitol theatre management in donating the theatre free of charge, provided the means of further financing the activities of the Bay of Quinte Beaches in the furtherance of the work of construction of the new beach.

A chairman of the evening, Alderman Laurie Lewis, in welcoming the audience to the theatre, explained the object of the newly formed Beaches Association and paid tribute to the efforts of the band bandmaster Jobson in getting the project started along. "Your band is the very personification of good citizenship, for they subscribe by that service to the public that a man considers fully who does not serve fully the community in which he belongs," declared Alderman Lewis.

Turning to the matter of waterfront development, Alderman Lewis cited it as a fixed, that has existed in Belleville for many years. Now, however, we have made a good start, and it remains only for us to carry on with the help and assistance of residents of the city.

A brief description of the aims of the beach and the work of the members was also given by President Reg. Monerieff.

Community singing of hymns, one of the features of the concert was led by bandmaster Jobson while several individual numbers were offered by members of the band. Members of the Y's Men's Club of the city acted as ushers during the evening.

Obituary

LATE HERBERT L. PEABSALL

Many friends were present at the funeral of Herbert L. Peabsall which took place from the family residence, 25 Queen Street, Saturday afternoon. The impressive service was conducted in the home by the Rev. Dr. James Keough, Pastor of Bridge Street United Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker.

Interment was made in Shannonville Cemetery, Tyendinaga, with the graveside was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Keough assisted by the Rev. L. S. Wight of Shannonville and the Rev. W. H. Clarke of Shannonville.

The bearers were Messrs J. G. Galloway, W. E. Sills, Mark H. G. Kelly, R. Pearsall, A. Baldwin and J. P. Hinchey.

MRS. ALBERT N. REID (Obituary Remarks).

Many of the older residents of Belleville will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Albert N. Reid, widow of Albert N. Reid, which occurred at Toronto on Sunday, March 14th.

The late Mrs. Reid resided with her late husband and family in this city for many years prior to taking up residence at Toronto a considerable number of years ago, residence here she was a faithful member of Bridge Street Church and was also active in church work by many friends. She was a sister-in-law of Mr. C. B. Reid of Belleville. Three sons survive her, Mr. George Reid, Mr. Clarence Reid, and Mr. Ellis Reid.

The funeral will take place from private family residence to Belleville motor cars to the Belleville cemetery where interment will be made in the family plot.

LATE MRS. MELISSA SULLIVAN (Thurlow)

The funeral of Mrs. Melissa Sullivan, widow of Solomon Sullivan, took place Sunday afternoon, March 14th, from the residence of her son, Mr. F. Raymond Sullivan, in the 7th concession of Thurlow and was largely attended. Service was in the house and at the graveside in Victoria Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. W. McDonald or the Presbyterian Church at Roslin. During the service a duet by Gaining with the occasion was sung by Mrs. Ralph Wills and Miss Phyllis Hall.

The bearers were Messrs Fred Gray, John Colden, Edmund Carrington, Charles Beatty, Harry Harrison and Herman Sullivan.

LATE MRS. RACHAEL WALSH (Marysville)

This Monday morning the funeral of Mrs. Rachael Walsh, widow of Michael Walsh, took place from the residence of her son, Mr. J. V. Walsh, at Marysville, to St. Mary's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father C. F. O'Gorman. Interment was made in St. Mary's Cemetery; the committal service was said by the Rev. Father O'Gorman.

Mr. Superintendent D. Ross of the local Employment Bureau.

The bearers were Messrs. Richard Kennedy, John Fields, John Corrigan and Michael Corrigan.

HE KEEPS HIS JOB Though TURNED 70

Home Painter Who Takes His Kruschen Every Day

How many painters can continue to work when they are over 70? Here is one who can—and he still does some of the most difficult jobs in his trade. How does he do it? He tells us in this letter:—

"I have been in the habit of taking a few grains of Kruschen Salts in every cup of tea I have for a great number of years. I may state that I am turned 70 years of age, being born on July 22nd, 1866, I am a house painter by trade and still at work. I can work off any ladder, no matter what height, or in cradles which are hung outside high buildings. I have been asked many times how I carry my age so well as I only look about 50. Well, I tell them all that I owe it to Kruschen Salts regularly every day."—J.S.A.

Kruschen is a combination of numerous mineral salts that assist in stimulating your liver, kidneys and digestive tract to healthy regular activity. They ensure internal cleanliness, and so help you to a blood-stream free from impurities.

ESTIMATED COST OF FLOOD CONTROL PUT AT $48,000

Plans Submitted to Special Committee by City Engineer

CONSTRUCT WALL

Wall Would Run From Lower Bridge to Park Entrance

Estimated cost of flood control and prevention measures for the lower length of the Moira River has been placed at a total of $48,000 in the plans now in place and estimates prepared and submitted of the proposed project by City Engineer Chas. A. Mott to a special flood prevention committee of the city council at a meeting held with Mr. C. A. Cameron, M.P., in the office of Mayor R. D. Arnott on Saturday evening.

The cost, would take into account the construction of a wall, eight feet high from a rock bottom along the east bank of the river, stretching from the lower bridge to a point midway from the entrance to Victoria Park. Total length of this suggested wall would be 1,600 feet. Total construction cost of the wall would be $38,000 with contingencies of $33,000.00 while extra fill in the rear would cost $15,000 it is estimated.

Direct Current

Under this proposed plan the present channel is to be allowed as to divert the current into the deep channel existing on the west side of the river below the old bridge. If plans are carried through the wall to deepen this channel still further so that all excess current may be safely taken away. With the construction of the wall on the east bank of the river, fears of damage through ice would be eliminated in the section of the city, that has been most greatly affected by previous floods.

Plans for the project will be submitted by Mr. Cameron, to the federal department at Ottawa, while a strong plea for assistance in carrying out this work will also be made by the local representatives. It is not improbable, that the special committee of council will be called to Ottawa to confer with Federal engineers on the matter.

The meeting with Mr. Cameron on Saturday evening was attended by Mayor Arnott, Aldermen Chapp Wills, Greenleaf and Jennings and by City Engineer Chas. Mott.

SCHOOL SPORTS BENEFIT BY BILL

Education Minister Asks Appropriation of 25 Cents a Pupil

Toronto, March 15 (CP)—Ontario Department of Education will ask legislation to enable School Boards to do more than is now be-ing done in the encouragement of sports and athletics in Ontario schools.

Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, will bring down legislation Law Amendment Act and it will have a clause to allow Public School Boards to appropriate up to 25 cents a pupil for sport and athletic purposes. The amendment will chiefly affect urban school boards. The present provision for such appropriations being $150.

Second reading debate will be resumed today, it was expected, on the amendment which will be legislative sanction to the revised agreement negotiated between the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the Canadian Niagara Power Company. George Challies (Con., Grenville-Dundas) will lead off.

Attorney-General Roebuck, Hydro Commissioner, has stated the contract was open to doubt on constitutional grounds but this does not bar debate which resumes Tuesday. An investigation may be added into the question of "tied" hotels to see if rumors breweries are linked to certain hotels are true.

When a case of a "tied" hotel was brought to Premier Hepburn's attention some time ago, he acted promptly and the hotel's license was suspended until its financial affiliation with brewing interests was ended.

Over 60 Preps and Juniors participated in an active program sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday morning from 9 till 12 noon. 9.15 a.m. Preps went on the gym floor where they spent an active hour engaged in supervised games of indoor hockey, football, races and relays. They then disbanded and went for a hot shower and plunge in the pool where they joined in a game of tag and later water polo. Meanwhile the Juniors were engaged in basketball games tournament which included ping pong, quoits, darts, shuffle board and checkers. The following winners received awards: Charles Lyall; 2 Harold Martin; 3 Murray Stone.

The Juniors then went up on the gym floor and engaged in a programme similar to the Preps while the Preps engaged in a progressive games tournament with the following receiving awards: 1 Carl Goodyear; 2 Earl Woodley; 3 Langley Evans.

Messrs. Shortt, McMurray, Scott, Bateman and Kerr assisted in putting on the programme.

Deputy Bandmaster Green Pays Visit

Participate in Series of Special Meetings at Ottawa

Deputy Bandmaster and Mrs. J. Green of The Salvation Army, visited Ottawa over the week-end, and held a meeting with the Major and Mrs. A. W. Martin formerly of Belleville, who are now in charge of the Ottawa Citadel Corps, Citadel in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Green participated in a series of special meetings, being "Dead Line" meetings. The Corps visited, Soldiers' Green, rendered a number of cornet solos, during the meetings. Mrs. Green, Band, and also united with Major Martin in singing a duet. Major Martin gave up-to-date "Army" compositions.

The Deputy also conducted the Band in Ottawa's Citadel, featuring of several numbers and contributed a vocal solo with Mrs. Green at the piano.

The Sun Smiles On Spring Styles

Old Sol had a meaning look in his otherwise brilliant eye yesterday, shining down in Spring-like warmth from a cloudless sky upon an earth which revelled in a mild atmosphere, not enough tempered with cool breezes, brought out Mr. and Mrs. John Public in great numbers, the cold fellow caught his first glimpse of the actual harbingers of Spring.

While Easter Sunday, if our information is correct, is the date for the young ladies of this country to don their Easter creations in Spring finery, a few of the more optimistic and fashionable ladies took the weather bull by the forelock, and donned the straw head gear which will be the style for Easter parade of the season.

Sunday afternoon on Front Street, with many a sidewise glance in shop windows to get a glimpse of themselves as they passed, two young ladies sporting snappy black straws with a bit of veiling and a peau styles, with half veils covering their faces before it was erected and a interest spotlight of city pedestrians focused for a moment upon them.

Shyly complaint of the more or less furore they were creating from the gentlemen folk, the "ladies under the skin" not to mention the "boulevard gentlemen" of the girls strolled slowly along the street, stopped at various shop windows to obviously admire displays of merchandise and to take a casual glance at the new creations of the new headpieces.

At that, the ladies were one up on the boys in the final score. For while the boys wore their usual sombre garb, the ladies were adorning the masculine form. It was a brownish grey and was worn by a number of the more overcoat worn by its owner.

Many Belleville people took advantage of the fine weather of the day. Motorists glided to and fro on the city streets, while city thoroughfares accommodated large number of pedestrians who took advantage of warm sunshine to indulge in long walks.

Semi-Nude Skiing Gains in Popularity

Advancing in popularity among local sport enthusiasts, skiing, while frowned on in the waist, again proves a popular recreation on the slopes adjacent to the Ski Club cottage each day. Citizens to visit that section of the municipality report an increased number of skiers, many of the male members enjoying the afternoon's thrills, a la Mussolini.

"The snow was a bit sticky, but aside from that the day was ideal and was enjoyed. There were a number of persons enjoying themselves in the long snow-covered slopes also" added one winter sport citizen today.

With sitting naked to the waist in vogue quite popular and somewhat the fashion these days, local winter sport-minded persons are rapidly adopting the scanty mode of attire, attaining a coveted coat of tan, without the expense of a trip to Florida. With their sharp and smooth slopes as an enticing sport temptress, the Oak Hills are gaining in popularity as a sports centre throughout the winter months.

POLICE BLOTTER

A few short hours after he had been released from the county jail, after serving a short period term on a charge of vagrancy, a blackened giving his name as Stephen Sweeney, was again in the clutches of the law, but on the second occasion on a much more serious charge, namely shop-lifting.

It is alleged by the manager of a local department store, that Sweeney was caught 'red-handed' in the act of lifting one pair of gloves from the 15 cents counter. F. C. Thomson investigated and placed Sweeney under arrest, charging him with theft "You must have lifted it up at the jail" remarked one police official upon recognizing Sweeney as the member of an alleged pan-handling and shoplifting gang of transients, who are reported to have been operating in this section of the province of late weeks.

"Aw, it wasn't too bad up there" admitted Sweeney as he was remanded for sentence and returned to the county jail from where he had only been released some eight hours previously after serving ten days on a charge of vagrancy and panhandling. Sweeney will face the theft charges in a subsequent court.

In all activities proved quite lively for both and around local police circles over the week end. A total of 31 transients were housed in the police station cell block over the week end, an even dozen on Saturday, while the remaining 18 knights of the road flocked there on the night of the Sabbath for shelter.

"Traffic was very light over the week end, the light falls of snow apparently resulting in many motorists rather skeptical as to traction," remarked Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine today as he reported "all clear" on adjacent highways.

POLICE COURT

"I'm guilty, but I was drunk at the time," pleaded Stephen Sweeney, charged with disorderly before Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court charged with the theft of one pair of gloves.

"I only got out of jail a few hours before I was arrested and a friend of mine bought a few drinks. I am fed up to in Toronto if you will give me a suspended sentence, Your Worship," continued Sweeney as he "pleaded and pleaded for "a chance" as he termed it.

"This man was given ten days after being found guilty of vagrancy and panhandling and got out of jail on Saturday morning. Only a few hours later he was caught stealing a pair of gloves in a local department store," interrupted Chief Kidd.

"Ten days, nuts" cried Sweeney His Worship, A drunk admitted his crying ways and was given a suspended sentence upon his own request.

Altercations over a small amount of wages, between master and servant, saw the matter amicably settled when ordered by His Worship. The amount owed was only a few dollars, but nothwith, along with the costs arising.

EVERY PERSON IS A SALESMAN OF SOMETHING

Friday afternoon the students of Ontario Business Colleges were addressed by Mr. George A. Reid on the subject of "Salesmanship." Mr. Reid pointed out that every person is a salesman having something to sell—goods, services, trained ability or skill. In starting out it is a great advantage to have the backing of a good home and a good school, but that alone is not enough to insure success. Industry, knowledge, initiative, honesty, thoroughness, efficiency and a desire to render some useful service are all qualities a successful salesman must possess. Mr. Reid adds in his travels throughout Canada he has found many former O.B.C. students who hold good positions and have proven to be good salesmen. He described incidents in his visit last year to Bermuda, where he met prominent men who received their business training in Belleville at O.B.C. He also commented on the way in which the college has made Belleville known throughout America by its good salesmanship of a good product. In conclusion he urged the students to not only be industrious, but to take an interest in recreation and good clean sport.

LONSDALE

Lonsdale—The weather is some cooler, still favorable for a number who are busy cutting wood.

Quite a few are ill.

The Literary Club was held at Miss Olive Howes on Friday night with a good attendance and a real social evening and good program was enjoyed.

COE HILL

Coe Hill's Young People's Society held their weekly meeting Tuesday evening, March 9th in the room of a church. Announced that it would be in the better interests of Canada to be annexed to the United States rather than to the British Empire."

Messrs. Coe Offenburger and Ivan Gunter taking the affirmative and Misses Frances Smith and Viola Mitchell the negative side.

Mr. Howard Doolittle acted as judge and gave the negative side as the winners.

The fire Wednesday evening, originating in the bake shop adjoining C. T. Rollins' service station did considerable damage to both the bake shop and service station. The smoke was noticed coming from the roof of the bake shop about 7 p.m. by two children playing on the street. The alarm was given and before many minutes a large crowd had gathered eager to help fight the fire. By about 9 o'clock they had it under control. The building was insured against fire.

Dr. Anderson of Bancroft called on Mr. C. S. Rollins Wednesday, last and it is reported that Mr. Rollins will be attending business again in a few days.

The fin epidemic seems to be making its rounds. A number of families have it at the present time.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and Puds Simkins are still half mad at each other on account of having had a fearse argument prity near ending in a fite, and this afternoon when I got home from school I found a note under the door all in pencil ing to dislike the writing, saying on it:

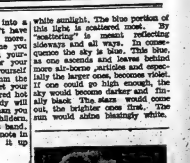
To Benny Potts who it may concern, Any body that owns a purty nice and dummest guy in the world must be even dummer than you are with is impossible so there's no danger. You're so dumm if you ever had a idea it would give your whole family a headake trying to figure out how 2 things at the same time you get diney and fall down and forget how to get up again. Do you remember the time you jumped in a lake to get ech of the rain You're so dumm you dont know your own hand from your left hand and you've got the back of your head all raw from trying to scratch your nose. Simply a dedly enemy,

Ma thinking Dam that guy, I'll tell him who's dumm.

And I printed him a note and went and stuck it in his pighole, saying on it:

To Puds Simkins the dummest of the dummest of the dumm. The only person who can claim he is dummer than you is the biggest liar in the history of the world, You're so dumm if your whole brane was ever put into a fleas head the flea wouldn't have enuse enough to jump any more. Do you remember the time you tried to shake hands with yourself and couldn't remember your own name to introduce yourself to your self? You're so dumm the only way you cough overhead your mind would be to sit on a red hot stove. The only way anybody will ever here a dummer than you will be if it's one of your children. Signed, leader of a ruthless band.

P.S. I found a anonamous note in my vestibule, but I tore it up without reading it.



Being a good P.S.

A FEW FACTS

By Science Service

Ice storms—beautiful but destructive! Our American weather specialists in these storms. They occur when rain falls through air colder than 32 degrees, and then freezes on all exposed objects. How beautiful the trees, wires and all things outdoors look, glittering in the sunlight and sending out rainbow colors! The other side of the story is often one of wholesale destruction. Heavy coatings of ice weigh down wires loaded with ice crash to the ground. Orchards are completely ruined. Telegraph and telephone companies and others suffer immense losses in material; labor and business. A heavy wind will increase the damage and losses.

A black sky in daytime! It is all due to the atmosphere. The air molecules and the small particles of ice reflect and scatter the white sunlight. The blue portion of this light is scattered most. By "scattering" is meant reflecting sideways and all ways. In consequence the sky is blue. This blue, as one ascends and leaves behind more air-borne particles, and especially the larger ones, becomes violet. If one could go high enough, the sky would become darker and finally black. The stars would come out, the brighter ones first. The sun would shine blazingly white.

OLD KINGS OF EGYPT.

Mummies of the ancient pharoahs of Egypt resting in Cairo, Egypt, museum, will likely be unclaimed, according to word from the Egyptian Embassy at London. At the famous Giza or at Heliopolis, it is expected that special underground tombs will be built and then the light of day will be sealed from them as they are shut up for ever and a day from the eyes of man.

Mummies of Egyptions who were less than kings are scattered all over the world. In Toronto, in museums and in educational institutions there rest those who were once among the great. Today they are the gaze and study of millions of persons in almost every country in the world, for Egypt, a land of mystery for ages is still a land of attraction and appeal. It is not only the process of mummifying of the bodies which is interesting but also the nature of the burial, with the relics buried with the mummies in their tombs. These have been of priceless importance in research into the life of the land which lies about the ancient Nile. Arts in Egypt flourished as these rings and other precoius articles found in the tombs reveal, at a stage of civilization, which is still the marvel of the world.

Egypt has given not only mummies but also pyramids, the construction of which still puzzles the world, their meaning and purpose still a point over which men contend. Then Egypt is so closely associated with the Hebrew race which has the most powerful appeal to the western and near-eastern world. Even in the days of the writing of the records which tell of the great Moses, there was everywhere the wonder of the mystery. Still there was known for the fertility of its soil long before the days of the famed Prime Minister Joseph and even before that time just as it is today it belongs its name to down stream.

It is not to be wondered at that the Egyptians are considering the re-entombment of their ancient kings in a fitting place, taking them out of museums where they are subject to the gaze of generations which are new in history as these old rulers are ancient, their names going back into the mist of dawning civilization in the eastern end of the Mediterranean. Yet the modern Egyptian knows less the language of the old kings than modern Englishmen know the languages of the Angles and Saxons who dwelt on the continent long before they came to what is now England.

The most famed of the Egyptian kings, Tut-Ankh-Amen, was placed back in his tomb at Luxor, after the tomb had been thoroughly studied. The other kings are in Cairo museum.

If the old rulers of Egypt are to be re-entombed, it will be with rites and ceremonies so different from the day when their eyes gazed for the last time on the moving panorama along the Nile. There is little doubt that ceremonies as old as men know about through ancient records on tombs and from sarcophagi and commorials will be used, but these will not go the full way to repeat the burial of these great men who loomed so large in history. There will be also the touch of contrast with these modern days in some modern rites into the final sealing of the tombs.

While to some it may seem a sort of sacrilege to have invaded these tombs, and particularly so to Egyptians whose beliefs while different from those of their ancestors yet naturally would be stirred by the excavations, yet the excavations have revealed the past of the land which has greatly extended knowledge and in the minds of the west justified the disturbing of the kings' rest. It should not be forgotten that the tombs of these kings were not first broken into by the scientific excavators but by thieving tribes who in many beat the scientists to the scene and rifled the tombs. Fortunately some escaped the thieves.

Perhaps the old Kings if they could see and feel would say this scientific study was worth while as it brought them to the light of day, revealed them as they lived and assures them a fame in modern days whereas without their removal from the tombs they would have been forgotten by all civilization.

It will be a great day for Egypt when the old rulers are again laid in the tombs.

Good men do not always have grace and favour, lest they should be puffed up, and grow insolent and proud.—Chrysostom.

Mercy to him that shows it, is the rule. —Cowper.

The greatest attribute of heaven is mercy. —Beaumont and Fletcher.

Men are the sport of circumstance, when the circumstances seem to sport of men. —Byron.

All great men are to some degree inspired. —Cervantes.

"INASMUCH —"

You asked not whence we came, nor where we went;
That we were spent and famished that you saw;
You led us through your door to all content,
What is Your Law?

You brought cool water for our hands and feet;
We, whom the road had broken with its rods,
You poured the wine—you bade us rest and eat,
Who Are Your Gods?

No little words our gratitude can fit;
Parting, we lean to kiss your garment's hem,
Tell us your Law, that we may honor it,
Name us your God, that we may worship
Him.

WHEN ONE IS TWIRLING THE DIAL OF THE RADIO in generally a vain effort to get something entertaining one is given to wonder how great business executives can explain all this money dumped so carelessly into radio publicity, so much of which vanishes into thin air as practically waste product. Roger W. Babson, famous commercial statistician, had an experience with radio advertising which is illuminating. Babson broadcast an advertisement by radio at a cost of $3,000. He received sixteen enquiries and two orders as a result. A couple of days later he ran the same advertisement in five newspapers in different cities at a cost of $5,000, and received 4,000 replies. The radio advertisements cost him $166.66 for each reply, whereas the newspaper advertisement was only 75 cents a reply. When an advertising message is printed on the good white page its life is likely to be much longer than the day of its date. It is sure of an audience the first day of most of the newspaper readers, and as long as the paper lasts the message remains capable of planting seed in good ground. The radio message is thrown upon thin air and presented before an audience looking for entertainment, musical or otherwise, and impatient of interruptions. The dial keeps twirling, twirling—and the radio advertising message has a tough time getting a hearing, sympathetic or otherwise—certainly not the interested hearing a newspaper advertisement receives.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE wrote a lot of plays which are not only living today but will probably be played to the end of time. Nobody ever alleges that they "date." They are in a class apart for beauty of language and human interest. Shakespeare died a poor man. He never spent much on his productions because for one reason he never had much to spend, says the St. Thomas Times-Journal, in discussing the continual vogue of Shakespeare as shown by the experience of John Gielgud, an English actor, who presented "Hamlet" on Broadway for 132 consecutive performances, which is the longest run that drama ever had in the United States. The gross receipts were nearly $400,000. Another British actor opened on Broadway two or three weeks ago with the rarely played "Richard II", and it is packing the house eight times a week, with as many as 250 people paying for standing room. Each of those dramas will have yielded far more than Shakespeare ever received for his entire output.

DIGESTING THE INFORMATION

Little Willie was ill, and the medical man had been sent for. His mother rushed up to the doctor as soon as he entered the house and started sobbing hysterically.

"Calm yourself, my good woman," he said "and tell me what is the matter with the little chap."

"Oh, doctor!" she wailed, "he managed to get hold of the dictionary somehow, and chewed three pages out of it!"

"Have you given him an emetic?" asked the medical man.

"Yes—oh, yes!" was the mournful reply. "But I can't get a word out of him."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 15TH, 1917.

Mr. Charles Holland of the 254th Battalion is spending a few days at Whitby.

Mr. Frank Phillips of Minneapolis, Minn., who has been visiting relatives here, has returned home.

Mr. Frank J. Kennedy has returned to his home at New York City after visiting relatives here for a few days.

Mr. Mark Adamson spent the week end at Napanee.

30 YEARS AGO

MARCH 15TH, 1907

Messrs William and John McIntosh have returned home after a business trip to New York city.

Mr. J. L. Tickell has returned from Toronto.

Mr. William Rose will leave tomorrow for Girvin, Sask., to conduct operations on his farm there during the coming season.

Mr. Alf. Bales of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a short time here on business.

Mr. Phil. Lee is home from Montreal on a visit to his parents.

Mr. Leon Wallace is on the sick list.

Mr. George Wease of Bancroft is spending a few days in the city.

Mr. James A. Mills left today for Kingston.

40 YEARS AGO

MARCH 15TH, 1897

Mr. William Schuster, who has been in the employ of the Standard Gas Company here for many years, has been promoted to the position of manager of their extensive business at Peterboro. An honorable promotion worthily bestowed. His many friends in Belleville will be pleased to hear of his promotion.

Mr. Eddy was seen today on Albert Street.

Mr. Bel Thomas is here from Chicago on a visit to his brother Mr. George Thomas.

Mr. James Haggarty, M.P.P. returned to Toronto today after spending the week end at his home.

Mr. Thomas F. J. Power arrived home from the east on Saturday night and will leave for the west this week. Mr. Power is the manager of the Canadian tour of Brooke's Chicago Marine Band.

50 YEARS AGO

MARCH 15TH, 1887

An ice boating party from Trenton entered in the harbor today. The following composed the party, Messrs Janey Richardson, R. Grass, S. A. Young and R. A. Barber. They made the journey here from Trenton in 32 minutes and enjoyed it immensely.

Mr. Clark Kellogg, representing Messrs Clarke, Hodgkins and Mercer-Work, has taken first steps toward constructing the Belleville Water Works system. The six flat cars freighted with piping were unloaded yesterday on Pinnacle Street near Dundas Street. Mr. Kellogg states that it is his intention to take advantage of the ice in the bay and put the suction pipes in immediately. As soon as the frost is out of the ground operations will be commenced on Bridge and Pinnacle streets. The city. A large force of men will be put to work and it will probably be two weeks before the works will be completed before next winter.

Alas, Poor Yorick

Why do our sympathetic fears go unbidden to the misfortunes that we read of William Faversham fallen upon a bankrupt old age? How wrong of us to reserve a special pity for an impudent actor, who squandered the profits of his affluence and now totters toward the grave as a kind of patron's object of charity! Do not all fellow-creatures without social security have an equal claim upon our compassion? If we have tears, should we not shed them for the poor barristers without briefs, ambitious bricklayers without jobs, or even mature matadors without bulls?

Perverse creatures that we are! We forget the toilers and mollers of the "real" world, and our sympathetic hearts melt when old age and poverty overtake players of hundreds and illusion. We sigh back to our adolescence when we first "did" Know thine author" and saw Faversham as Marc Antony orate over it in "Julius Caesar." How, then, could we forswear allegiance to ranting tacklarins temporary money to build, and heroines of imaginary joys and sorrows, before the footlights, where all is pretense and make-believe?

x x x

The fantasy of it. Iago! Thousands and thousands of commonsense Americans will never be able to picture an actor who is not Othello sharn arguing the price of carrots with the grocer, inking his fingers over income axes, or drinking beer with nany who eat pie for breakfast and Scotch highballs for dinner. Suggesters William Patterson the Conqueror will forever splitter in Sir Brice Quilp in "The Masquerraders" Claude George de Dascita in "The Lady of Lyons," Basil in "Under the Red Robe," and the bard's Iago, Hamlet and Macbeth.

x x x

Aye, you and I, men of realists, there's the rub! Actors are flights jacks o' many parts. They never do for long in any. They never contribute to "civilization" by spending sons in factories, clarifying women over pieceswork or educating children in mill towns. Poor "nonproductive" chests. Their trivial task is to romp and cavort to the delight of wonder of first love, youths to the glory of chivalry and adventure, and old to dreams of the dear, dead days.

Prodigal sons and daughters likewise are these thespians of the old school. They hospitals and cheer their work companions, keep open house of hospitality and understanding, and, all in all, are more Christian charity than the unco' guid. What—marvel, then, that children and grown-ups continue to despise the grubbing sanctimonious and extol loving frailty to the gay and bewitching grasshopper? For it is he who stores up the memory of sunshine for mankind, even as he spends it—loveliest in the dances closer and closer to the shield, inevitable winter.—Chicago Daily News.

Paying Their Debts

It was back about 1905, says The Lethbridge Herald, at the time when Alberta started its autonomous province, that settlers began to pour into South Alberta, for in years prior to that time the parklike of the prairie stretches had not been that the population began to grow little towns began to spring up, schools were built by hundreds as new communities were carved out of the virgin country. That was when South Alberta looked with all the confidence in the world to the future and the new towns and cities and school districts, faced with the necessity of providing service for the new settlers, borrowed money to build. Lethbridge was one of the spots on the map which began to grow at that time. In 1905 Lethbridge had about 2500 people. By 1912 it had 10,000. It was only natural that there should be borrowing by the new municipal bodies.

Thirty years have passed and today we find that a lot of the municipalities and school districts are paying out. While the annual meetings prior to town and village elections early in February, were being held, the financial statements presented were in the majority of instances, the best evidence that South Alberta is paying up its public debts.

For instance, we find that the town of Vulcan, centre of one of the finest wheat belts in the West, has paid off all debenture debts, has $44,000 no liabilities and has $8,180 cash in the bank.

Across the way toward the foothills the old town of Nanton has wiped out its debenture debt, has assets of $21,000, and in the past six years has reduced its mill rate one-third.

The town of Macleod, which had to undergo a receivership under the Public Utility Board about ten years ago, did not come through with such a good record but even as usual because it had to spend nearly $10,000 due to freezing of water mains during the extremely cold winter a year ago, proved that the town is keeping its debenture payments right up to date, and it has a surplus of $20,000 in the hands of the Utility Board in case of emergencies. Macleod will pay off and see the end of debt paying in sight one of these days.

The town of Pincher Creek, cradle of ranching in southwestern Alberta, has no debenture liabilities by $13,500 during 1936, and today has only an debenture outstanding. This debt, on the municipal building, will be wiped out by 1940. Pincher Creek's school debt is in similarly good standing, and the town boasts have been up to a manner satisfactory to the town council.

The village of Carmangay came through the year with a surplus of $3,100.

Blairmore, in the centre of the Crow's Nest Pass coal field, has been paying its way, too. Last year it turned a deficit of $9,200 into a surplus of $2,200. The town had a reserve of cash in the bank amounting to $41,500 at the end of the year. Blairmore school district also boasts that it has assets of $53,000 with debt against the district of only $726, which is nothing to worry about.

South of Lethbridge near the border we have our single-tax town, Milk River, where there is no business, professional, stock and where no license is charged for any legitimate business. The only tax is on land values. Well, Milk River came through 1936 with $1,433 in cash on hand. The Milk River consolidated school came through the year with $6,000 cash balance, and today owes only $11,200 on the capital cost of its fine school building.

SEEKS LOST HUSBAND

Mrs. Gertrude Redfern, of Pittsburg, Pa., wife of Paul Redfern, long-lost aviator, will accompany an expedition into the jungles of South America in an attempt to solve the mystery of Redfern's disappearance. He vanished in 1927 on an attempted non-stop flight between Brunswick, Ga., and Rio de Janeiro.

OF COURSE, you know that children should never drink tea or coffee. But do you realize that the caffeine in tea and coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too?

If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly . . . caffeine may be to blame.

Isn't it worth while to try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffeine. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink, too . . . and may prove a real help.

FREE! Let us send you your first week's supply of Postum. Mail the coupon to Postum Department, General Foods Limited, Cobourg, Ontario. 7-37

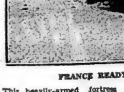
Raid is Conducted On Family Ice Box

One locally family were minus the accustomed Sunday feast as sneak thieves made off with the family ice box and made off with a choice four pound roast of beef. The meat was daintily rolled, after having been a choice selection, and ready for the roasting oven.



The head of the household, who resides on Campbell St., placed the roast in the family ice box, in an outer kitchen late Saturday night. Upon rising Sunday the roast had disappeared, but four pints in the same outside, revealed to investigating police, that the robber had approached the kitchen window and reached through into the ice box.

Police have been troubled with thieving transients in Belleville for some weeks past and today are placing the blame of the missing roast upon such persons. It is believed the transients stole the roast and made off with it, later cooking it in the vicinity of one of the way-known local jungles, although police efforts to locate the same proved futile. Whether the family reverted to the conventional scrambled eggs or not was not learned.

Court

Magistrate E. J. Butler sentenced Lee Gagne to 14 days imprisonment and three months' indeterminate to the Ontario reformatory for stealing a bicycle, a wrist watch, cable and sheet copper the property of several construction companies at the R.C.A.F., station east of here. The stolen articles were valued at approximately $200. Acting Crown Attorney C. Payne, stated and were taken from the airport in broad daylight in a pale blue Ford Coupe car he admitted and if convictors are to successfully carry on this type of thievery they must be able to trust the men in responsible positions and not be hurtled behind the rifle.

Gagne was earning eighty cents an hour as bon carpenter, while he was employed by the general contractors. He sold $24.00 worth of stolen goods to Baker Bros. in Cobourg for cash. Attorney said, while the remainder was recovered by detectives of the prov. H. D. Graham, K.C., attorney for the accused stated, "It's his first offence" and pleaded for suspended sentence. If I suspended sentence of this nature, I feel that I would not be doing justice to the public, prosecutor Magistrate Butler declared in passing sentence. Gagne's sentence was the consecutive.

Albert Goldhammer, Montreal chemist, was fined $100 and costs or produce, his operator's permit, Magistrate Butler ordered. He must also fully come 500 miles to appear. Will you take a cheque in payment of your bill for drugs? This one, strictly on the cash basis the Attorney asked.

Margaret Harriet Weese, daughter of the late Dr. and Lillian Weese, Front of Sidney, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Rowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Rowe, Toronto, on Saturday afternoon at 4.00 p.m. in St. Edmund's Anglican church, Toronto. The bride was attended by her sister who wore a picture hat with corresponding accessories and wore a corsage of Talisman roses. Sister of the groom, Miss Nora Rowe acted as maid of honor. Mr. Chesley Jones was best man. The couple will reside in Toronto.

Classed as just not die.

The specialist who was called to the house soon pronounced him out of danger for the time being, and said that with care he might live for many years. And at the end of a fortnight Caesar was brought back home in Henry Mathews's big car, looking surprisingly handsome and his illness quite indiscernible. It was obvious from the first moment that he meant to make the most of his illness.

He must not be worried, he declared, when Heather was forced to ask him about money matters. "Surely these unimportant details can wait until I am well again?" he would say reproachfully. "Really, Heather, I expected more consideration from you, at all events."

He did not choose to see how worried she was, and she did not like to tell him that she was at her wits' end to know how to find the money with which to pay all the expenses of the past fortnight—the nursing home, the doctor, the semaine specialist.

John had a solution to offer; he said frankly that he could not find the money. "Why not write to Paul and Betty?" he said. "They ought to help—they've both married rich people."

And so after a great struggle with herself Heather wrote. Betty replied at once. She was terribly sorry that Caesar had been ill, of course, but they really must understand that she could hardly expect her husband to find the money. "I've been married such a short time," she told how she put it, "although Stephen is a perfect darling. I can't very well ask him to hand out such a sum. can't! He didn't marry the family, did he? I will see if I can manage a tenner" but no more, and that he was certainly not going to write cheques for money.

Betty must put both letters in the fire and tried to forget them. And only two of her friends and acquaintances responded to the sad, slightest hope of assistance—Henry Mathews and Bruce. That either or both of them would help her she knew well enough—but something in her made her hesitate to appeal to... Bruce, or of letting him share her distress.

She was not so afraid of Mathews, and more than once when he called at the house—which he often did, she tried to find the courage to ask him for help, but was prevented by the fact that she would say, but each time the little speech seemed to ring less true.

Night after night she lay awake racking her brains for ways and means. In the end, when the nursing home had rendered its account for the third time, with an added footnote, "Kindly settle," she made up her mind to speak to Henry Mathews.

She thought afterwards that he must have guessed her predicament for with her first stumbling words he broke in cheerily: "Don't say a word more.....there's no need!..... It's been on my mind a dozen times to ask you myself." He drew a cheque book from his pocket and when she would have spoken he waved her into silence.

"Not a word, I'm only too pleased and proud. It's just the least I can do, my dear, for your father's friend again. Look here, I'll sign them and leave them for you to fill in."

He tore out four blank cheques, signed them in an extravagant, generous hand, and held them on the table.

Heather looked at him, her cheeks crimson. "I'm so ashamed," she faltered. "But.... I simply don't know where to find the money. You do believe that I'll pay you back, don't you? I've never borrowed money from any one in all my life, and I'm so ashamed, but you see—"

Mathews' honest face took color from hers. "It would be a poor world," he said, "if we couldn't help each other now and again, Heather!"

She said with deep emotion, "If there was only something I could do for you—in return for all your kindness. It was like him that the amazing thing happened, for he answered bluntly:

"Well, there is—" and then as she waited, he leaned his hands on the table, and looked at her almost shyly. "Marry me," he said. "If you'll make me a good wife, I can promise that I will make you a good husband."

Just like that! Without any preamble. And without giving her a chance to speak, he went on, "I know what you're going to say—that you can't leave your father and the family, but I'm not asking you to. Marry me, and we'll all live together, up at my place. It's big enough for a dozen young people, our place it will be, if you'll say 'yes.' I'm not asking you to love like me. We shall be just a jolly family party as we are now, with the only difference that you'll be my wife." He paused, but still she could find no words, and he continued. "I've wanted to ask you for some time; I admire you more than any one I know. You're a good girl, Heather—and I'd like to make you happy." His voice was low and unsteady.

"I'm not a bad sort," he said—"and I'm well off, if that will be an inducement—not that I think you're interested in money. I could get another car, so that there'll be two —enough for us all to pack into when we want a holiday, and we'll be mistress of the house...what do you say, dear?"

She said shakenly, "I can't say anything—I'm so amazed—I can't believe—You're so generous—so kind to me, so generous—but— but I don't love you....."

He answered bumbly, "I'm not the sort of man a girl would fall in love with, I'm afraid, but.... well, perhaps in time you'd get fond of me—"

She said breathlessly, "I am fond of you—you've been such a wonderful friend. I can never thank you for all you've done for me—for Caesar—for all of us, but—"

He interrupted her. "Don't answer now, anyway. I always like to think things well over myself, and I'd like you to do the same. You won't mention it again until you want to, and we won't let it make any difference except that you'll know, if ever you feel you can say 'yes'—"

And there he left it. shaking hands with her before he departed in nothing unusual had been said, and leaving the signed checks on the table.

Heather stood staring down at them feeling as if she were in a dream.

"If you'll make me a good wife, I can promise that I will make you a good husband!" She remembered the words with a feeling of tears and laughter.

Marriage with him would bring so many advantages to them all, she knew. It would mean the end of financial worries and assured home; it would mean transferring a heavy load from her own tired shoulders to those who would be both kind and capable of bearing them for her. It would mean another year—perhaps at a public school—for Bobbie, and afterwards a good start in business. It would make all the difference to Effie's future, and possibly to Ailsa's lengthen Cassie's life.

She saw all these things with fatal clarity, even while she never gave a thought to herself, or to what it would mean for her.

Since the first day of her father's illness she had avoided Bruce by every mean in her power or, perhaps a little later, Bruce had left the field to be the only possible thing.

Here extreme sensitiveness warned her that if it was True, as Violette declared, that he was merry to her and influenced by their boy and girl love affair, she had but deepened his pity when she had broken down and had sobbed her heart out before him.

And apart from her own pride, there was Violette to consider—Violette who had lately seemed to be so wild and reckless, as if she were flinging defiance at some one who was hurting her. Heather knew Violette well enough to see beneath the recklessness and flippancy, and to know that she was suffering.

What would Violette do if she could not get what she wanted? She was so willful! Warm unbalanced girl might be capable of any foolishness. Violette was far from all right, and I frightened Heather to remember how, when her stepmother had refused to let Violette go had, in a sudden rage of anger and disappointment, threatened, and even made an attempt to throw herself out of the nursery window.

Useless to say, "Well, she's older and wiser now," for Violette was still a child at heart in spite of her veneer of worldliness and pretended indifference and flippancy.

Heather thought again of Henry Mathews—and then shuddered. If she married him, it would free Bruce of any imagined duty to herself—Violette was not the only one the girl who so plainly loved him.

Heather felt that she could marry, if she can promise to make you a good husband."

It was a very romantic way of proposing, and yet Heather had heard no love—only kindness underlying the words.

Her pathetic way it deepened her self-respect and pride to know that this man, whom surely many girls would be glad to marry, had wished to make her his wife.

Heather knew what the family would say if they knew! The family who were so comfortably sure that Bruce would propose.

Effie came into the room with the cheques in her hand, looking very pale and peaky for she had never been strong and the unusually hot weather had tried her grievously.

Her sharp eyes fell on the checks and she exclaimed, "Oh, look at the money." she said. "Has Caesar paid up at last?"

Heather gathered them up hurriedly. "You've got eyes like gimlets," she said, and added, "Aren't you well? You look so pale."

"I've got a headache." Effie said with a sigh. "I've always got a headache now." she added with sudden passion, "Oh, Heather, why can't we go away? I'm sick of it. I wouldn't hurt Caesar if he goes by car, but I think I ought to have a change, and it seems such a shame—that lovely house standing empty when we might be there! Why can't we go?"

Heather's fingers closed mechanically on the checks, which she had thrust into the pocket of her coat, and said with an effort, "I'll see what I can do, Effie, but you must be patient. Caesar is not quite himself yet, and he's very fond of you—he'll get another car, so that there'll be two to pack into when we want a holiday."

Effie flung a cushion into the air with joy. "When can we go?" she demanded excitedly.

Heather laughed. "I'm afraid I can't manage it before Friday," she said, "there'll be so much to do."

"We can all do our own packing," Effie retorted.

Violette, who was lying on the couch smoking cigarettes after cigarette, said in a bored voice, "I shouldn't think any one's packing would take very long. I can put all my rags into a case in five minutes."

"Rags!" Effie retorted. "When you've got tons of clothes, and those new ones from Paris which she stopped as Violette suddenly raised herself. her face flushed. "Will you kindly mind your own business," she said sharply.

Effie shrugged her shoulders. There was a short silence which Caesar broke to say in his dignified way, "I shall arrange to travel down by easy stages. I have no doubt that Mathews will lend me his car and chauffeur." He spoke rather as if he would be conferring a favour—and Heather, trying hard to accept his generosity, and Bruce for a brief moment, stood at the open window said, "I can take three or four in my bus if the engine is sent on."

"Oh, are you coming too?" Effie cried joyously.

"I don't know, anyway," he answered.

"I sincerely trust that you will stay, my dear fellow," Caesar said with the air of a host welcoming a neighbour. "Stay as long as you please. It is the very least I can do for you after your kindness to me." He looked at Heather.

"Mr. Mathews is coming too—for part of the time," Bobbie put in. She shall not spend her honeymoon with Bruce, and her color deepened as she met his steady regard. For a breathless moment she wondered whether by some strange insight he guessed what had happened that morning, but he only said quietly, "He's a decent chap."

When he had gone Violette flung away a half smoked cigarette and stood up. "I'm going out in the garden," she said. "This room is stifling."

Nobody moved for a moment, until Bruce quietly rose and followed her.

There was a little silence before Effie said in an aggrieved tone, "It's such rubbish. Violette talking about her 'rags' only yesterday she showed me two lovely frocks which Paddy Jepson bought her when they were in Paris."

Heather looked up quickly. "Which Paddy Jepson bought her?" she said.

Effie nodded. "She said so." And then, "Is it right for men to buy frocks for girls they aren't engaged to? I read in a book somewhere that it was wrong to accept clothes."

Heather made no reply, and when Effie had gone she put down her needlework and covered her face with her hands.

It had been difficult to sit there in front of the family listening to their light-hearted chatter when only an hour before Caesar had called her into his study and had shut the door in his best theatrical manner telling her to prepare herself for bad news. She had at once imagined that he was worse, but he quickly set her fears at rest.

"My health, thank God, is as good as I can expect," he said fervently, "it is merely my financial position which is worrying me and preventing my complete recovery."

And then he told her, blaming fate and every one but himself, that he was at the end of his resources. As far as she could gather from the mass of words with which he tried to cloak the truth, for years they had been dependent upon his very slender capital which had now entirely disappeared.

"I dare not write a check," Caesar declared dramatically, "lest it should be dishonored, and what we are to do it is beyond my powers to say. A bankless future we have to face, although I cannot bear the thought of parting from the home to which I brought your dear mother as a bride. I am confiding in you, Heather, because you are the eldest, and because I feel that you alone can sustain me in this the most severe trial I have ever been called upon to bear."

When in a moment of weakness, she had said despairingly, "Pride, what are we to do?" he had answered that all his life he had lived beyond his means, and that now others must think for him.

And that was all, and Heather had gone from the room feeling that there was only one way open to her—and that was marriage with Henry Mathews, a man who only three weeks ago had been no more than an unimportant acquaintance of Caesar's.

She had only once visited his house, which was three miles away from Tangley—a big, rambling house standing in many acres of garden, but she had thought it how beautiful it was, and what waste it seemed that only a middle-aged bachelor should live there.

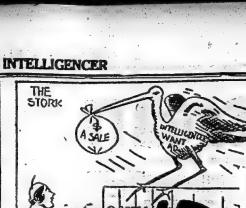
DRIVES ICE BOAT WITH AN ENGINE

Dr. R. V. Hall, Frankford Invents Machine And it Works Well

Frankford, (Special)—Dr. R. V. Hall, D.D.S, working in spare time this winter, has invented something new around these parts—an ice boat driven by a two cylinder motor engine.



A toboggan, on which has been placed the engine, has a disc centred drum attached at the rear. This drum running along on the surface produces the propelling power. The boat is steered by a rudder in front, connected by cable to the drum. When the stick is pushed to the right or left the drum is shifted accordingly, changing the course of the boat. An automobile seat with steering wheel, gear shift and throttle, underneath for tools, spare parts etc., provides a comfortable place for the driver. The front deck is built up and sets at a forward slant. On Monday morning, Dr. Hall made a trial run on the ice surface of Cold Creek Mill Pond, with a large gathering of representative citizens and was greeted with admiring small boys.

After giving the engine a couple of trials, the doctor ran it under gear and with increasing speed the boat skimmed over the ice. Turning in circles, over short spaces and climbing over hummocks without any apparent difficulty.

With the shades of evening closing in, operations were ceased for the day. There are a few improvements and adjustments to be made, and it is possible, that a lighting system may be installed to permit of enjoying the sport by night.

TEAR GAS FLOW STARTED IN HOTEL BY FRAYED WIRE

Concord, Ont., March 15 (CP)—A frayed electric wire caused a short circuit which emitted a stream of tear gas into the lunch counter lobby and office of the Royal York Hotel early today. A few guests were driven from grapefruit before opened doors cleared away the cloud of blinding vapor.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Horse Feathers" and "Private Worlds"

The Capitol presents today and Tuesday, two great revival features brought back for those who missed these pictures when shown here before. Though not as Ace Revival No. 1, the four Marx Bros. in "Horse Feathers" and hit number 2, Claudette Colbert in "Private Worlds."

Neither in heaven nor on earth, on land nor sea, is there anything even remotely resembling "Horse Feathers." It is just about the most insanely delirious bowl of nuts ever let loose on the screen. It has neither rhyme nor reason—except to make audiences laugh until the tears roll. You can take "Cocoanuts", "Animal Crackers" and "Monkey Business", lay them end to end (if possible) and you still will not get a million miles from approximating the mad pandemonium which some inspired soul on Hollywood way saw fit to call "Horse Feathers."

This time the Marx-mindless go collegiate—and with a vengeance. Groucho, Chico, Harpo and Zeppo, the new president of Huxley College. He has accepted the position in order to get back in his twelfth year as a freshman at Huxley, old college. Harpo is working his way through college as the town dog-catcher. Chico runs a speak-easy then neglects the dogs to pursue a trim ankle. Chico is an enormous ice-cream fiend. Baccalaureli, who plays college football and runs a speak-easy on the side. Between them they make the picture just a big, loud college yell.

They clown with the co-eds; they pig with the learned professors; they caper all over the campus. The dialogue is altogether insane, and the action is even giddier.

"Private Worlds"

A challenging message to those who fear that real, intelligent love is contained in the story of "Private Worlds," the absorbing psychological drama shown as revival hit No. 2.

Adapted from the widely read Phyllis Bottome novel of the same name, the picture stars Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer, Joel McCrea, Joan Bennett and Helen Vinson. "Private Worlds" peers into the recesses inside of creatures of flesh and blood and reveals the fears, complexes and inhibitions that are the real stuff of romance.

An isolated hospital for the insane is the picturesque and dramatic background of this film. In it is revealed the life and drama of this little group of people, doctors who administer to the mental ills of others, yet who fail to understand their own minds and hearts.

Miss Colbert plays the part of a woman psychiatrist who takes refuge from love in the mystery of a sweetheart who died in the war. She is in open conflict with her colleague, Charles Boyer, who has learned to hate and mistrust women through the cruel misdeeds of his sister, Helen Vinson.

Miss Vinson and Miss McCrea away from his wife, Joan Bennett, and a near-tragedy is narrowly averted when Miss Bennett learns the truth and totters on the verge of insanity.

Love finally grows between Miss Colbert and Boyer becoming the indirect cause of the death of the latter.

Miss Colbert saves Boyer's life and then points out to him his error in thinking that he was without love from the consequence of her acts. It is only when these two cooperate to set their little world to rights again that they learn that they have found love. Their seeming hatred has concealed a growing love for each other which now can find expression.

Last complete show at 8.30 with no increase in prices.

AT THE BELLE

"After the Thin Man"

The mixture of comedy and drama which W. S. Van Dyke unfailingly injects into a mystery picture is evident in his latest effort, "After the Thin Man," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film which opened to three capacity audiences at the Belle on Saturday, with William Powell and Myrna Loy in the starring roles.

Denied to that memorable masterpiece of cinema mystery, "The Thin Man," this was written by the same author, Dashiell Hammett, and surrounds the intimable sleuth with a sparkling cast of favorites, including James Stewart, Elissa Landi, Joseph Calleia, Jessie Ralph and Asta, the remarkable wire-haired terrier of "The Thin Man."

Returning from their New York honeymoon, Nick and Nora Charles, San Francisco, Nick and Nora, of the remembered original, receive a wire and excitement in San Francisco. The story carries you into the seductive atmosphere of historic Nob Hill and by way of contrast into the familiar comradeship of Nick and Nora. There is murder, of course, and if you're in the audience identifying the killer in advance Saturday he is entirely to himself.

William Powell, as the ace detective, Nick Charles, excels his performance in "The Thin Man," and Myrna Loy reaches a new high as the devoted wife. The supporting cast is excellent throughout and the picture is entirely up to the standard of Dashiell Hammett who ranks among America's foremost mystery writers.

Hunt Stromberg was the producer, with W. S. Van Dyke directing. Van Dyke is an enthusiast for mystery stories and accordingly has handled the story with real feeling.

"The Thin Man" was one of the ranking box office pictures of the time. In general, judging from audience reaction at the Belle Theatre on Saturday, "After the Thin Man" is an equal position.

Community Sing, a Hit

A special extra screen attraction on the same program is the first public appearance of Wendall Hall, Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, comedy singing team of radio fame. Studio's famous Sunday night feature is now on the screen and the editor of "Community Sing" will be exhibited at the Belle at short intervals. The Belle World News Events opens the program.

The program will be repeated again tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee tomorrow and the management place their personal guarantee on every unit in it. Come tonight and bring the family!

Presbyterial W.M.S. Convenes at Trenton

The twelfth annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church of Canada met in King and Grace Street churches, Trenton, March 11th and 12th. Mrs. Stirling and Madoc auxiliaries.

Greetings were brought by sister societies at the supper meeting and the secretary-treasurer's report of their year's work showing advancement along the line especially in the junior department.

The guest speakers were Miss Marion Coon on furlough from West China, Miss Winnifred Thomas, General Secretary of the Dominion Board. Rev. R. T. Richards, President of Conference. Splendid musical numbers were rendered which all enjoyed.

Miss Elsie Hunt Rep. N., of Bay. Miss Hunt will be appointed to a western hospital in the autumn. The nominated by Conference in June and a further service will be held in the local auxiliary.

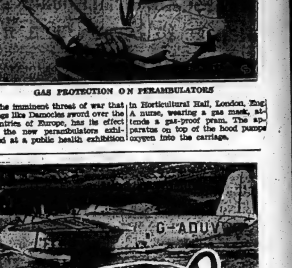
The Presbyterial will convene in Madoc in 1938. Following is the new slate of officers with the President, Mrs. W. G. Haggerty; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Rev. Ferguson, Belleville; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. A. D. Way, Picton; R.R. 8; Madoc, Mrs. C. D. Hamm, Madoc; North Division Secretary, Mrs. Fred Bell, Moscow; South Division Secretary, Mrs. Jessie Dryden, Napanee. Delegates to Bronson, Mrs. Stanley Sproule, Odessa; Mrs. (Rev.) Truscott, Tamworth; Mrs. Stanley Rollins, Madoc; Mrs. (Rev.) W. F. Young, Picton; Mrs. J. Semple, Belleville.

YORK FAVORS ANNEXATION

Toronto, Mar. 15 (CP) — York Township Council has given its support to annexation by Toronto of the whole township, but the town of the township has informed city heads of its willingness to cooperate in any annexation move.

Peterborough, Ont., March 15 (CP)—Invitations to the April 12 dinner to Senator Mrs. Ira C. Fallis will be marked "dress informal."

"Informal means trouble, it should read optional," said Ald. Hamilton at council.



"Option means some would come in tails, some in tux and others in business suits. And you'd have a grand assortment," said Ald. Sloan.

Mayor Macdonald said "every-day suits are to be worn so we'll leave it marked informal."

GAS PROTECTION ON PERAMBULATORS

The imminent threat of war that hangs like Damocles sword over the countries of Europe, has its effect even on the new perambulators exhibited at a public health exhibition in Horticultural Hall, London. BUILD IRISH BASE FOR TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIMES

Preparations for the new transAtlantic air route are being speeded in Ireland with Clonbris, giant flying boat making trial flights from Foynes, Limerick, on the coast of Eire. One of the huge buoys which will mark landing stations of the new air base being built in the mouth of the River Shannon at Foynes, Limerick, is shown here. An expenditure of $10,000,000 is expected to make the route one of the best in the world. At the TOP, the Cambria is pictured coming to rest in the waters of the Shannon.

Leafs Play Listless Hockey Against American Rookies but Manage to Scrap Out a Win

Canadiens Practically Cinch First Place in Canadian Section

DETROIT HANGS ON

Americans Definitely Out While Maroons Can Make First Spot

By A. E. FULFORD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ten games and 60 minutes to be played in the National Hockey League but the issue of the playoffs can be worked out now with very little chance it will be changed before the schedule ends next Sunday.

Montreal Canadiens collected the last double in the American section when they defeated New York Rangers 1-0 in their Saturday night. Detroit Red Wings had already won first place and Rangers' defeat left them without a chance of taking the runner-up spot from Detroit Bruins.

So it is altogether likely Canadiens will meet Red Wings for the NH.L. crown and that Boston and Montreal Maroons will battle for Toronto Maple Leafs will fight it out in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

There are still some doubts about the final lineup in the Canadian section but they are small ones that may disappear tonight. Montreal need one more point to be sure of first place and there is a very good side chance Leafs will overtaxi Maroons, four of whom played both games.

But Leafs didn't look like a team battling for that second place when they met Chicago Black Hawks in Toronto Saturday night. They played listless hockey against Black Hawks' young American rookies and escaped. Leafs won 3-2.

Maroons Determined

Maroons seem more determined in their fight to oust Canadiens from first place. They came from behind last night to score a 5-4 victory over Americans in New York. Americans played with only six subs due to illness of Tommy Anderson, Art Chapman and Al Murray. Detroit rounded out the week-end program by taking a 3-1 decision from Boston last night in Detroit.

Sylvanus Apps' third period goal in the game at Toronto gave it itself less the youngster will finish ahead of the injured Larry Aurie in the point scoring race. The marker tied him with Aurie at 14 points for the leadership and he has three games in which to move out in front.

Ike Klingbeil was the pick of the five Black Hawk rookies Chicago used. The tall defenseman scored a good, smartly timed play and performed effectively on defence. Leafs were decidedly listless and the crowd was rooting for the Hawks halfway through the game.

Besides Apps, Jimmy Fowler and Davidson scored for Toronto and Pep Kelly got one Chicago goal and was with Klingbeil on the defence.

Goal Disputed

The only goal of the Ranger-Canadien game was a disputed one. Johnny Gagnon jabbed at the puck while sprawling on his stomach on the ice and the goal judge ruled it had passed the goal. Referee Mc-Kerr claiming he had held it out with his skate.

Johnny Gallagher and Marty Barry scored two goals for Detroit in the final game against Boston and the Wings protected their lead carefully. The other goal came from Charlie Sands' stick in the second.

A four-goal outburst in the third period was Maroons' answer to the Americans. The New Yorkers were leading when Paul Runge scored, Baldy Northcott evened in two and Dave Trottier got one. Trottier also scored in the second and Jerry Shannon got the first Maroon goal in the first.

Sweeney Schriner, Joe Jerwa, Nels Stewart and Eddie Wiseman were the Americans' scorers.

N.H.L. STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Baldy Northcott, Maroons, who scored the tying and winning goals for the Montreals to beat Americans, 5-4.

Johnny Gagnon, Canadiens, whose goal was the decisive one in French men's 1-0 victory over Rangers.

Jerry Shannon, Wings, who kicked out 43 shots in a brilliant goal-tending display to hold Canadiens to a single goal.

Johnny Gallagher and Marty Barry, Detroit, whose first-period goals brought Red Wings a 2-1 win over Boston.

OXFORD'S OARSMEN APPEAR FAVORITES TO WIN ON MAR. 24

LONDON, March 15.—(CP)—That record string of 14 victories is beginning to look like an unlucky number for the Cambridge light crew.

With both crews now tapering off in training on the Cam, 1934 Oxford's oarsmen appear favorites to win the historic duel March 24.

The fame reasons the dark blue crew are finding many pounds of flesh to shed—more and equaled another course record in training.

They have four old Blues in their boat.

They have a heavier crew than their rivals.

Cambridge supporters, however, are confident that if the lighs can row with the same speed their smaller course they will win.

Cambridge's crew, with only two old Blues in their boat, have broken a record in training too. They covered the three-mile course record for the three-mile lock-to-lock course on the Cam, 14 feet the trip in 14 minutes, 51 seconds. The previous record was 15 minutes, 1 second, set in 1928 Cambridge crew.

Claims Current Helped

Oxford backers claim a current made swift by wet conditions helped the light blues make good time.

But Cambridge supporters in turn point out that he Oxford crew had an advantage of a strong ebb tide, which they equalled a 2-year-old record by 21 seconds for the stretch between the winning post at Mortlake and Chiswick steps. They covered the distance in six minutes, 31 seconds.

The next day they smashed a 40-year-old mark when they rowed from Chiswick steps to Putney Bridge in 11 minutes, nine seconds 45 seconds faster than the previous record.

The 1933 record of three minutes 46 seconds for the distance between Barnes Bridge and Chiswick steps was the best to fall in the Light Blues. They accomplished the feat on the log for three minutes, 34 seconds.

The experience of the veterans—M. G. O. Ashby, D. M. De R. Winser, J. D. Sturrock and C. C. Nicholson—in the Oxford crew in good stead.

The 1935 crew, H. W. Mason are the only veterans in the Cambridge crew with the 1934 record lighter crew than its rival.

Oxford has a shell described as "light" for the 1937 race. The Cambridge boat is described as of "normal" weight.

REDMEN READY FOR SUTTONEERS

Crucial Game in O. H. A. Intermediate "B" Opens Here Tonight

Decks have been cleared and guns mounted for action at the Belleville Arena tonight, when the Belleville Redmen meet the Sutton Hockey Aces in the first game of the second round in the intermediate "B" series in the O.H.A., goals on the round to determine the winner, who will advance to the intermediate "B" championship, if not the finals.

Both clubs reported at full strength for the scrimmage, the Sutton team being expected to arrive in Belleville this afternoon and accompanied by a large delegation of supporters, as they have already made application for a number of reserve seat reservations. A bumper crowd is expected to take in tonight's game, that is, judging from the number of ticket sales reported.

Bert Hedges who officiated when the Redmen rubbed out the Whitby Redwings last week, was signed as the referee for the series. Although efforts to procure the regular complement of six Belleville players proved futile, the probable lineups for tonight's game are as follows:

Belleville		Sutton
Smith	Goal	Wells
Burkholder	Defence	Beasley
Shore		Murphy
Millroy	Centre	W. Jackson
Carpenter	Wing	Tompkins
Burchell		C. Jackson
Schmidt	Subs	St. Louis
McKenzie		Barriage
Reddy		Whitney
Culverwell		Burley
McCrae		Morgan
		McGuire

Referee—Bert Hedges, Toronto.

SAM RICHARDSON LIKELY TO MAKE A REAL SPRINTER

Wins 60 Yard Sprint at Hamilton Meet in 6.3 Seconds

Hamilton, Ont., March 15.—(CP)—Sam Richardson, unpredictable every minute he wears a track suit, appeared likely today to become the East's outstanding sprinter of 1937 and a formidable opponent for the Far west's trio of aces, Howie McPhee, Lou Orr and Bruce Humber.

A year ago Sammy couldn't conceive himself he would ever run anywhere on the track, so he stuck to broad jumping. Now the Toronto holds the United States indoor broad jump title and he's more interested in sprinting.

After pushing Eulace Peacock of Temple University to a new world record for 40 seconds flat for 60 yards in Toronto Friday night, Richardson romped off with the same event here Saturday night from a strong field in 6.3. He scored decisively over Jack Brown, Toronto star and Fred Hoffman of Michigan Normal College.

Like other negro performers following in the footsteps of Jesse Owens, Richardson seemed likely to compete in both white and colored meets put on outdoor meets this season. Vivian Stanshall, Canadian Olympic Athletes are Peacock and Ben Johnson of Columbia University, but both have been defeated by Richardson.

In the feature of the 91st Highlanders Association meet Saturday night, Canadian champion Fred Culhane won the mile in 4:19.3 with Bill Daly of Detroit, second and Joe McGee, Detroit, third. The Kanawa veteran stepped briskly through a fast field to win by a seven feet from Daly.

Only other record was the 25-year-old mark established by Bobby Kerr for 40 yards, Brown reeled off the distance in 4.6 to defeat Hoffman in the first sprint. Later Richardson won the 300-yard dash in 34.3 with George Arnold of New York second.

K-I-Y LEAGUE

The Orioles were crowned champions of the juvenile section of the K-I-Y League over the week-end when they defeated the Albert-College "juvs" to the tune of 3 to 1 in a total distance in 4-6 to defeat Hoffman in the three-game series played consistent hockey to capture the title, the first of the series played, while the best the Albert-college team could do was to stand on their own feet, the Orioles, however, never be able to do that until they cut their teeth on a puck and knock the pipe out of the old man's mouth, which by the way, is before they can say "Goo-goo."

Major Freddy McLaughlin, whose anti-Canadianism, call it pro-Americanism if you will, prompted the birth of the idea to form the personnel of his National Hockey League team, the Chicago Black Hawks, with American born players only, has evoked a storm of criticism, mostly con, from hockey experts all over the shinny circuit....Why Black Hawk mentor put his pet theory into practice last Thursday night, the Kazoo Brains in an exhibition tilt icing six Hawk sledgehogs of the Eagle strain, against the bruising Bruin veterans.

Belleville Not Represented At C. O. B. L. Meeting Held In This City on Saturday

R.C.A.F. May Enter a Team at Next Meeting in April

MOTIONS PASSED

League Will Approve Teams Playing Against Pro. Squads

Belleville was not officially represented at the semi-annual meeting of the Central Ontario Baseball League meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. in this city on Saturday, all four clubs in have been amicably composed the roster of the C.O.B.L. in 1936: Kingston, Oshawa, league champions, Peterborough and Napanee were officially represented, while the Royal Canadian Air Force sent a delegate, but did not make official application for a franchise in the league, but requested time to consider their locations and decide in the matter.

"I regret very much to find Belleville, a charter club in the league, unrepresented at this meeting and might say the old Central League will not seem the same without former members of Belleville entry," stated President Max Swanston as he intimated, that there was still ample time for the Ontario City to renew its holdings in the league before it opens. Little league business was transacted, the meeting being mainly called paramountly for the purpose of accepting notices of motion and any amendments to the constitution of the O.B.A.A. and also to appoint the official baseball delegates to represent the league at the annual provincial baseball conclave to be held in Oshawa on April 3rd.

Motion is Accepted

Howard Byron moved that the C.O.B.L. nominate G. E. Gibbard as present 1st Vice President of the O.B.A.A., to the office of President for election and also to the office of O.B.A. Vice President, understand it is customary to have the President of the C.O.B.L. take up office for a two year period and if President Joe Walsh, of Toronto, desires his extended term then we should nominate Mr. Gibbard as 1st Vice President. Upon acclamation, but if Mr. Walsh does not stand for re-election, we of the C.O.B.L. should nominate Mr. Gibbard for the presidency. It understand it is customary to have the President of the C.O.B.L. take up office for a two year period and if President Joe Walsh, of Toronto, desires his extended term then we should nominate Mr. Gibbard as 1st Vice President. Upon acclamation, but if Mr. Walsh does not stand for re-election, we of the C.O.B.L. should nominate Mr. Gibbard for the presidency. Seconded by Ernie Wright and the motion was carried. The meeting also voted to approve of the O.B.A.A. Mgr. R. A. Elliott, past President of the O.B.A.A. and the C.O.B.L. be made a "life member" of the C.O.B.L. in view of his appreciation of his sterling efforts towards the sponsoring of baseball in Eastern Ontario and the C.O.B.L. also nominated Max Swanston for re-election to the executive of the O.B.A.A.

Still under discussion pending notices of motion the Kingston delegates brought up a very important question which although it caused considerable controversy, was finally approved of and will be introduced by the C.O.B.L. delegates at the O.B.A.A. meeting. It is our firm belief that amateur baseball clubs should be permitted to compete against, not intermingles mind you, but play against each other as clubs, with strictly professional teams. If the Kingston delegates at the Peterboro session could field their entire amateur club to play against the Senior A's David or even the New York Giants, we see by permitting these games the financial difficulties of our amateur ball clubs would be solved. The A.A.U. has a high standard of baseball played by the amateurs and they would be averse of the opportunities of playing with and against the more proficient professionals, which is after all our chief aim.

In Favor of Change

I feel that the C.O.B.L. should introduce a motion to the O.B.A.A.

SIMPSON JUNIORS TAKE BELLEVILLE

Score is 40-20 And on Round 65-36 in Cage Contest

Jack Smith's Simpson Avenue Juniors attracted a further step in their quest for senior Dominion championship when they defeated the Simpson A.C. of Belleville, 40 to 20, Saturday night in the Belleville Collegiate to win the first round of the O.A.B.B.A. playoffs, 65-36, in the two-game series.

Fast, aggressive ball-handling and passing gave them a decided edge over the Belleville squad. Smith's players on both teams featured the scoring with Bert Pountney and Edwards leading the Belleville scoring four points before he was checked closely four personal, Simpson led at half time 15 to 8.

Simpson: Toronto — Devitt (2), Pearson (2), Bert Pountain (13), Anderson (4), Acton (2), Edwards (6), McNair, Bill Pountain, Bunky (1), Park (3).

Belleville — Kitos, Langlon (4), McCabe (6), Dickens (2), Mair (4), Collins (1), Tobe (2), Clare, Schneider, Wentzell.

Referee—Alfie Pearson, Toronto.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

How good is the Sutton intermediate club, is the question we repeatedly had hurled at us over the week end. There is only one obvious answer—"any team to put out the highly heralded and much-talked of Gravenhurst sextette must be some potatoes in the world of hockey". But don't forget that Eddie Thomas' Redmen put out a team, that had been previously placed as champions of Lake Ontario, when they rubbed the Whitby Redwings out of the picture. On paper it looks like a great contest that is in store for the Belleville Arena tonight. The Sutton squad moved into the city bearing the reputation of being a hard-hitting and bruising team, who will receive a torrid reception at the hands of Fred Bentley, Murphy and Barry Ingram, the battling body-checkers of the Redmen on the defence. Manager Thomas is looking for great things from the scoring bid line of "Honey" Millkins and the Jackson kids. "This trio of youngsters it sought to add a short shifty touch to the attack from beneath any heavy body-checking line they encounter," predicted Manager Thomas. A final table of scores tonight will be announced and with the sudden falling off in temperature over the week end, the ice will be in good shape tonight.

o—o—o

Bill Shape, the sturdy and fast-skating defenceman with Sutton, had a try out with the Pond Millionaires early this season. Freed lately, reconsidered as just about best in the Allan Cup play-downs. If Shape was good enough for a try-out with the Pond Millionaires we should see a really good player in action tonight. The series is two games, goals to count on the round. The Redmen hope to gain enough advantage tonight to assure them of a lead large enough to carry them through to a round victory in the return game at Sutton on Thursday night. The Redmen are recognized as a better road team than a home squad, which is much in their favor.

o—o—o

Duke Smith's Belleville Yacht Club Sailors open the Hastings Valley League season at Tweed on night. The Sailors finished their regular County League schedule in first place and subsequently moved into the play-off finals by virtue of defeating Stirling. The league finals is the best three in five. At Tweed tonight they had contemplated in bringing the County League finals to Belleville, but later decided it would be better to play home final games at Madoc, where there would be assured of a crowd of seven or possibly eight hundred patrons, many more than they could accommodate in Tweed. Madoc can enjoy a reputable record in the County League and should come down in front. Incidentally and to the delight of hockey fans the day, the Port Colborne Sailors open the second round Allan Cup eliminations with Kingston Frontenacs at the Mine team bouts of a strong squad of seasoned performers.

o—o—o

For the first time since its inception, 19 years ago, Tweed has a charter member of the loop, was represented at the annual meeting of the O.B.B.A. held at the "T" on Saturday. Oshawa, Peterborough, Kingston and Madoc were all duly represented and much interest was shown in the Tweed place. The R.C.A.F. was represented but their delegate refused to consent or state their future intentions as yet, being satisfied to sit back and take in the proceedings purely as onlookers. "When the league holds its next meeting the Air Force will again be represented and at that time we will be able to state our intentions pertaining to the sponsoring of a senior baseball team," stated one of the delegates, but he intimated the strength of their available players was an unknown quality at this early stage.

o—o—o

When no reply was made to the motion of BELLEVILLE—when President Swanston asked for delegates to accept representation—the Percy merely added—"I understand baseball is not so hot here. The C.O.B.L. might be in the same position as Belleville entry, it is really too bad." Although President Swanston did not make further comment, it was the general opinion he was more than disappointed with the trend of baseball that has culminated in the present situation. To sit down and look back upon the splendid accomplishments achieved by Belleville baseball clubs in the C.O.B.L. and in the O.B.A.A. in past years and then come face to face with the realisation, that baseball is a dead issue in this city and district, really is hard to believe, but there is some reason or cause for the present apathy and those interested in the welfare of baseball gleaned pastime in this district should soon be able to remedy the matter. Along with numerous efforts to commence the reconstruction of baseball in Belleville are under way, Sports-minded citizens who are sportsmen of 'a' first school and also interested in the welfare of our city and its growing youth, will quietly endeavor to remedy the situation and once again bring the name of Belleville to its right and proper station in the amateur baseball world.

o—o—o

One very important notice of motion, to be sponsored and presented by the C.O.B.L. will be on the agenda of the O.B.A.A. at its annual meeting. The Kingston delegation introduced a motion, under the heading of amendments, whereby baseball clubs in the O.B.A.A. would be permitted to play against professional baseball clubs without endangering their amateur standing. In plain words the Central League moguls want the privilege of engaging big league teams and the professional type of intermediate baseball clubs in direct competition. Should this motion be carried, established players, our Canadian amateurs would not only become more proficient, but the loss in annually paying public would have the opportunity to see these latter baseball clubs in action on our own diamonds and in a nominal fee.

o—o—o

Fred Townsend, secretary pro tem of the Lake Ontario Baseball Association, informs us there will be an open and general meeting of all citizens, players and others interested in softball and baseball in the city and district on Wednesday night at the "T". Red Wings will be the only Belleville team formed in Belleville this season, but there is a possibility of baseball clubs taking off like the proverbial duck to water. Softball moguls desire is to interest unbiased citizens into taking office in the new baseball and softball association, that will include leagues for all ages.

o—o—o

George Gay, manager of the Arena, is endeavoring to arrange for a post-season play-off series for the Ice Bowl trophy, which Hastings hockey trophies. The respective winners of leagues through the Bay of Quinte district will be invited. We expect to learn more on the subject during tonight's intermediate "B" semi-final game, however.

17 SENIOR AND 18 JUNIOR TEAMS STILL IN RACE

Title Seekers Will Fall Thick And Fast From Now on

DOMINIONS LEAD

Junior Battlers Have Not Decided as Yet on Ontario Winner

By The Canadian Press

Dominion amateur hockey title seekers will fall thick and fast from now until the end of the trial. Most of the sectional scrambling is over and the interprovincial playdowns, that lead to the Allan and Memorial Cups have begun.

Favorites already dropped by the way include McGill University and Regina Aces among the seniors and Winnipeg Falcon-Rangers and Toronto Cubmix among the juniors. Today's fields consisted of 17 senior and 18 junior teams and about half the total could be regarded as serious contenders.

Moncton and Sackville will clash for the Maritime senior throne this week and Quebec Aces are expected to represent their provincial association by pushing aside the intermediate champions. Hull Volants are favored to come out of the Ottawa district.

The Ontario senior amateur picture will be clearer after tonight's games, when Toronto Dominions meet Goodyears and Sudbury Tigers oppose Port Colborne. Dominions hold a 2-1 lead in games in their best of five series and by winning tonight would become eligible to play the winner, between Port Colborne and Tigers, whose total-goal round starts at Sudbury.

Victors have been ranged in all five western senior divisions. North Battleford completed the list Saturday, beating Regina Aces 6-3 and taking Saskatchewan laurels. Winnipeg Packers play at Port William tonight, starting the quest of the Manitoba and Thunder Bay titlists for the Allan Cup. North Battleford will be stacked against the experienced team in an Edmonton-Nelson round.

Junior Clearing Decks

Ontario and Manitoba are the only Provinces in which the junior battle is not clearly defined. But three of eight Ontario teams will be out, when half the week is past and Portage la Prairies and Winnipeg Memorial dispute a series tie tonight for the right to face St. Boniface in Manitoba finals.

Ottawa Rideaus and Port Arthur are marking time. Thunder and Copper Cliff will conclude their total-goal Northern Ontario playoff tonight—Copper Cliff has a two-goal edge. Stratford has a 2-1 lead in games over St. Michael's College of Toronto and can win out at home tomorrow night. Perth and Renfrew tonight start their fight for a crack at Ottawa Rideaus. They eliminated Ottawa Fishers and Berry's Bay respectively Saturday.

Charlottetown and Amherst will begin a total-goal series tonight to decide which will come out of the Maritimes in junior play. It was Amherst last year. The winner will be pitted against Montreal Royals, who were awarded the Quebec title yesterday after drubbing Quebec Aces 10-2.

For the fifth successive year Saskatoon Wesley has won the Saskatchewan junior championships not to many followers this looks like a memorial cup season.

Edmonton Rangers and Medicine Hat have won a game each in their best of five finals. The deciding game is slated for tonight. British Columbia champions are Trail Smoke Eaters.

CARRYING PLACE SCORE VICTORY IN FAST CONTEST

10 Minutes Overtime Before Victorious Over Hinde And Dauch

CAGERS WIN

Girls And Boys Defeat Port Hope in Exhibition Tilts

Trenton, March 15.— (Special)—Willie Laiour's — Carrying Place hardies took the first game of the Trenton and district hockey league finals 5-4 after seventy minutes of fast rough hockey with a well-balanced Hinde and Dauch aggregation. The contest was tied at full time 3 all and it looked as though Carrying Place was going to suffer their first defeat of the league playdowns. One minute after the overtime canto started Anderson took a neat pass from Johnson to score a hot one past Steenburg in the paperman net and give his team a one point edge. Johnson and Davis organized a brilliant rush halfway through the extra session, that resulted in a clean score and put their team out of danger.

A bowling crowd witnessed the set-to and saw the Carrying Place organization add another victory to their respective number of wins. In the opening period the play was rough and flashy and Referee C. O'Malley banished Bowen and Lott of Hinde and Dauch and Lemoire of Carrying Place for tripping and roughing, respectively. Davis put the Carrying Placers on the score sheet on one of his famous lone efforts. As the middle stanza opened Johnson marshalled a counter by Steenburg taking a nice pass from Davis, putting Carrying Place two goals ahead. Davis and Johnson were rendered from the ice for tripping and during their stay in the penalty box Claude Sultan garnered Hinde and Dauch's first tally.

Lott Leads Rush

Inspired by the register Lott ushered in Dauchmen's second score of the match passed Bowen to the Carrying Place twine, tying the fixture. Each side drew a roughing penalty, when York and Lott were sent to the cop and play slackened momentarily. Returning to the ice York picked up a loose puck and barged through the Papermen's defence to fool Steenburg completely on a sizzling mid-section shot. Lott gave a repetition performance later and knotted the count once again. The closing minutes of the regular playing time was an exhibition of cautious hockey with neither team making any chances. The tide turned in the additional session as Carrying Place exercise Sunday tactics to collect their two goals that clinched the tilt. The Carrying Place line of Davis, Johnson and Anderson were their outstanding threat around the ice and obtained four of the winner's goal.

Lott, classy centreman on Hinde and Dauch's first line was a standout individually and featured with his lone efforts, counting twice alone. Bowen and O'Malley bothered the Papermen's defence and were a stumbling block for opposition. The York and Lemoire duo team up well on the winners rearguard and the former registered several dangerous rushes. Teams were—Carrying Place: Goal, Steenburg; defence, Lemoire, York; centre, Davis; wings, Johnson, Anderson; alternates, Vanderoort, Drake. Hinde and Dauch; goal, A. Steenburg; defence Bowen, C. Sultan; centre, Lott; wings, Carman Hulban, Derry; alternates Finnegan, W. O'Malley, Wells. Hind. Referee—C. O'Malley.

Trenton Basketballers Better

Performing masterly in the same manner that won them the Bay of Quinte title, Trenton Basketballers defeated Port Hope in both the girls' and boys' exhibition tilts here last night. The home-town girls won by a 15-12 score and the boys by 31-25.

Bigelow Port Hope Badminton Talk

Home town Badminton Club members got off a long slump and trounced O.B.D. 15-3 on their home courts on Friday night. The homesters were in real shape and deserved the one-sided win on the night's play. The locals suffered defeat on the two former starts once to Port Hope on home soil and in Cobourg on the other occasion. Members of the club are shaping up to meet Brighton at Brighton and according to rumors the club-of-towners are a mighty fine machine, and possess one of the fastest fours in the circuit.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Winter Haven, Fla., March 15 (AP)—Word is going around the Grapefruit League that Cincinnati Reds will figure in a big deal before the season opens with either Ernie Lombardi or Virgil Davis moving on..... Colonel Ruppert's motto, "I'll see you in the movies, Lou," has baseball men down here in a tizzy..... It rapidly breaks some of the Cardinals' hearts that the management of the somewhat ritzy Osceola Hotel at Daytona Beach makes the gals shuck their evening gowns in the dining room. "We're in society now, sure enough," said Pepper Martin..... Judge Landis is around the campus as lively as ever and looking like he has entirely recovered from the torture and strain of the 1920 Fuller decision.

Old Larry Lajoie, once a great second sacker and hitter, lives at Worth, hard by the camp of the Phillies here..... Larry must be pushing 60 or better, but if he would report he probably could make the Phils..... They're having trouble keeping Boo Feller from cutting loose at New Orleans..... He is so keen to get going he wants to put the old sing on every pitch..... Connie Mack broadcasts from Mexico City that if Bill Werber is a trouble maker, he'd like to have a whole team of 'em. Mrs. Joe McCarthy can tell whether the Yanks have won or lost by the way he rings the door bell, when he comes home.

If Oehrig gets his $40,000, the Yankees will have the most expensive infield in baseball history..... with Lou getting $40,000; Lazzeri, $16,000; Crosetti $13,000 and Rolfe, $11,000, the Club will be putting out $60,000 for the inner works alone..... Joe McCarthy still thinks he has the right, Dimaggio, but he hope you not to sell yours Vince Short.

Whether he is rich or poor, highly placed or humble, everyone seeks news.

The desire to know what is happening in the world is strong and instinctive; the need to satisfy this natural curiosity urgent and persistent.

Before newspapers were available, few enjoyed the privilege of regular dependable news of events, ideas or achievements . . . men, manners or markets . . . beyond the restricted boundaries of their own communities. The settlers journeyed weary miles to maintain the necessary contacts with affairs and friends. Roads were few and primitive. Travel was difficult. Mails were infrequent and means of communication slow. In winter the "snowshoe express" took weeks to travel from Montreal to Niagara. Foreign news was scarce.

Today all the news from far and near is brought to every Canadian, quickly and completely, by his daily newspaper. No matter what his interests or occupation may be, it serves his needs. Day after day it provides up-to-date information which influences his opinions, plans and purchases. There is no phase of community or national life it does not touch; the aspirations and accomplishments of the world at work, and at play, are recorded in picture and story on its pages.

Unfailing performance of this service to the individual has made the daily newspaper indispensable to more than two million Canadian families and a constructive force in every community.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

MARKET COMMENT

The market last week was an irregular affair with weakness developing in base sections of the board, although good buying was noted on the setback. A technical correction has been overdue and it should tend to clear the air of a good deal of uncertainty.

The world seems in the midst of an inflationary boom, largely based on demand for war materials. When one considers that the chief spenders have not as yet paid their bills for the last war, it is quite evident that inflation is the only way out once the tremendous cost of current armament programmes is piled on top of existing debt. One of the means rising prices for stocks but the market has reached a stage where the old fashioned "healthy reaction" may be looked for from time to time.

Despite the fact that Noranda last year earned $4.13 a share, the highest in its history, the stock is not generally believed, in view of the higher price of copper, that earnings this year will equal that. It is agreed that figure, with every likelihood that higher dividend disbursements will be made.

Hudson Patricia Seepage

Operations at Hudson Patricia Gold Mines in Patricia district have been suspended pending arrangements for refinancing. Diamonds resulting from underground has been discontinued. Moderate gold values

ABUSH

The so-called Ripley plan for the reorganization of the Abitibi Power & Paper Co., in liquidation, has met with so much opposition that the Street fears that it is to be revised. It is sort of a complicated document and did not favor the shareholders.

Tuck Hughes

The common shares of the Tuck Hughes Gold Mines are now held to the extent of 78 per cent. in Canada.

SOUTHERN GOLDS

In view of the appreciable tonnage of high grade ore already opened up on the three veins now being developed underground on Southern Golds, Ltd., and as a result of the possibilities of the other numerous vein systems, it has been decided possible to immediately enlarge the scope of operations.

It is understood that under the direction of engineers a series of drill holes will be put out from the present workings while the present drifts will be extended and crosscuts put out to pick up the downward extensions of some of the surface outcrops. In this connection it is stated that the company has purchased its own diamond drill and necessary machinery and equipment will be acquired without delay.

Livestock

Montreal, March 15 (CP)—Hog prices rose 5 cents in early dealings on Montreal Livestock Market today while other sections held steady.

Receipts: Cattle, 1083; calves, 79; sheep and lambs, 94; hogs, 1883.

Good butcher steers made $4.50 to $5 with mediums from $3.50 to $4.25 and common kinds from $2.75 to $3.25. Canners and Cutters sold at $3 while heifers ranged from $3.50 to $5.

Good veal calves made $8 with mediums around $7 and plain to fair kinds from $6 to $6.50. Common lambs sold down to $5 with common shorn down to $4 and grassers around $3.

Best lambs brought from $6.50 to $6 with sheep from $4 to $3.50.

Bacon hogs, fed and watered, sold at $8.75 with the balance of offerings held for higher prices.

Toronto, March 15 (CP)—Cattle trade opened actively on the Toronto Livestock Market today but slowed down by noon as truck receipts overwhelmed demand. Prices on butchers were 25 cents higher with calves grades steady. Calves were firm and a stronger tone was noted on the lamb and sheep trade. Sheep and lambs traded at previous levels. There was no hog quotation from Thursday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 2,850; calves 410; hogs 1,600; sheep and lamb 430.

Choice weighty steers sold to fetch $7.50 with medium and handyweights $10. Bulk of the calf supply went between $7 and $8.50.

Previous week's top stock bacon hogs was $8.10 to $8.25.

Good one and two butcher lambs, including three loads from the west, brought $8.50. Others were steady at 25 to $3.50 cwt. with some yearlings up to $8.

Dr. Amour Caston, Hastings County will be represented by a large number of delegates from Belleville, Trenton and other points. Secretary-treasurer of the association is W. J. Price, also of this city, will leave today in company with Mrs. Price, Burleigh, member of the Provincial Executive of the association, for the annual banquet being held tomorrow evening the Hon. Duncan Marshall, who is to be guest speaker, will make some announcement regarding the new proposed marketing scheme which will embrace a number of the cheese producing districts. Risks and distribution of cheese in the province.

Mrs. Clara Kendall To Start Jail Term

Woodstock, Ont., March 15.—(CP)—Mrs. Clara Kendall of Norwich still insists she won't pay a fine of $100 or go to prison but that she will be in Woodstock Wednesday to start serving a jail term.

Mrs. Kendall was convicted recently of assaulting County Constable Sharpe of Norwich, with a hammer, in an effort to prevent from her for an advertisement placed in the Norwich weekly newspaper by a neighbor who had found Mrs. Kendall's kept pup.

"I have no intention of paying the money—wouldn't pay a copper of it."

Displaying the pup that has been the innocent cause of all the Mrs. Kendall explained that the animal's name originally was Bride but after she had crowned the remainder on the cop's behalf, she thought the name "Coronation" more fitting.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, March 15—(CP)—Trading was reduced to slow motion on the industrial section of the Toronto exchange today while prices continued their irregular drift downward in spots but the majority of the interlisted leaders were down narrowly at the closing quotations. The metals and the liquors and oils showed a preponderance of recessions in small fractions.

The Toronto Exchange were steady to strong. Massey Harris firmed a small fraction and the issue was slightly higher in Canadian Car and Foundry common and Federal Grain preferred but holding shares were slow and steady and utilities displayed irregularity in the price movements.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, March 15.—(CP)—The activity in the mining section of Toronto Exchange was attended by narrow price gains, particularly in the gold stocks, but most of those were reduced in the slow afternoon session. Dominion Chrome showed early advance of 15 cents and Pickle Crow 10 cents but 25 cents and dressedweights 50 cents at the Kent County market. Prices reported steady quotations.

Liverweights: Brantford $8.10; Guelph $7.90; London $7.90; Hamilton $8.25; Fetherbos $8.15; Stratford; $7.90; Chatham $7.75.

Dressedweights: Barrie $10.50; Guelph $10.50; Kitchener $10.50; London $10.85; Hall $11.50; Peterboro $10.75; Chatham $10.35; Stratford $10.50.

WALL STREET

New York, March 15 (AP)—Except for a few specialties stocks tilted downward in the final hour.

Dealings were on the quiet side, moving in narrow channels during the early declines of fractions to two or more points were shaded in some instances.

Traders apparently were none too happy over the week-end and fully versies which it was realized, may not be substantially unlike settlements are effected soon.

Among Canadian stocks International Nickel was off a small fraction, while McIntyre and Distillers gave up minor fractions. Canadian Walker and Dome held even. Dominion Government Bonds were irregular.

Canadian dollars were unaltered at 100.06 1-4 discount.

Conspicuous on the off-side the greater part of the session were B. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic and Vanadium. Inland Steel dropped about 7 at the week.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, March 15.—Montreal is receiving more butter from out-of-town than last week, Receipts last week again showed a substantial increase over a year ago. Cheese receipts remain negligible, with no change noted. Receipts of eggs Saturday at the Board of Trade are as follows:

	Eggs	Butter	Cheese
	Cases	Packages	Boxes
Last week	7,409	5,106	461
Week ago	9,045	5,989	399
Year ago	6,943	5,154	726

Prices on Saturday were generally steady with Friday's levels. There were no sales on the Canadian Commodity Exchange. Butter was quoted at the close at 25¾c to 25½c for Quebec buyers' inspection. On the open market No. 1 butter for carlots or l.c.l. lots was again quoted at 26c to 26½c. Small lots in the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 28½c to 27c for solids and 27c to 27½c for prints. Graded shipments of eggs in carlots or l.c.l. lots were mainly quoted 23c for A-large, 20c for A-medium and 19c for A-pullet. Offerings at country levels were posted at the Commodity Exchange.

SIR P. SASSOON

The Air Ministry was doing its utmost to expedite aircraft production, but Sir Philip admitted it had been disappointed.

Causes of Delay

"Delays are due to various causes" he proceeded. "First difficulties of skilled labor. There has been a distinct shortage of skilled draughtsmen. Again, we have had little post-war experience in large scale production. Thirdly, the large increase in demand coincided with a remarkable advance in aeronautical technique and design.

"The Air Ministry took the risk—a calculable risk—of placing production orders for new types before their prototypes had been built and tested. Some of the teething troubles usually associated with prototype manifested themselves in the first production machines. But the new method is proving comparatively quicker than the old. The risk undertaken will be thoroughly justified and 1,000 times worth while" in the careful review being made of requirements of raw materials, of which there would be a risk of shortage in time of war.

Treble Air Strength.

Sir Philip continued that the present air defence expansion scheme would practically trebling it as well as rearming it with modern equipment. "Our programme is entirely satisfactory. The program for the half year envisaged the entry of some 1,200 short service officers and 725 airmen for training as pilots. Actual figures not only have been reached," the undersecretary declared, "but have been substantially exceeded. We are now continuing to recruit in anticipation of future requirements. During the coming financial year we intend to train 1,175 pilots."

Recruiting Satisfactory.

"The position in regard to airmen is equally satisfactory. During 1936 we planned to recruit over 11,000 airmen to bring the total to requirements and boy entrants. Present figures indicate our figures will be fully realized.

"Great as have been the demands upon the Air Ministry in men and fully satisfied. The fact pays handsome tribute to the zeal and patriotism and the spirit of adventure of our youngger generation. At the same time there is no relaxation of effort. We rely on the continued support of the British people. We believe we shall receive it."

Royal Air Reserve Created.

Sassoon announced the creation of the new reserve to be called the Royal Air Force Volunteer Reserve. This will be a direct entry reserve for pilots, open principally straight from civil life. It is hoped that during the coming year it will be able to recruit over 800 men.

As an additional training school will be set up around London and other great cities. Town centres are being established for instruction in various subjects and to serve as social centres. For training will begin at twelve airdrome centres April 1.

Building Labor Scarce.

In connection with the works program, building labor during recent months had become scarce, he admitted.

"I must confess that this shrade is causing us some embarrassment," Sir Philip said. "Increasing the labor force to the utmost extent possible entail delays in our building programs."

The striking power of new types of aircraft far surpass that of the corresponding types of two years ago, the undersecretary proceeded. The new guns had been introduced for the use of aircraft. One was a comparatively light machine gun. The other was a 'Browning gun which had the merits of simplicity and gave a great deal of improved performance for aerial use. Arrangements had been made for its manufacture in the United Kingdom.

CANCER COUNCIL SETS OUT FACTS

One Man in 10 And One Woman in 7 Will Be Attacked

(By Howard Blakiston)

(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, March 15.—Startling Facts for which no man may rely upon, if he faces cancer, were set forth today by Dr. Cornelius P. Rhoads, director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

The council answered a series of layman's questions presented by the United States Senate, for a bill now written. The physicians said the situation was bad in some respects, hopeful in others.

Greatest Health Problem

Cancer was declared the "greatest health problem today" as to deaths rate nearly three times that of tuberculosis. In this era, this "far too little money" it was asserted, is available in this country for research on cancer.

Dr. Francis Carter Wood of Columbia University told the senate committee that about one man out of every 10 and one woman out of every seven.

One of the questions asked whether in view of the fact cancer recognized early is curable, should not all persons be examined immediately on discovering how to recognize early cancer.

Examine Thousands

The council answered attempts for many years to have such tests have failed.

Another question asked if it is possible to detect in early curable stages any types of internal cancer. Are the methods known? It was asked, too costly for more people? Is there enough trained personnel? was the reply, it is possible to detect in early stages cancer of other stomach and the intestines. In other cases, for no apparent reason, cancer does not give any symptoms. In the case of kidney cancer, however, the urine is frequently significant."

As to cost, the council answered because there are established institutions which will give free diagnosis to indigent, cancer examination is not beyond the means of the average person.

SUDDEN DEATH

beside the Darling building in North Toronto Sunday. It was believed he fell from a fifth-storey window.

Doctor Believed Despondent

Dr. Holbourn was found dead by a constable. The body of Dr. C. M. Burroughs was found in a bathroom while in a garage under the doctor's office. The car motor was running. Police said they learned Dr. Burroughs had been despondent.

Peter Zanko was found dead in a swimming pool owned by Louis Tarshis, 21, of Toronto. Police said he drowned a short time after a group of bathers left the pool. Zanko was alone, the body being discovered an hour later.

The body of an honeymoon trip with his bride, Glen Curtis, 24, of Windsor, was found in a river at Cambridge Saturday when the car in which he was a passenger overturned on icy pavement and plunged into a ditch. His bride suffered only minor injuries. Curtis was married on Friday to Miss Ewell of Windsor.

An inquest condition in Kitchener Hospital was Samuel Crowther, 70, who died from a fractured skull and other injuries received when he was struck by a motor car while walking on the highway near Kitchener-Preston highway.

R. Copeland, Brantford bank clerk found the body and a note addressed to his father.

Efforts to trace the phone call proved fruitless and the body of his taxi showed he had travelled 20 miles that could not be accounted for.

At a post mortem examination conducted by Dr. Ward Woolner, chief coroner of Waterloo County; Constable Ed. Widdup discovered Dr. C. L. Fisher it was found the left side of the head, and the left side of the chest and lodged under the floor of the right armpit after piercing the heart and both lungs.

The physicians estimated death had occurred about 24 hours before, indicating the shooting took place during the night. Police said they were unable to determine if the shell had been discharged by a revolver or a rifle.

Hewitt, who would have been 30 years old in May, was a former city league hockey player. He had conducted his taxi business for seven years and owned five cars. He is survived by his widow and two daughters, Janet, aged three, and Helen, 18 months old.

FREIGHTERS OPEN SEASON WITH CARS

Cargoes Not Insured Pending Proclamation of Season

Port Erie, Ont., March 15—(CP)—Two freighters have cleared from Detroit with automobiles and are expected to dock tomorrow or Wednesday at Buffalo harbor. Cargoes were uninsured pending official proclamation by the Lakes Survey Bureau of Weather that navigation season is open.

The continued cold weather of the past few days has not been sufficiently severe to freeze the east end of Lake Erie. The major part of the harbor is free of ice (save with the exception of a small stretch near Conneaut, Ohio. Niagara district is practically clear with exception of a few scattered fields of shore ice.

United States authorities at Buffalo partner plan to light the lightship tomorrow or Wednesday on receip of definite advice as to extent and arrival of the two boats from Detroit.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Number Tens

By Alice C. Meyer-Wing

Mattie Reynolds took stock of the square dance. She had resented the inferred comparison at the Ernest household. Thoughtlessly, she picked up the big shoe beside her with small results. Why turned there over. Why! there were holes in the soles. Joe's best son would go start naked to make those detestable payments. Well, let him.

Let's see. Where was she? Yes, her dime-bank money for shoes; the ten dollars for the satin dress.

She would walk to the village.

She paused before the mirror in the store window. The fresh air had lent additional color to her cheeks, a blue blue to her eyes—why, three years couldn't be an eternity. She was still young, and loved—and there in the store—bedded dress. She felt a fit of civic pride as she looked at the store things in the window. Like a shop in the city. Men's articles on one side. Women's on the other.

With her hand on the doorknob, faced the man's window display. Well, what of it? Of course there would be men's shoes in the men's window. Except for one pair, all her own had holes in the soles. This many county left its mark, and she and Joe—

But Joe hadn't even one pair without holes in the soles. These men's shoes in the window—the price screamed at her—were exactly four-seventy. Warm, thick-soled, dressy looking.

She was suffocating . . . too warm in the store. She would walk to the post office. Those shoes—she would look at the other window as she passed through the door.

She walked past the post office, turned and passed it again. On down to the blacksmith shop. Back again! Rosebud Men's shoes! Rosebuds. But she must hurry. She'd planned hot biscuits for Joe's supper. Then smiled, thinking of her husband's boyish liking for hot biscuits and his pride of her skill in making them. And how proud he was of Ernest's success! And she, at this moment, remember his pride in her economies! He must never know—and she'd tell about these farm payments. It was for her he'd so so determined . . . . a home for his girl . . . comforting.

She put her hand to her face, wet with tears.

A thousand loving little characteristics that were Joe came trooping through her mind. Good, gentle, big-footed Joe. Tears were streaming now. Thinking of Joe—and weeping. She liked men with big feet. It took a good foundation to build a home. A real builder. Her husband. She loved him.

She would press the old blue silk, the fresh blue in the sash. Joe had always told her how sweet she had always told her how sweet she was—but she must hurry.

Boldly, she re-entered the store—and when she left it she carried a single package under her arm: Men's shoes. Number tens.

Tomato Disease Precaution Urged

The menace of "mosaic" and "streak" in tomato plants is now well known, yet many growers of handsome tomatoes lose half their crop through virus diseases, writes William Newton, Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, at Saskatchikan, B.C. A survey was conducted by the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology at Saskatchikan to ascertain what virus diseases were damaging tomatoes grown under glass. Four distinct tomato diseases of the virus class were discovered, and few houses were found where, in all plants were free. How then, can virus diseases be controlled?

Virus diseases may be introduced through the seed. A grower is well advised to select perfect fruit from perfect plants as a source of seed, and by addition he should make sure that no other plants in the same house are infected with mosaic or other virus diseases. Fortunately virus diseases are seldom transmitted through the seed especially when it is not from the current season's crop. Our investigations have suggested that one or two year old seed is less likely to transmit virus than seed that is replanted as soon as it is produced. Ordinarily smoking tobacco often contained a living virus disease capable of inducing a mottle and of lowering the vitality of tomato plants. A smoker is well advised to wash his hands before handling tomato plants.

Potatoes harbor various diseases that are capable of damaging tomato plants. Do not plant potatoes adjacent to a glasshouse devoted to tomato production. It happens that practically all varieties of potatoes are "carriers" or a virus disease of tomatoes.

The common green aphids and other insects carry tomato virus diseases into glasshouses. All insect control measures aside in controlling virus diseases. Glasshouse operators find it best to keep immediate surroundings of glass houses entirely free from vegetation. Vegetation harbours "insect carriers." Many growers grave the immediate surroundings and keep vegetation from growing through the gravel with sodium chlorate,

Virus diseases are highly infectious. Glasshouse operators should wash their hands frequently with plenty of soap, and handle their plants as little as possible. Also remove the source of infection by removing at once any plant that bears a mottle or other suspicious symptoms.

CANADA TO SPEAK FOR NEW WORLD

Denton Massey, M. P. Says Canada's Voice to be Heard

WINDSOR, Ont., March 13.—(CP)—When Canada learns how to use her voice she will be in a position to speak for the new world in old world councils and assume undreamed-of importance in the move to establish world peace, Denton Massey, Conservative member of Parliament for Toronto Greenwood, said in an address to the League of Nations Society here last night.

But Canada must first set her own house in order before she has a right to a voice in world affairs, Mr. Massey added.

Text of Mr. Massey's address was, "the future of the League is in your hands". In spite of the League's failures and short-comings, it remains the world's finest weapon to enforce peace, he contended.

Canada, as a nation in fact as well as in theory, being an integral part of the British Commonwealth of Nations, could play an important part in rebuilding the League of Nations superstructure, he said. And since Canada is a democracy, the individual can do his share in lending support to this form of national policy.

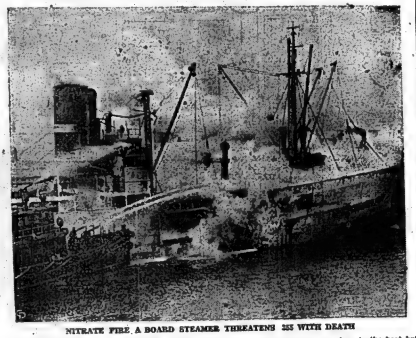
TARZAN'S QUEST



(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

"CREEPING" ALASKAN GLACIER THREATENS ROADHOUSE AND ROAD

Three top aerial views of the Black River district in Alaska were made about ten months apart. At the TOP is a scene made last summer, showing, far in the background near the base of snow-capped mountains, the huge Black Rapids glacier which has been unmoved for centuries. This mountain of ice, which is hundreds of feet high, 30 miles long and two miles wide, has made rapid progress since then, as shown in the LOWER view from an aeroplane made a few days ago. It is thought the ice pack was torn from its base by an earthquake. It has travelled more than five miles in the past few weeks. If its forward progress does not stop soon, it will wipe out a roadhouse in its path and the famous Richardson highway, the only vehicle outlet to the sea.

NITRATE FIRE A BOARD STEAMER THREATENS 335 WITH DEATH

Fire department official and medical authorities are keeping a close watch on 335 men who fought a blaze aboard the Danish freighter, Laila, in Boston Harbor. The Danish ship, shown ABOVE as a fire tug fought the flames, was carrying nitrate, and it is feared the men might contract lung poisoning from the fumes. An estimated $500,000 damage was done to the boat both six months ago. During the six-hour fight to control the flames more than 50 firemen suffered burns, cuts and exposure.

This is a photo of Franco Maria, who was first mate aboard the Italian Spanish arms ship Mar Cantabrico, until the crew executed the captain in mid-ocean after that he took charge of the ship. The story of the lone survivor of the ship that carried a cargo of arms from Brooklyn, N.Y., for the Spanish loyalists was told at Archon, France, when the man, Pablo Juan Boo, arrived on the French craft that picked him up 50 miles at sea. Boo jumped overboard from the Mar Cantabrico when it was trapped by a rebel vessel.

BELLEVILLE REFUSED RIGHT TO NAME MANAGER

Right to Reduce Number Of City Aldermen Denied Utilities Bylaw Allowed

W. C. Mikel, K. C., Opposes Managership and Council Reduction Before Private Bills Committee At Queen's Park Today

MAY REDUCE COUNCIL BY OTHER MEANS

Hon. D. Croll Indicates Department of Municipal Affairs Does Not Like City Managers in Ontario—Croll Says Chatham Has Manager in Name Only

Toronto, March 16—(CP)—City manager form of government for Ontario cities was frowned on by the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature today when it struck from an Act respecting the City of Belleville, power for the City Council to appoint such an official.

Belleville was also refused the right to reduce the number of aldermen from 12 to 6 through application to the Legislature. Hon. David Croll, Minister of Municipal Affairs, said there was a way Belleville could accomplish this through an application to the Municipal Board.

Belleville electors voted several both propositions.

The city manager plan had a majority of 30 but the move to reduce the number of aldermen had ten times this.

A clause in the Bill giving Belleville the right to hold its elections the first Monday in December, carried unanimously as did one confirming a by-law for the erection of a Public Utilities Commission.

One Vote For Managership

Sam Lawrence, (C.C.F., Hamilton East) cast the only vote in committee in favor of the city manager clause. He said he was opposed to the city manager form of government but was going to vote to uphold the will of the people.

W. C. Mikel, K.C. former Mayor of Belleville, opposed the clauses respecting the city manager and the reduced council.

"Their outcome would be to put power in the hands of a small group. A city manager would have nothing to do but draw his salary.

"I am absolutely opposed to this city manager fantasy," said Arthur Ellis, (Con. Ottawa South). "It gives a city official tremendous power. I move it be struck out."

Harold N. Carr, (Lib., Northumberland), in whose name the bill stood, said he was agreeable to withdrawing the city manager clause seeing it had such a small majority of the electors with it.

Mr. Croll said Chatham was the only Ontario municipality having a city manager and "they are just using the term." He indicated the Department of Municipal Affairs didn't like city managers.

'Strike' Vote' on Relief Urged on Municipalities

Speed Limit Denounced By Sponsor of Measure To Lift 35 M. P. H. Top

Government Allows Bill to go to Committee But Does Not Endorse Principle of Measure—Windsor member says Present Law Makes Hypocrite Out of Every Member of Legislature

Toronto, March 16 (CP)—Proposed abolition of the speed limit in Ontario and the substitution of a law making driving drivers on the Highways Traffic Act was sent to the Municipal Committee of the Ontario Legislature last night. Traffic officers, Motor League officials and others will be called before the committee before a recommendation is made to the House.

James Clark (Lib. Windsor-Sandwich), sponsoring the bill, said the law made hypocrites out of every member of the House. Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, opposed the bill as did George H. Challies, Conservative House leader. Premier Hepburn was neutral and suggested a study of experience.

The House did an unusual thing in giving second reading to a bill without being on record as endorsing its principle.

"A law to be respected must be respectable," said Mr. Clark. "Many of the motorists who are daily breaking the law, said Mr. Clark and indirectly a contempt for all law was bred.

Admits Breaking Law

"I've broken the law for years and I'm not ashamed of it," he said. "And I'm ashamed of it as being a hypocrite and not having done so. I'm not alone in the ranks of this law."

Mr. Clark said his usual highway speed was 55 miles an hour. Under the present law he was cautioned to such high speeds and left with "bitterness in their hearts" after conviction for breaking the Ontario limit of 35 miles an hour.

Prevention of accidents would be heightened by more care in the issuance of licenses, contended Mr. Clark. The old, the maimed, the half-blind, the deaf, the stupid, the careless and the hysterical now have them.

Mr. Clark said his bill would make it much easier to get convictions for reckless driving and would empower the magistrates to suspend licenses permanently for reckless driving.

Highway Minister Opposed

"I doubt if we have reached the stage where we should abolish the speed limit," said Hon. Mr. Henry. "The speed limit is an easy way for the law to get the man who drives recklessly. "Don't look at me—I'm not supporting the measure," Mr. Henry added, told Mr. Henry.

Mr. McQuesten said he received the proposal without much enthusiasm.

"I don't know that a change in the law will affect the reckless driving problem," said the Minister. "The traffic officers say very much they won't be able to get convictions if the speed limit is abolished. They say they can't depend on the magistrates to trust their (the officers') judgments as to recklessness. The speed limit today is practically used for convicting of persons who drive recklessly. I can't see my way clear to accept the bill."

"I realize we're all lawbreakers but I was in what might have been a serious accident ten days ago and I was only going nine miles an hour," said Mr. Hepburn, suggesting the bill go to the Legal Bills Committee with the understanding the House had not endorsed the principle.

Mr. Henry suggested the Municipal Committee where more members would get a chance to speak their mind. Mr. Hepburn questioned.

POLICE REACH BLANK WALL IN MURDER MYSTERY

Investigation Switches to Outside Points in Kitchener Slaying

HUNT FOR WOMAN

Handkerchief Found in Car Eliminated as Possible Clue

Kitchener, Ont., Mar. 16 (CP)—Police said they were confronted by a blank wall today as they searched for shreds of evidence that might lead to solution of Kitchener's murder mystery. Provincial police under Inspector A. Boyd of the Criminal Investigation Department switched their investigation to outside municipalities for an answer to their puzzle.

Shot through the heart early Sunday, Lawrence Berritt will be buried tomorrow. A private funeral service for the 35-year-old taxicab proprietor will be held at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Louisa Gabel. This will be followed by a Catholic service at Zion Evangelical Church. Burial will be in Woodland Cemetery.

Forensic among possible clues to the murder was identification of a woman and man seen standing near Berritt's car Saturday night as near-Queenston. Just three hours before his body was found in a ditch. Erie Deitz, Waterloo, said he and his son believed Berritt sitting behind the wheel while the mystery pair stood on the highway near Berritt's car.

Handkerchief Identified.

A handkerchief found in the car with the name "Anne" embroidered on its border lost interest to police last night. A friend of Berritt's family proved ownership when she produced another with the same identification mark. She said she had left it in the car several days ago.

Police checked the scene of the murder but failed to find anyone

SCOUT LEADER DIES OF INJURIES

Received Fractured Skull Last Night on Varsity Rink

Toronto, March 16 (CP)—Eric Chadwick, 17 year old Scout leader died today of injuries suffered last night at Varsity outdoor skating rink. Coroner J. J. F. Williams and police are investigating statements that Chadwick fell and struck his head. Eric was knocked unconscious when a light wooden pole fell on him.

Parents of the young Scout leader, who had been active in the Anglican ministry, said they do not believe the boy struck his head and gist who called for him to go skating and then returned with him after his injury.

Deitz said he is a fractured skull and he died while being prepared at the hospital for an X-ray. "The boy said that all he knew was that some Eric kept saying, 'I'll be all right, I'll get home'," the parents said today. "We put him to bed and I put his head in the ice on the cut on the left side of his head where there was a mark about the size of a cent piece," said his mother, Mrs. Edmund Chadwick.

Seeks to Rouse Woman from Trance

LOS ANGELES, March 16.—A psychiatrist promised today for a second attempt, to rouse Mrs. Helen Wills Moody from the trance into which she lapsed four days ago after declaring "I can will myself to die."

Dr. Samuel Marcus, psychiatrist, said he was partially successful in arousing the convicted husband killer's wife when he bathed her eyelids and applying pressure between her ears. She twitched slightly and moaned.

"Don't Harry, don't."

It was the only reaction since she went into her strange coma a few hours after a jury convicted her of second degree murder for shooting Thornwell Jacobs, New Years eve at a Santa Monica Beach Club.

Black Shirt Worn by Mosley, Defies Gov't to Arrest Him

Fascist Black Shirt as Emblem Illegal in Britain

MOSLEY WANTS TEST

London, March 16 (AP)— Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, challenged the government today to arrest him for wearing the black shirt of a political emblem.

"I have worn this black shirt myself for six weeks to enable this issue to be decided," he said at a meeting of his followers last night. "Nothing has been done to me and we are beginning to assume that this black shirt I am wearing is not in their view illegal."

The Fascist black shirt as well as the Communist red shirt were recently were made illegal by act of parliament.

Fascists said the police commissioner had been invited to make Mosley's arrest a test case but he had taken no action.

"All the time the mass pressure prohibiting the wearing of political uniforms was enacted, Fascist headquarters instructed their followers to attend meetings wearing their black shirts under their suits. Sir Oswald unanimously refused to test the legality of this practice."

TWO CANADIANS GET CASH PRIZES IN IRISH SWEEP

Each Will Receive $31,115 As a Residual Award in Draw

MANY GET $500

Canadian Ticket First Taken From Drum For $500 Prize

Dublin, Mar. 16 (CP)—Two Canadians today drew cash prizes of $31,115 each as the Irish Hospitals Sweepstake draw continued.

The residual prizes went to "Mrs. Sloan" of Belfast, with ticket NM-77276, and to "Fortunate", with ticket ES19623.

Only the nome-de-plume of the Canadian winners were given out. Yesterday, the first day of the draw, 65 Canadians drew horses, worth at least $500 each whether they start or not, and a lot more if they finish first, second or third in Friday's Grand National Steeplechase at Liverpool.

Besides the two residual prizes drawn by Canadians, seven went to those from Ireland, and one to Europe.

Sixteen hundred consolation prizes of $500 each were also drawn, and a Canadian, "Wingworth" with ticket QN72503, was the first out of the big drum.

No Fatal Accidents by Cars In City in Over Five Years

Police Records Show Entire Lack of Fatalities

FIGURES ELSEWHERE

Newspaper controversy and alterations have waxed and waned because of accidents in Toronto, Hamilton, Ont., and Galt, Ont. police authorities relative to the absence of fatalities of pedestrians on the streets of those respective cities for the past five years. Police authorities promptly boasted of the fact that there had not been a fatal accident to a pedestrian on the streets of city throughout the year 1936, and passed Lethbridge, through its daily newspaper, scoffed at this record—"why we haven't had a fatality through the medium of motor car on our streets since 1933," which is the very fine and a creditable record, but Belleville, Ont. police authorities can tell better Lethbridge's record—there are records for the first out of the big drum.

Conference of Mayors Hears West Alderman Attack Relief Problem

Alderman Honeyman Wants Referendum Before Sept. 1st, 1937

RESOLUTION REFERRED

Mayor Says Winnipeg Has Reached Limit of Taxation

Ottawa, March 16 (CP)—A "strike vote" of Canadian municipalities against continuance of present relief conditions in the event adequate unemployment relief was proposed before the conference of Mayors here today by Aldermen E. D. Honeyman of Winnipeg.

A referendum could be held in all municipalities before Sept. 1, 1937, as to whether the municipalities consider relief a financial responsibility of the Dominion government. If the answer were in the affirmative then the municipalities should ask whether they were prepared to "discontinue participation in unemployment relief after Sept. 1, 1937."

Resolutions had been passed at the last two conferences, said Alderman Honeyman, but they had apparently been overlooked. The resolution, he said, was so democratic in way of bringing the question to a head.

'Speaking For People'

"We think we speak for the people, approximately 5,000,000 of them," he said. "The authorities in Ottawa occasionally say they want to know the will of the people. Let us get together and let the Dominion and let the chips fall where they will."

There was no one paradise for same honey resolution year after year, then going home feeling that they had done their duty," he told the delegates.

His resolution, along with others, was referred to the Resolutions Committee.

Tax Burden

Municipalities, said Alderman Honeyman had no control over the amount of unemployment so they should not be saddled with its effects. The Dominion might as well have disclaimed its responsibility for the war and allowed the war debt to fall on the municipalities.

The simple fact was that unemployment could not be successfully attacked by the municipalities.

"Municipalities are the stage where they could no longer carry the burden. Winnipeg has reached its "absolute limit" of taxation on real estate, he said, and the limit of cashmenthood was inescapable.

"We can't go on. We have to cut out our services 10 per cent. Our employees have been cut 16 2-per cent and no other civic employees have been."

Freighter Founders Near Bermuda

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 16—(CP) Cable—Norman Dominion line freighter Listo sank suddenly while being towed to St. George's today, after running aground last night.

The vessel sank when eight miles from St. George's harbor on the northeastern Bermuda reefs. Crew reports from tugs towing the 1,056-ton freighter said she was two-thirds submerged and was expected to be a total loss.

The crew of 22 men reached St. George's early today.

SWEEPS TICKET HELD IN SIDNEY

Mr. T. H. Irwin Stands to Win a Minimum of $3,000

The magic wand of Dame Fortune, which waves annually over a number of Canadians holding tickets in the Grand National Steeplechase run over the famous Aintree course in England, passed in its journey over Canada to wave good luck over the Township of Sidney.

Mr. Thomas H. Irwin of the well-known family of that name, is definitely stated, under the nome-de-plume of "Tommy" holds Ticket No. 31,284. This was drawn on a horse by the name of "Field Master" with odds running in betting. Mr. Irwin stands to win $3,000 as minimum award.

Interviewed today over the long distance telephone, Mrs. Irwin refused to make any statement for the press. Mr. Irwin was not available at the time being away on business.

The Irwin family, for the second time this year have been smiled upon by Thicke goddess of fortune. Previously, Donald M. Irwin an employee of the Citizens Dairy, Belleville, won $1,000 draw with another lucky ticket. A brother of Miss Irwin, who sold her the ticket also presented with a new car at the same time.

RELIEF RECIPIENT GETS FRAUD

Toronto, Mar. 16 (CP)—Charles Hall, 38, father of four children, was sentenced to three months in jail today when found guilty of obtaining $24 in relief by fraud. His wife, Elizabeth, told the court her husband had been working and how much she received. She admitted receiving relief.

Town Orders Noises Stilled As War Veteran Lies Ill

Traffic at Leamington Detoured, Bell is Silent

GARAGE HALTS

Leamington, Ont., Mar. 16 (CP)—Elgie Robinson, 58-year-old war veteran of this Essex County town was reported today in improved condition from a serious heart attack after a motorcycle school ordered all undue noise in the vicinity of the man's home stilled.

Traffic has been detoured since Saturday on a section of the street where the stricken man lives while a nearby public school bell no longer tolls its morning and noon calls.

Robinson suffered a heart attack Saturday at last week's relief rally as the week progressed and a request by his physician for quiet as possible in the vicinity was answered by Reeve Dan Kennedy and Miss Jessie Dow, principal of the school, who ordered the "quiet" rule.

Thorp Knight, garage proprietor, has ceased operations and all traffic through the long nights with the sick man. Others have volunteered for night duty.

Native of Mersea Township, Robinson was left crippled after he enlisted and went to the front. Two years later he suffered a third wound which left him with wounds about his head. He lay critically ill for six months but has recovered except for one pieces of shrapnel had been removed.

Since his return here after the war, Robinson has been employed as a carpenter. He is married and has two sons, one in high school and the other attending public school.

ELECTS TRIAL BEFORE JUDGE.

Kitchener, Ont., March 16 (CP)—James Webb, 32, Guelph, charged with criminal negligence in connection with the death of Mrs. Ida Webb, elected trial by judge without jury in County Judge's Criminal Court today and reserved his plea until trial, a week from today.

Webb is said by jail officials to have been responsible for saving through a row bar in the jail corridor.

At the assizes some weeks ago Webb was found guilty of rape and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

2 Dutch Admirals Arrive in London

London, March 16 (AP)—Two retired Admirals of the Dutch navy came to London today to confer with the British Admiralty.

Vice Admiral M. H. Van Dissel is the Netherlands' chief international Board of nine to administer both the land and sea patrol of the Spanish coast. Rear Admiral J. S. C. Olivier will direct the British fleet.

Because the British, French, Italian and Belgian navies are policing the Spanish coasts all must be under the same orders. Van Dissel's job really will be to shift the 550 agents of the non-intervention committee from the control port to another, depending upon the volume of traffic in Spain-bound shipping. He will have a Spanish person from headquarters at Dover.

THREE KILLED AS AIRLINER CRASHES

European Manager of Imperial Airways One of Victims

Croydon, Mar. 16 (AP)—Officials at Croydon Airport announced receipt of word that three of the 15 persons aboard a liner carrying C. F. W. Dod, European manager of the lines, and two pilots were killed when the liner Cologne, Germany, killing all three.

The ship left Croydon for Cologne at 9:30 p.m. (4:30 p.m. E.S.T.) yesterday.

Two other two aboard were the pilot, Capt. G. B. Holmes, who formerly flew in Canada, and the wireless operator, C. E. Langman.

Holmes, Mar. 16 (CP)—Captain G. B. Holmes, reported killed today in the crash of an Imperial Airways liner near Cologne, Germany, was well known here as a flier and aviation official. For a number of years he was inspector of civil aviation for Ontario in the Department of National Defence.

CLEANING PLANT MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

Odorless Cleaners plant and business office has been moved from 316 Front Street to 332, larger quarters being necessary on account of increasing business. The new business place has been fitted up in very attractive manner with modernistic fittings and decorations in the business office while the work rooms and machinery have been placed well back from the street. Four years ago this business was established by Mr. Morris Whitsell, popular young business man of Belleville and under his aggressive management the business has expanded materially.

SNOW REMOVAL COSTS CITY $25 SINCE JAN. 1

Total cost of snow removal in this city since January 1st, 1937, has been recorded at just $25.00 it was revealed by a check of department of public works records at city hall this morning. This figure is believed lowest on record for any corresponding period of previous years.

Though further snow fall was received in the city late last night and early this morning, continuing in flurries through the greater part of the day, no extra men were called by the department for its removal today.

TUESDAY MARKET

Two hardy vendors braved the wind and cold at the blustery day to appear on the city market with a small display of meats, poultry and dairy produce this morning. Business was dull however, and before noon the venturesome ones folded up their produce tents and silently stole away."

Potatoes remained stable in price being offered at $1.80 for ninety pound bag. Eggs were firm at 23 cents with a small supply of butter being offered at two pounds for fifty five cents. A minor quantity of winter meats were sold at quarter week end prices. No fresh maple syrup was seen although it was predicted that Saturday's market would see the first syrup of the 1937 crop.

HIGHWAY WORKERS DEMAND COMFORT WHILE TRAVELLING

With sit-down strikes becoming common occurrences all over the country it remained for the City of Belleville to stage the first "stop-down" strike in this district in history.

Yesterday afternoon twenty men, heavily clothed and laden with luggage gathered at the Employment Office on Pinnacle Street and avail transportation to jobs on the Pembroke-Eganville highway. When a truck drew up to the sidewalk. The men piled aboard, but there was only room for nineteen. "Squeeze in there and make room" yelled a voice. The men looked at the moment, conferred among themselves, then stepped off the truck to the sidewalk, and refused to move until more suitable travelling accomodation was provided.

Arguments ensued, but the men were adamant, a few minutes later the truck moved away without its human cargo. Still the men remained in their stationary positions. Then around the corner came a large capacity bus of the same truck driver. The men smiled, climbed aboard and drove happily away. The strike was over.

270 ENTRIES FOR QUINTE SEED FAIR

A total of 270 entries have been received by officials of the Quinte District Seed Fair, busy at city hall today preparing for the three-day annual convention and exhibition which opens tomorrow.

Entries of seed, including cereals, grasses, clover, beans potatoes, have been received from exhibitors from Bloomfield Hastings Prince Edward, Lennox-Addington, Northumberland, Durham, Ontario, Peterborough and Victoria Counties the region embraced in the Bay of Quinte district. Only the County of Haulburton will not be represented this year.

Judging of the entries will commence at 10.00 a.m., Thursday while during the afternoon of Thursday, special addresses will be given by H. Mason, Field Husbandry Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; J. W. MacKay, Dominion Seed Branch, Ottawa; John McLeod, Crop Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. At the annual seed growers' banquet on Thursday evening the speaker will be Dr. G. P. McIntosh, Prof. of Field Husbandry, Guelph.

A section of all seeds and potatoes will feature the last day session on Friday.

CHIMNEY FIRE CAUSES LITTLE DAMAGE

Blazing chimney resulting from overheated stovepipes caused concern to residents of a home at 33 St. Paul Street yesterday afternoon. The fire department answered a alarm and succeeded in reducing the blaze before any material damage was done.

GOOD DEMAND FOR SEED GRAIN

"The seed situation is "easing" in this district as farmers get their supplies cleaned, ready for seeding and sale, according to the current weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. In Northumberland County the open winter has been reported very hard on fall wheat and on early seeding. Clover and alfalfa yields were small and weak last year that farmers are not overplanting this on securing good stands this year, according to the report. A great demand for seed grain exists in that county.

BILL AMENDING ACT GETS THIRD READING

Bill No. 75, amending the Hydro Act to allow incorporation of a public utility commission within the local hydro commission was given the third reading in the Ontario Legislature this morning, according to word received today by Mr. C. H. Millen, M.P.P. and secretary.

The city's private bill covering several matters voted upon at the recent elections of the municipality such as reduction in city council membership, the advisability of naming a city manager and the creation of a public utilities commission will come before the private bills committee of the House on Tuesday morning.

MONTROSE FARMS PASS GOV'T. TEST

For the seventh consecutive year, Montrose Farms have passed with honors, the rigid Provincial Government inspection being recently completed by Dr. G. P. Read. This is a remarkable record as this farm has never had a tubercular animal in the herd. The fully accredited herd consisting of between 100 and 200 pure-bred Ayrshires and Ayrshires is the largest dairy herd in Eastern Ontario. The buildings are modern, the sanitary barns and public inspection is invited at all times.

PAINTERS ELECT I. STEPHENSON PRES. OF GROUP

At an organization meeting of the Home Improvement Plan for painters and decorators of the city, held in the office of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Isaac Stephenson was elected chairman of the representative on the general committee for the group. Mr. Jack Scott was named secretary.

Among those present were Alf. Lasley, Wm. Carter, A. Hall, Percy Madden, Chas. Cochrane.

The full purpose of the Home Improvement Plan and benefits which may be derived from its actual working together with full details of the scheme were given by H. J. O. Henry, prior to the election of the chairman.

Frankford Wants No Parties Seeking Relief

At the regular meeting of the Frankford Village Council held on Monday, a bylaw was passed prohibiting any person or persons moving into the village after December 31st. here for the purpose of obtaining relief.

At present there are only four families on relief, while the municipal work log has taken up most of the unemployed of the village, it was reported.

Laurie Lewis is Elected Pres. Retail Merchants Association for Ontario

At the annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Ontario held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, yesterday, Alderman Laurie Lewis of this city was elected the office of 1st Vice President during the past year was the unanimous choice of the meeting for presidency of the Association for the coming year.

The meeting, declared by the new president today to be one of the most successful yet held, went on record as endorsing fully the Minimum Wage Law Act with a further recommendation that full compliment be tendered the Hon. David Croll for his work in this respect.

Two other resolutions, respecting Early Closing Bylaw for shops and the amended Hawker's and Peddlers by-law which requires full support will also be presented the Hon. Mr. Croll for enforcement.

Kinsmen Plan for 1937 Kid Kar Derby

The spontaneous response of the general public to the Kid Kar Derby sports innovation introduced by the club last summer in their drive for funds has prompted members of the Belleville Kinsmens Club to again sponsor the event during the coming summer. There is a bigger and better Derby which will exceed every standard the successful event of last year are already under way, and no stone will be left unturned to make it one of the outstanding sports events of this district Kinsman Cec Collins told members of the club at the annual weekly dinner meeting held in the New Queens Hotel last night.

Another successful event sponsored by the club was the Movie Show according to a report given to members by Jack Darling. Community staging with Jack Darling-ton telling the vocal baton, a modified version of the Dol Dorsey by Phil Huddleston and a vocal solo Jack Darlington "Did You Ever Mother Come From Ireland" rounded out a fine musical program.

A letter of thanks was the introduction to members of Bert Walker, a former member of the Cobourg Kinsmens Club. Kinsman Norman Carbutt was in charge of the meeting with Walter Down acting as Sergeant at Arms.

FARNHAM NAMED G. M. DEALER HERE

Will Handle Pontiac And McLaughlin-Buick Cars and GMC Trucks

Appointment of C. B. "Claude" Farnham as Pontiac, McLaughlin-Buick and GMC dealer here has been announced by General Motors of Canada, Limited. Mr. Farnham, who is widely-known in automotive circles in this district, was educated at the Belleville High School, in 1918, he joined the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. He remained there for five years and, in 1923, became associated with General Motors. Between 1923 and 1927, he was engaged in the retail automobile business in Rochester and was with the former McLaughlin-Buick branch in Belleville between 1927 and 1928. From 1928 to 1933, Mr. Farnham was identified with the McLaughlin-Buick, Pontiac Garage under the proprietorship of Mr. Ferguson. In 1933 he joined Van Loven, General Motors dealer in Kingston.

Acclaimed as "the finest car in the low-priced field," the Pontiac for 1937 is on view at Mr. Farnham's showrooms, located at 207-209 Dundas street, Belleville. At the same time, the entirely new styling of the 1937 McLaughlin-Buick is thrasting many visitors. Every member of the new Mc-Laughlin-Buick, Pontiac Garage under the proprietorship of Mr. Farnham will extend a Hay Van Loven, General Motors dealer in Kingston.

Heirs Sought

Two former residents of this city, their legal heirs or relatives, are being sought by a large fraternal insurance company. In a letter received by city clerk A. Mac-fred Holmes this week, the following description accompanied the request for aid in locating these former residents or heirs:

Maria Isabella Ross—In July 1903. Mrs. McCarthy, a widow, conducted a boarding house on Bridge street. In December, 1909, she married, changing her name to Moore. She was born in Belleville in March, 1844. When she became 80 she received congratulations from the city and was presented with a purse. It is quite possible she has relatives or heirs in Belleville.

Mrs. Flora Linn—Born August, 6, 1843, in Ontario and resided on Brass street, Belleville, in 1904. At the time she was a widow. In 1919, Mrs. Flora Linn, of Toronto, Ont., where she resided until August, 1922, is also sought. Death occurred between 80-90 years and that interment was made in Belleville. It is believed that legal heirs are still in this district.

All information regarding these former residents may be given to the City Clerk.

Obituary

ALEXANDER MORRICE

After an illness of about three months' duration, Alexander Morrice passed away at the family residence at Charlotte Street on Monday morning, March 15th.

The late Mr. Morrice was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in the year 1859, coming to Canada in 1884. late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Massey Morrice, came to this country when a child with his parents. For a short time he resided at Rochester, N.Y., but moved to Madoc where he lived for fifteen years. For the last forty-five he has been a resident of Belleville, having held a position in Ontario Hospital for the Deaf for thirty years, retiring from active duty two years ago.

Alexander Morrice was a man of fine character and was held in the highest esteem by many friends. At the Ontario Hospital for the Deaf where he served for so many years he was mostly highly thought of by the members of the staff and by the many pupils who received instruction from him. In religious life he was a member of John Street United Church, being an elder for many years. In politics he was a staunch Liberal and fraternally he was a member of Madoc Lodge I.O.O.F., in which he held various offices over a period of years including that of Past Grand Master. Friends and acquaintances in Belleville and Madoc and former pupils at the O.S.D. will deeply regret to learn of his death.

Surviving to mourn his passing are his wife and one son, by his first marriage was Miss Agnes M. Maclean, whom he married in the year 1904; two sisters, Miss Jessie Morrice and Miss Jean Morrice, both of Vancouver, B.C.; two nephews, Mr. H. L. Morrice, Rochester, N.Y., and Mr. E. L. Morrice, Buffalo, N.Y.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE MRS. H.A L. MOON (Prince Edward)

The funeral of Mrs. Ila L. Moon, wife of Mr. Clifford J. Mapa of Bethel, Prince Edward County, took place from the family residence Monday afternoon to Bethel United Church where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. L. S. Wight of Belleville. Wm. Gordon Wright also the service at the graveside in White Chapel Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. C. Allison, G. Vinson, G. Gordine, E. Fraser, F. Roblin and Ed. Roblin.

VARIETY CONCERT GREATLY ENJOYED

A Diversified Program by Concert Group Extremely Well Presented

At the Collegiate Auditorium last evening a Variety Concert was presented in a very interesting manner, the diversified program being greatly enjoyed by a large audience. The splendidly presented items included choruses by Collegiate Glee Club and Boys' Choir numbers by Christ Church Male Choir and Boy Singers, selections by the Collegiate Band, dances by the Misses Jean Morrice and the festival play "Enter the Hero" by the Young Theopians.

The Collegiate Band under the baton of Mr. Ross Hunter opened the evening's musical treat. This group of youthful musicians is an outstanding part of the musical organizations of the city and their playing last evening was in keeping with their reputation of excellent performance. The Girls' chorus and the Glee club also under the direction of Mr. Hunter were heard in charming numbers, which were very warmly applauded by the audience. Christ Church Male Choir, under the direction of Mr. George N. Mayhee completed the musical part of the program. Their offerings were splendidly chosen and their performance perfected after careful training. The choir is perfectly balanced, has fine tone and the quality of the boys' voices was especially sweet and appealing. Musical life is a hobby of the men. In their choral number, the beauty of the boys' voices was compelling.

Numbers by pupils of Miss Mary Forster lent variety and colour to the program as those talented young musicians displayed skilled exhibitions of their art. The favorite of course, was little Barbara Forster, a charming little figure as she sang and danced "One, Two, Three."

"Enter the Hero" by the Young Theopians completed the enjoyable program. The cast was made up of fifth in the regional drama festival at Kingston when it was given and finished style by Miss Thomas Forster, Miss Mary Vice Thomas, Miss Eva Jeffery, assisted by Mr. Douglas Frink, under the direction of Miss Mary Forster.

The program last evening follows:—

1.—B.V.U.I. Band—(a) Roll Off (b) Honor Medal; (c) Cosmopolitan March.

2.—Rhythm Tappers —Inez Forster, Ruth Hagerman, Gloria Moore—Pupils of Miss Mary Forster.

3.—Girls' Chorus—(a) Lullaby (b) A Little Old Garden.

4.—Song and Dance—Barbara Dimen—Pupil of Miss Forster.

5.—Strut Tap—Lois Wilkin, Margaret Smith, Georgia Cook—Pupils of Miss Forster.

6.—Christ Church Male Choir—(a) Hymn to the Night—Geo. N. Mayhee; (b) Dutch Easter Carol—Traditional; (c) Ave Maria—"O Praise the name of the Lord"—Tschaikowsky.

7.—B.V.O.I. Band —(a)—Symphonic Serenade; (b)—Our Band.

8.—Marshall Walls—Ruth Hagerman—Pupil of Miss Forster.

9.—Boys' Choir—Solo Numbers. Directed by Miss N. P. Merry. Accompanist Miss Jean Morrice.

10.—Glee Club—(a) "Night-fall"; (b) "Summer Winds Blow"; (c) "Sweet Nell of Old Drury"—Band—(a) Seventh Regiment March; (b) Olympian Overture.

12.—Christ Church Male Choir—(a)—Boys sing Choir Invitation—Handel: (b) Boys and Men — Double Choir Anthem "Judge me, O God", Mendelssohn.

MANY MARKERS ARE COLLECTED

Mr. George Ketcheson Shows Unique Exhibit of Car Plates

Ranging in practically all colors of the rainbow, a treasured collection of Ontario motor car license plates, from the year 1910 to the present year, was displayed at the police station today by George Ketcheson, Thurlow, and former issuer of motor vehicle license plates in this city. Mr. Ketcheson has included in his assemblage every issue of a provincial government motor licence, two of which are extremely unlikely, the old type rubber license plate that was purchased and renewed each calendar year, prior to 1911, when the first metallic license plate was first displayed, and that first metal marker of the year 1911; the only enamel plate ever manufactured by the government. This licence plate issued in 1911 was of light blue color with white lettering.

Mr. Ketcheson has a total of 26 different Ontario automobile licence plates in his possession, including the only red or scarlet plate ever issued, it being on his automobile and bearing the letter "Z" letters, which was renewed each succeeding year then came the blue enamel plate of 1911, followed by the more modern tin plate with the wire edge in 1913-16. In 1917 however, the government issued a fancy motor license plate, while in 1921 the first raised numbers were used, previously the numerals being painted on a flat surface. In 1930 the introduction of the alphabet lettering was first used in Ontario. The current year of 1937 has been the numerals interspersed with an alphabet letter previous to which the lettering had been discretly in front of the numerals, however.

A white background for the license plates of Ontario have predominated, while being used in this capacity exactly 14 times, followed by a yellow background on ten occasions; black was used five time since 1910, while black letters were seen on 19 of the 26 licence plates. Green, orange, red and while letterings were also used with light blue once.

"I think the licence plate of 1921, a small, narrow marker with a black background and orange figures, is the best looking in my collection," stated Mr. Ketcheson to The Ontario Intelligencer today.

QUEEN MARIE IMPROVED

Bucharest, Rumania, Mar. 16 (AP)—Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, mother ill of a serious lung wrhage at Zotroseni Castle, was reported slightly improved today.

Queen Marie remained in bed much with the sick room to which she has been confined since she was stricken by influenza while at the opera last Thursday night.

She had not been feeling well and was on his way to a nearby neighbor's who was going to drive him to Campbellford to see a doctor.

HIGH NOON
by RUBY M. AYRES

And it could be here if she wished, with his high, comfortable room, furnished with every modern luxury, the wonderful lawns and flower beds; she had but to say the word and her ambitions and the nightmare future would be swept away.

This morning when Henry Matthews made his amazing proposal she had felt her heart warm towards him, but now it was like stone; this morning she had had a choice, and now she had none. She wondered whether Mathews knew the position: if perhaps Caesar had told him. Every nerve in her body shrank from the thought of marriage with a man she did not love even while she was just enough to realize that if she had not loved some one else it might have been comparatively easy.

Since that moment in Caesar's study she had seen the shabby old house with new eyes, realizing how well she loved it. Every stick and stone held a memory; every room was sanctified by laughter or tears.

A sudden chill breath or night air came through the wide open window and she shivered. She put her work-case away in the big schoolroom cupboard which still held a collection of toys and picture books which had not been locked up for years, and emptied Vilette's ash tray.

She went to the window and looked out over the garden, how would seem very strange to waken sun. find herself in another house, she thought and remembered that for years she had not passed a single night away from Tangley.

She was turning away when Bruce's tall figure appeared in the light which fell through the open window, Heather's first impulse was to fly, but no doubt Vilette was with him.

She said, "I believe it's cooler, isn't it? I wonder if we shall have some rain at last," and then as he did not answer she asked with a quiver note, "Where is Vilette?"

"She went in some time ago. I'm afraid she is angry with me."

He was in the room now, and Heather moved away from him as she said nervously, "Angry! . . . I'm sorry. What have you done to make her angry?"

He ignored the question but as she moved towards the door he said, "I want to ask you something, Heather."

She stood still, looking back at him. "To ask me . . . something?"

"Yes . . . ." He was looking her then, looking down at her very earnestly. "Is it true that you have accepted help from Mathews? I mean, money?"

She felt her color rising but she answered steadily, "Yes, quite true. Who told you?"

"You wouldn't grant me even that privilege?"

Her eyes fell, and her hands gripped each other nervously. "I had to have help, she said at last. "And he is a rich man—and . . .somehow it was — easier to ask him. "With an effort she looked up at him. "I will pay him back, of course — some day. He knows I will."

She wanted to say, "And anyway, I can't see that it is any affair of yours." But the words would not come.

"How will you pay him back?"

The question was abrupt, almost brutal, and now he moved so that he was between her and the door, making escape impossible and when she did not speak he repeated the question, "How will you pay him back?"

She tried to answer but she felt as if she had lost her voice and there was a silence which seemed an eternity before Bruce said roughly, "By marrying him? Is that how you propose to repay him?"

Heather stood very still, no longer trembling. Only her heart beat with its nearness. Two words were beating to and fro in her brain, their insistence shutting out all others: "High noon! . . . High noon!"

Funny that they should come back to her now, she thought dully.

"Heather!" . . . She gave a little start. Bruce's hand was on her arm, hurting her.

"Are you going to marry him?"

She looked up at him then, her life forming just one word.

"Yes."

She freed her arm quite gently from his touch, her eyes still on his face. "Let me go now," she said, "it's time Caesar was in bed, and . . .

She stopped, conscious that he was not listening, and presently said, "So you've given up making the family your excuse, have you? You don't need to hide behind them any longer, or is it a question that can be easily solved by a man with Mathews' money? Perhaps he has promised to adopt them all, is that it? Or are the inducements he offers too great for you to put obstacles in the way——"

His voice had risen in his angry excitement and Heather said urgently, "Oh please — Some one will hear."

She was trembling again now, and she tried in vain to control herself, though when next she spoke her voice was steady enough, even gentle.

"All this is so unclear," she said, "I don't know who told you about . . . Mr. Mathews — I have not spoken of it to any one, but if you want me to explain I will, if you'll only listen quietly — and try not to be angry with me."

Instalment 13.

Heather dared not look at Bruce, but, after the slightest pause, she went on.

"It seems the best way out—for all of us . . . and I'm telling you of it — for every one. I hadn't seen it like that until — until this evening but . . . We haven't any money, and during the last few terrible things have got hopelessly worse."

She turned her head away.

"I have to think of Bobbie's future — and of Effie's, and now there's Caesar. He will want many things I — we can't afford if he is to keep even fairly well and strong. It isn't as if I were still very young — and there's so little I can do, and . . . I'm very tired, Bruce . . ."

She had not meant to appeal to his tenderness, but the words came and he was with her instantly. "I see that I can't go on much longer; and — you see . . . he's kind — Mr. Mathews, I mean, and it will be like . . .handing over a burden to some one else if I . . ."

She closed her eyes to keep back the tears, and Bruce said harshly, "You certainly include Vilette among your responsibilities, or is she one you are willing to hand over to me?" And then, as she was silent, he said with unwilling softening, "Heather!"

"You know I love you, Bruce! You must know it have loved you for some time, even since I first came here, and you have always made me feel that . . . Whatever you think or believe, I have never ceased to love you, even when we met again everything was just as it used to be. But you put me off, first with one excuse and then another . . . self — you've made an absurd idol of me, even though you refuse to be one, and I mean as much to you."

She moved a hand towards him, then let it fall helplessly. "You couldn't keep me . . . and the whole family, Caesar! she said tremulously. "Even if . . . If you were the only man I could ever love.

Life went on very much the same as usual in spite of its many undercurrents, the only difference being that Bruce suddenly went back to London, promising to return at the end of the week and to drive the younger members of the family to Weymouth.

With his departure Paddy Jepson appeared again, and Vilette was out with him until all hours of the night.

Caesar was looking very tired and frail, and Heather wondered if she ought to tell him about Henry Matthews. He had called at the house, but she had not seen him, although he had left a huge basket of fruit grapes for her.

Paddy Jepson did not put in an appearance the evening Bruce was to return, no doubt by Vilette's instructions, but she had announced carelessly that he would probably come to Weymouth on the week-ends.

She seemed a little more subdued than usual, Heather noticed, but she and Vilette never talked to each other now on unchanged confidences, as they used to do. And Heather had not even ventured to ask her sister how she had discovered about Henry Mathews' proposal. Every one would know soon, and it mattered very little.

It had been arranged that she and Caesar and Priddy were to drive down with Bruce and the chauffeur, and that the others would join them later.

Caesar had fortified produced two new pairs of white flannel trousers which he had rather timidly asked Heather to pack for him, and was dreading that she would question him about such an extravagance, but she said nothing, and he gave him any pleasure she felt it did not matter. He had begun to feel flippantly that as Henry Mathews would be paying all their bills for the rest of his life, such a small item was of no account.

There was a great recklessness in her heart — the kind of feeling a rider must experience after taking a difficult hedge and landing on the other side safe and sound.

She was not even afraid of meeting Bruce; everything was so definitely at an end between them. She would not allow herself to remember his last words to her, or the caress of his hand beneath her chin, although sometimes she fancied she still felt it there.

When she heard his voice in the hall she went to meet him with outstretched hand, but he only said casually, "Hullo, Heather — how are you?" and turned in welcome to Effie, who came dancing down the stairs.

Instalment 13.

Bruce was the quiet one during supper, though the others kept up a perfect babel of chatter into which even Caesar occasionally entered, but Heather was glad when it was over, and went to the drawing-room to make last arrangements, warning every one not to sit up late as they must make an early start for Weymouth. But it was past midnight when she heard Bruce and Vilette come downstairs, and go to their rooms.

She lay on her back, her hands folded above her fast-beating heart, and tried to think only of ordinary matters.

Bruce had been an hour later when some one tapped very softly on the door, and Vilette, a slender ghost in her flimsy, white nightgown, came into the room. Heather hurriedly turned on the light, but Vilette switched it out again before she had time to locate the box and groped for Heather's hand.

"Why—Vilette!" Heather whispered.

"I've come to say I'm sorry, and to ask you to forgive me," Vilette said in a muffled voice. "I know I've behaved horribly and that I don't deserve to be happy. I ought to be miserable for the rest of my life. Oh, Heather," and the elder girl could feel tears on the hand which she clasped convulsively, "Bruce has asked me to marry him—I can't believe it—but it's true—and we're engaged."

Something in Heather's heart seemed to cry out, and then to die. She closed her eyes in the darkness, but her lip still felt blood came, but Vilette went on in happy incoherence. "It's so wonderful . . . like a dream. I never knew there was such happiness in the world."

She gave a little laugh, smothered by her hand. "I can't talk when every one, must I? And yet I feel as if I want to get right on top of the world and tell every one that I've got everything I wanted—at last."

Heather's hand moved mechanically to the girl's bowed head. "I'm so glad, dear, so very glad."

"I know you're glad; I knew you would be, even though I've been so horrible to you. You're like Bruce—you know just how vain and selfish I am, and yet you both love me . . . and I'm going to try so hard to be different—it ought to be easy, now. I want to be just what he would like—always. I told him about you and Bobbie and Effie, and how much what a beast, and he was so kind—he seemed to understand. Oh, Heather! . . . you will forgive me, won't you, and let us be friends again?"

Heather bent down and drew the girl into her arms, after a short silence, Vilette said, "He asked me what kind of ring I should like, and I thought a single diamond would be nice, don't you think so? Of course I know they're expensive, but . . ."

"He won't mind that," Heather forced herself to say. She listened like some one in a dream to Vilette happy chatter—she full of her own happiness to notice her sister's silence. "And I shall be married quite soon —in the autumn, and I shall go back to Africa with him. You cannot get out and stay with us, Heather, and . . . Oh!" She suddenly realized herself from Heather's arms, and sat back on her heels. "I forgot! . . . there is something else I must tell you."

"Tell me?"

"That morning—the day Henry Mathews asked you to marry him! . . . the morning you asked him to lend you some money—I was outside the window, and I heard it all."

"It doesn't matter," Heather said quietly.

"There was a little silence, then Vilette asked, "And are you going to marry him?"

"Yes—yes I think so."

Vilette sighed deeply. "Well, it's a wonderful thing for you," she said." Wonderful for the family, I suppose. He's as rich as Croesus, so they say, and that lovely house! Then was a shade of envy in her voice. "Of course, he's not exactly a romantic person, but like Bruce he is very good for your sake, Heather."

"Thank you."

"And what did Caesar say?

"Wasn't he thrilled?"

"He doesn't know yet—I thought . . . I'd tell him—when we get away . . . I'm afraid he'll need your sacrifice to tell the family and to break the news to Caesar and while they were still in this house where Bruce Logan had first said that he loved them."

Vilette suddenly laughed softly. "Fancy you as Mrs. Henry Mathews, Heather!"

"You will seem—funny, won't it?" Heather said stiffly, and then she went on quickly, "I think you had better go to bed. It must be ever so late. With all this excitement you'll be tired to-morrow. If you don't get some sleep—"

Vilette rose to her feet. "Sleep!" she said dramatically, "I feel as if I shall never be able to sleep again! But she bent and kissed her sister. Heather warmly before she slipped away.

Heather lay back on the pillows, conscious only of the coldness of her body, and then after a long silence she whispered a name into the silence. "Bruce! . . ." and then presently, "Darling!" . . .

But she was not crying; her eyes were too hot an . . dry for tears. But she lay very still and wide awake until dawn.

ooo

Everybody arrived safely, though Bruce's "van load," as Bobbie called it, reached Weymouth an hour before the others. At The Haven Effie rushed from the car, and interlocked herself to Mr. and Mrs. Jennings, the caretakers. They were a cheery middle-aged couple and seemed delighted at the idea of a house party. Then there was a friendly squabble with Vilette as to who should have which room, until Vilette, remembering her good resolutions, said resignedly that she did not care in the least who she had.

"Cool . . . aren't you saintly!" Effie said, but even that did not annoy Vilette, who kept looking at Heather rather pathetically as if for approval. The entire family had been told about the engagement before the exodus from Tangley, but it had hardly received the acclamation Vilette had hoped for.

Heather had kept away from the scene of rejoicing, but just before she met Vilette in the hall she came face to face with Bruce on the stairs. She looked up at him and said a little tremulously, "I want to congratulate you."

W. H. MORTON, PUBLISHER

THE CROWNING OF THE KING

Sharply contrasting with the times in which it is set, yet as valuable a development of history, will be the coronation of His Majesty King George Sixth, to be held in May. The whole Empire is virtually dedicated to the great obligation resting upon it, just as the King is obligated under the ceremony of the coronation.

In this outer world so rocked and shaken with fears, so busy with the sound of manufacturing of arms which makes "the night joiner's labor with the day," and in this struggling economic age to bring about changes for the welfare of the people in an approach to the ideal of equability, the ceremony of the coronation has an inspiring viewpoint. On that memorable day in May in the presence of the Empire and with the past of Britain and her future meeting upon that event, a young king will swear those obligations which cannot but influence his conduct in the royal office. The coronation changes the emphasis from mere strength and independence of man to the sense of dependence upon Providence in the light of which sense all evils in the world will ultimately disappear.

So healing is the thought of this event that the people believe that the British nation will be the better for it as their king is strengthened by his own promises in the presence of church and state, representing the spiritual realm and the political and economic order of things.

With such a ceremony the solemnity of the occasion will miss no one. Naturally the streets will be thronged with rejoicing people, paying their homage, for which purpose many will come from far places of the earth, but beneath this joy and really the reason for it is the symbolism of the service of crowning, which high ceremonial sets the ruler apart for the service of his country.

It is valuable because it is impressive. The coronation is not an empty ritual but a deeply spiritual event, containing the lessons of history, for a great people and a young king blessed and trained also for office. The crowning of King George will be the most potent spiritual event of the year, there can be no doubt.

ON SPANISH COASTS AND BORDERS

With the "policing" of the coast of Spain by four of the Great Powers, whose warships have been taking up their "beats" according to arrangement with others to assist them, a real test of non-intervention is at hand. On land France and Portugal have military police guard sat work. Twenty-seven nations are to work together.

Locked in naval and military cordon Spain is expected to fight out her differences. Foreigners are in Spain with the two contending forces. Will more succeed somehow in keeping within the cordon?

If the proceedings are a success, will it help the principle of co-operative effort in "policing" the peace of the world?

In principle it seems like a real achievement on the part of the Powers to isolate the war and to help in the cause of peace generally. The actual results will be regard ed with interest.

HOUSE TRAILER

Everywhere the news is abroad that the trailer is here to stay—that the trailer occupant has to be figured with.

Now the trailer has started a road problem. There will be 175,000 of them purchased and used for homes in the United States this year. Confusion of traffic by the house trailer acentuates the highway problem, faced with 38,500 fatalities last year, a total which exceeded the expectation of experts.

On Friday in New York City nine states met in conference for the first time in history on the house trailer. Regulations governing this form of transportation vary once one in the primitive stages as compared with what it is expected they will be when the authorities finally regulate the trailer.

Once associated with the gypsy life trailer is a gentleman's car today, a millionaire's for that matter. Expectation is that 75,000 trailers will be bought this year at an average of $1,000 each. Already two million persons are in the trailer population. It was predicted that the trailer vote will be an issue in the future.

Formerly considered as something to be inspected or looked at as part of fraud, the trailer is today transporting entire populations. What effect will it have on permanent residence? In some parts it may have a very real effect in the case of those who like to shift from one part of the country to another.

Expectation here is that more trailers than ever will visit this city and district during the coming summer, and spend some time at local resorts.

"BUFFALO BILL" (Col. William F. Cody), who was a national and international figure, a name and personality which easily fitted into romantic representation of the great American West when the Indians were still fighting to preserve a footing in the lands of their fathers before the relentless rush of the gold-seeking, home-hunting palefaces and the crooked politicians from Washington, always on the make, and forever working on the principle that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian.". "Buffalo Bill" was a romantic figure and to see him a-foot or mounted was to glimpse immediately the atmosphere of the Wild West of his time.

...Recently the Toronto Globe published a United Press despatch from Bologna, Italy, in which the claim is made that "Buffalo Bill" really was an Italian named Guglielmo Cornelio, born in the small town of Scribigarezzo, about 1849. ...Heirs in Italy, the despatch said, were preparing to bring suit to establish their claim to the huge estate Col. Cody was supposed to have left in the United States.

Such a claim is not important in the opinion of the editorial writer of Resto Carlino, "but it is important that this great hero now is proved to be a typical Italian who was full of Fascist courage and Glory."

"Buffalo Bill" died in Denver, Colorado, January 10, 1917, and his estate was negligible.

Fascist claim to "Buffalo Bill" will not get very far, and should have been started years ago when "Buffalo Bill" and his Wild West Show visited Rome and gave the Eternal City a thrill which is current conversation even now among the oldsters. Buffalo Bill (Col. Cody) who met Queen Victoria, Col. Cody on his several visits to Belleville, also Annie Oakley and Johnny Baker, adopted son of the Colonel, became the possessor of a biography of Buffalo Bill written by his friend, Judge Cody Wetmore, published in 1899, and this gives the genealogy of Col. Cody, which goes back to Mitesius, King of Spain, the famous monarch whose three sons founded the first dynasty in Ireland. The Cody family comes down thru' the line of Heremon, son of the King of Spain. Down through the years the Codys were kings in Ireland and were located in the present counties of Clare, Galway and Mayo, and the name Cody comes from a contraction of the names Connaught-Galway, gradually shortened for convenience down through the centuries. On maternal side Col. Cody had an difficulty tracing his lineage to the landed gentry of England. Several of the Cody family migrated to America in 1747 and settled in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia. The Cody family became proud of their Irish and Spanish descent and are entitled to use a crest.

"Buffalo Bill" presented his Wild West Show in the cricket field here on his second visit and on this occasion "Old Timer," who inspired this article, had a very pleasant visit with Annie Oakley, famous marksman, and Johnny Baker, Cody's adopted son, and a great Wild West cowboy character with the stage and screen to his branche... Old Timer had quite a collection of ancient and modern firearms and the fame of the collection had reached the ears of the big shots of the Buffalo Bill show, so when the show reached Belleville they took the opportunity of inspecting the collection.

"Old Timer" says, to the best of his recollection, the Buffalo Bill show's first appearance in Belleville was about 1886 or 1887, on the old race track in what was then called "Irish Town," above the upper G.T.R. bridge. Sitting Bull, famous Sioux chief, was with the show on that occasion, with a band of his warriors. The second visit of the Buffalo Bill show was on the old cricket field, and the third and last appearance was on the old circus grounds, Dufferin St.

"Old Timer" treasures the book, the title page of which reads:.. "Last of the Great Scouts, the Life Story of Col. William F. Cody, 'Buffalo Bill,' as told by his sister, Helen Cody Wetmore."

At the first performance in Belleville, to the best of the recollection of Old Timer, the famous Deadwood Coach, had a passenger, Chief of Police Mc-Kinnon. Sheriff John Taylor, and other locals, for the thrilling ride against time with a howling pack of "blood-thirsty" Indians in pursuit. Anyone who ever rode in that Deadwood Coach at Buffalo Bill's Wild West show will never forget it, and probably carried bruises for days as a result of the rough voyage. While in London four days were spent as the guests of the show and they were given just as rough a ride as civilians. Buffalo Bill drove the coach and he had beside and the then Prince of Wales, while inside the coach rode the Kings of Denmark, Norway, Greece and Africa. The Indians, of course, whooped it up stronger than usual to make the ride hairiest and they succeeded. After the ride the Prince of Wales (later King Edward VII.) is reported to have asked Buffalo Bill if he had ever held four kings like that before, and Col. Cody replied "I have held four kings more than once, but Your Highness, I never held four kings and the royal joker before."

William Frederick Cody was born February 26, 1846, in Scott County, Iowa, near the little town of LeClair, his parents being Isaac and Mary Cody, according to the biography written by his sister Helen Cody Wetmore. Buffalo Bill should be rather hard to establish. As the cable despatch referred to originated in Bologna, Italy, it is fair to assume the entire Fascist claim as just so much bologna, and let it go at that.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 16th., 1917.

On the evening of March 14th. the children of Foxboro public school gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M.A. Snider at Foxboro to spend a few hours with their children before the departure of the family for Saskatoon, Sask. During the evening an address was read to the children by Harold Lumpkey and was signed by him and Jack Lee on behalf of the children of the school. Gifts of hair-ribbons and bonbons were made to the children on behalf of the school children by Nona Longwell and Jack Lake. Mr. Snider and Beatrice Snider thanked their young friends for the address and gifts. Mrs. Snider served delicious refreshments.

The final curling match for the possession of the Bronze Cup was played last evening between rinks skipped by R. A. Bonter and J. H. McArthur. The game, which was an exciting one all the way, resulted by a large number of spectators, was won by Mr. Bonter's rink. The following made up the rinks: L. F. Hughes, H. Bryant, Dr. Ketcheson, R. Bonter (skip), 13; G. M. Frith, C. H. Scott, J.A. Eldridge, G. E. Hughes (skip), 10. After the game the players and members of the club gathered in the club room for a social and excellent supper was served. Mr. T. H. Ketcheson, the retiring president of the club, presided and presented the Ryman Cup to Mr. Bonter and the Club Trophy to Dr. M. A. Dee. Mr. Ketcheson, the retiring officer, secretary, Mr. H. B. Stock and the members of the executive committee for their excellent work during the season. Brief speeches were made by Mr. Bonter, Dr. Dee, Mr. H. B. Stock, Mr. A. E. Hughes, Lieut. Col. A. F. Allen, Mr. C. Dolan, Mr. J. M. Farley, Mr. Mitchell, Judge J. J. Wills, and Dr. M. J. Clarke.

30 YEARS AGO

March 16th., 1907.

Mr. J. Roberts of Toronto has assumed the position of accountant in the office of Mr. Orr Tawse, where he has obtained a position with the Grand Trunk Railway.

Trenton's crack hockey team, which has not been defeated so far this season, came down last night and stacked up against a local bunch composed of four O. H. A. Juniors and one Senior, who, if may be fairly stated, were quite equal to the O.H.A. team in the match was a fast and clean exhibition of hockey and was enjoyed from start to finish. The Trenton lads proved themselves to be a fast and clever lot; the Juniors by their clever work showed that they are coming players and will be heard from in the future. Armstrong boys, ages 16 and 17 years, on the wings, are the pick of the Trenton team, and they did not disappoint the crowd. The game resulted in favor of Trenton, the score being 9 to 5. The following composed the teams: Belleville—Phillips, Rose, Hamilton, Allen Storms, Burks and McClure. Trenton—Armstrong, Rose, Rourke, Cummings, Fletcher, H. Armstrong, Conway. The referee was James Connolly and he gave entire satisfaction.

40 YEARS AGO

March 16th., 1897.

Mr. L. Moon of Madoc was in the city today.

Mr. Robert Weddell of Trenton was in town during the holidays.

Mr. William F. Flynn left today for New York City.

Mr. Charles Noble, who has been home on a visit, left today for Buffalo, N.Y.

Dr. R. Tracy has been elected chairman of the City Board of Health.

A team of horses owned by Mr. Charles Meagher, near Oak Pinnacle Street last evening. Ben McCormick drove the horses home from the sleigh and received a cut on the head.

Mr. Wesley Bullen has returned to the city after spending several months in Manitoba.

Mr. Arthur J. Sine of Thurlow Township, will leave tomorrow for Minneapolis, Minn.

50 YEARS AGO

March 16th., 1887.

Evening, St. Patrick's Day at St. Mary's Church. Dr. O'Gorman will deliver a lecture tomorrow evening in St. Mary's Hall, on St. Michael's Church. The proceeds will be devoted to the church building fund. The high ability of Father O'Gorman as a lecturer ensures a treat. Admission will no doubt ensure a large attendance.

Mr. Thomas H. Wadland, who introduced into Belleville and vicinity the system of Shorthand now in vogue, is in the city and is stopping at the Queen's Hotel. He has left Belleville for Toronto several since Mr. Wadland left.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, will remain over Sunday in Belleville. The Rev. John Learoyd, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, and Mr. Kingsford intend to hear him.

The members of the Harbor and Ferry Committee met yesterday afternoon and instructed the Chairman of Public Works to proceed with repairs on the ferry slip on the Bridgewater side.

About twenty candidates for the position of police constable for Belleville police force were examined by the Police Commissioners today.

The Menace of the Wolf

The natural home of the wolf in Ontario is in the district lying between the Severn and Trent water systems and stands south and the French and Mattawa systems on the north; and between the Ottawa River on the east and the Georgian Bay on the west. This was once the natural habitat of the wolf. The cedar and the white spruce, the pine being peculiarly valuable for lumber, and the spruce for newsprint pulp. This area is now scientifically designated the "Laurentian region" of Ontario because its rock foundation is geological formation of the earliest of the lime-stone strata. It contains many lakes and streams and the Algonquin Park takes up nearly thirty of its townships. It includes the watersheds of the rivers flowing respectively into the Georgian Bay and the Ottawa, the most important of which are the Severn, the Muskoka and the Magnetawan tributary to the former, between tributary to the former, and the Madawaska, the Bonnechere and the Petawawa tributary to the latter.

The beginning of the exploitation of the pine timber of the eastern slope of the region from Ottawa commenced a century ago when immigrants began to settle in the counties of Lanark and Renfrew. Their methods were extremely destructive because of the waste the pine trees trunks and left a great mass of fuel to feed destructive fires. Mid-way of the century the lumber industry began on the Georgian Bay side, but there, too, were built sawmills and transported the sawn lumber in lake vessels and later by railway. In various ways the pine timber of the region was the most valuable tree, until, as the result of fires and the lumbering industry, the latter has reached almost the limit of its natural growth. Coincident of the Pre-Cambrian area is generally good where there is depth of soil, but after many farming years while; and to supply the needs of the homeseekers who followed and followed the lumbermen, clearing their farms, and the natural growth of prosperity. Like the lumber industry, the local farming industry has reached its faded away, and now the whole region is dotted with abandoned farms.

This is one explanation of the increase in recent years of the multiplication of the wolves and the decline of the deer. A generation ago the latter were half domesticated, because they were safer with the neighborhood settlers than in the lumbermen whose food supplies were scarcer than they were either before the lumber industry began or since it has virtually ceased. Left to themselves deer and cattle live quite amicably together, and the presence of the latter is never any more hostile to the one class of animals than he is to the other.

The obvious inference is clear, utilize domestic cattle as cattle are to wolves; prohibit deer slaying without a license; and regulate by this destruction profitable to the hunter.

How to Win a War

Hunting German submarines with packs of sea terriers trained as submarine hounds was one suggested method of ending the World War, according to which the British Government gave serious consideration during the first year. Writes E. J. Penny in the London Free Press, "Fantastic as it may appear first, this was the subject of extensive experiments carried out by the Board of Invention and Research in charge of Admiralty. Mr. Archibald Joy, J. Thomson, O.M. P.R.S., master of Trinity College, Cambridge, wrote a book entitled "Recollections and Reflections," recently published (The Macmillan Co. of Canada, Toronto), which contains a detailed account of the serious effort made to train sea hounds as submarine hounds. The scheme was based on the known fact that sea lions are able to remain for a long time under water and thus might be used to detect submarines, after performing sound the animals were hired and experiments were made with three sea lions, swimming afterwards in Bala Lake in North Wales and Loch Fyne in Argyllshire, the distinguished author reports. "The method used was to place the animals in water with a hamper, or by hitting a metal plate with a hammer, and in place food with a hammer, and in place food it was hoped would get to look on the sound as a signal for food. The sea lions were found to hear quite well under water and they soon detect the sound at as great a distance as the detecting instrument we were using at the time. After a short training they learned to associate sound with food and would swim up to its source. In Bala Lake, where the most successful experiments were made, they would sometimes come to the food from three miles away. They were, however, very temperamental; sometimes they would refuse food when a fraction of this distance. On hot days the lions became sluggish and efficient than on cold; their speed too was slower than might have been expected. They took at least 40 minutes to travel three miles so that any use in any slow-moving submarine would get away from them. If the porpoise which formed the usual food-stuffs "looks of sail" would fly to it in the hope of getting food. The problem of attaching submarine detection was solved successfully and practically by the invention of sensitive microphones which could pick up sounds made by a submarine under water even though miles distant. Experiments in this sound were the best of instruments picked up by the human ear. It was found that it was necessary for the observer using one to have his sense of hearing specially trained so as to be able to detect which of the various sounds picked up was the exact the near presence of a submarine. Great reliance was placed upon the training of good observers than on the perfection of listening apparatus. Even with this, however, the system was unable to eliminate the human factor, which proved fatal.

Other war-time incidents from Sir J. J. Thomson's book are highly amusing at this date but the mere fact that they happened shows how fantastic ideas based upon the mental processes which war brings to light. When Board of Invention and Research was formed by the Admiralty amateur inventors with devices guaranteed to win the war in short order. Five thousand such inventions were sent in during the first six months of the organization. Before the end of the struggle was over this number had grown to over 10,000, but this number, not more than 30 proved to be of any value. Some examples of these ideas are fantastic ideas which were sent in to the bureau in the early months of the war. One was a scheme to stop zeppelin raids over London. It was the essence of simplicity, the idea being to have large balloons moored over London, each carrying half a dozen parachutes, each with bird line and flying at a great height over the Midlands from which the zeppelins would approach. The wall of the room in which they were kept. This would give the balloons the appearance of brick-work, whereupon they could be hauled down and captured.

Another suggestion for ending the war was more elaborate. It was to collect a flock of cormorants, feed them on white food and pep this in barrels of petrol, and then release them over the enemy's country. Each bird would carry a lighted fuse which were sent in to the bureau in the early months of the war. One was a scheme to stop zeppelin raids over London. Another suggestion for ending the war was more elaborate. It was to collect a flock of cormorants, feed them on white food and pep this in barrels of petrol, and then release them over the enemy's country. Each bird would carry a lighted fuse which would ignite the petrol when the birds alighted on the enemy's ships. Then another brain-child of an inventor was designed to make the allied lines impassable to enemy aircraft. The inventor was very confident about this scheme and was willing to sell it to the British Government for the trifling sums of seven million pounds. His idea was to surround the allied lines by a ring of iron pole, each a quarter of a mile high and separated from each other by the same distance. The poles were to be vertical and each provided with an engine to make it turn about its axis. Pastened to the top of each pole was to be a steel chain one-eighth of an mile long, and at the free end of each of these chains was to be fastened a bag containing a large quantity of explosives. When the poles were set spinning by the motors, the chains would fly out and become horizontal so that the troops would be protected by a belt of dynamite. This ingenious scheme not only was seriously propounded to the bureau, but it was supported by many influential and responsible people. It is hoped that the British Government should investigate and possibly adopt it.

There was also a suggestion of the lighter side of a book which was to be written illustrating glimpses of men and events which mark it as a truly important period; but our own knowledge of many too little known aspects of British history of our own times.

Stray Bits

Village of Paradise:

Geraldton the modern mining centre and gateway to the Rice of the Mines wanders through subterranean passages in the "biggest gold mine I have ever visited in my life," writes Boyd B. Sinclair, in the Montreal News-Chronicle. "I'm a tenderfoot in a mining town, a miscreance east among ore and dought. In the past twenty-four hours I have seen fats and leans themselves at every turn in my bewildered wanderings through Geraldton—the village of paradoxes. And I like it.

There are two hotels here with running water and electric lights in each; yet a stone's throw away there are houses where the garbage is piled in the back yard and dumped left there. There is one road, about fifteen miles in length; and yet there are twenty-five taxi cabs by actual count, plus a number of privately owned cars.

The women attend teas and dances, and there is a dog-fight dance being held at Little Long Lac, with soft lights and soft music; and the dogs are trained to fight each other.

A pay cheque of a hundred dollars is frequently spent in a single night; and yet two restaurants have stopped selling cigarettes because so many asked for credit and then forgot to pay the dime or twenty-five cents that was chalked up on the cuff.

You can't get a hotel room half the time unless you make reservations a week in advance; and yet there remain unoccupied rooms. The leading butcher shop sells 2,000 pounds of beef each week and 300 pounds of sausages which sounds like a true hi-man city; and yet the grocery store next door can't keep stocked up on creamed mushrooms or cattle or veal to fill the demand for both.

There is a fully modern ten-bed hospital less than two miles from the heart of the town, equipped with X-ray apparatus and the latest in surgical appliances and yet three doctors are working a good many hours every day trying to practice in the place for nothing —which is what medicine feared most in the Canadian north country.

The telephone system has been installed to connect the various important place of business, and yet when telegraph officials want to make sure that a resident receives his telegram they post his name outside the station wall. And it's vastly more effective.

Airplanes and motorcycles are commonplace; and yet the first grocery store established here delivers its orders by dog team.

There's a dog for every ten residents, and a dog-fight for every ten dogs. They're mostly new-bound sleigh dogs, and yet you will see teamsters being whisked up and down the main street on leashes.

The settlement is less than three years old; and yet already there are signs that Geraldton will be a "right and terrible" side of its railway tracks. The slogan of the miners is "go South, young man".

Churches and banks are both represented here, heralding alike the moral and financial welfare of the people; and yet Geraldton is still blessed with a school house and scors or more children are unable to attend it.

There's a fifty dollar fine for burning a bill in the street, and no public building; and yet they blow the big fire siren in the centre of the town at 8 a.m. and noon every day.

They have running water in many buildings; and yet over a tap in most cases is a sign, "Please do not drink this water."

Geraldton is a sign painter's paradise. Every other building proudly reveals: "Now Open for Business." It's a necessary sign as the building is invariably direct by the method of knocking each other's heads in.

MARMORA

Marmora, March 15—A large gathering of residents of Marmora and Deloro villages assembled at the Deloro Hall on Friday evening to honor newlyweds of the month, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Smith. Shlyrdski music was supplied for round and square dancing and Frank Leal was floor manager. An interesting event was called at about 11 p.m., when S. R. Wright, reeve of the village, presented on behalf of the community, a studio couch and a set of silverware to the honored couple. He also presented a radio table on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rose, senior, whose fiftieth wedding anniversary falls next May. Mr. Wright voiced the good wishes of the gathering for a long and happy wedded life. On behalf of the Deloro Trading Company, with whom Mr. Smith has been employed a number of years, F. A. Bapty presented the guests of honour with a chaque. Suitable acknowledgments on behalf of both were made by Mr. Smith. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Smith, their wedding attendants, Simeon Smith and Miss M. Corrigan and the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, senior, Clinton Greenaway, with music and other gifts received, in the course of a miscellaneous shower.

Mr. Tom Crawford of Cobourg, spent the week end with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. Crawford.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson, of Belleville, spent Sunday with friends in Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Elizabeth Gladnay of Belleville spent the week end with friends in Marmora.

Rev. Fr. J. J. Keeley who has been in the treatments in Toronto has returned very much improved in health.

Misses Olive and Isabel Airhart visited relatives and friends in Marmora over the week end.

The following members of Golden Star L.B.F. number 746, attended a meeting of Foxboro Royal Black Preceptory on Thursday evening, T. E. Neal, Senior, T. M. Neal, Junior, J. H. Wright, T. R. Wright, W. J. Colwell, Gray and R. G. Frankie.

Flowers were placed on the altar at St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sunday in memory of the late Canon Harris, who passed away on March 1st, 1933, after being rector of Marmora for 34 years.

Mr. James Benor of Campbellford visited relatives in town on Sunday.

Mr. W. Lilt is very ill at his home here.

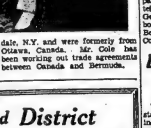
The regular meeting of the W.A. of Tweed United Church was held on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. C. N. Perritt, presiding. The program was prepared by Mrs. C. Ed Way's group. Mrs. S. B. McGie read the scripture lesson. Several items of routine business were discussed. Interesting readings were given by Mrs. H. Peterson and Mrs. Way. The latter read "God's Garden". Mrs. S. H. Connor sang "Have you been in the garden with Jesus."



Mrs. Robbie Dulmage, Reg. N., who has been in charge of Tweed Hospital for the past two and a half years left on Thursday last to join her husband in Ottawa where Mr. Dulmage is in charge of a baby business. It is unfortunate that Tweed Hospital is closed as it served a useful purpose in the community. It is to be hoped that it will be again re-opened. The departure of Mrs. Dulmage is deeply regretted by her friend and neighbors.

Tweed Juvenile hockeyists representatives of the Consolidated and Separate Schools battled again at the local arena on Saturday morning. The former finally broke the ice when their rivals have held over them during the season and swamped the Separate-School by a score of 3 to 2. Vince Prout, Bud Sills, "P." Baldwin and C. McCoy were the scorers for the winners. O. Doyle and' P. Chapelle scored for the losers.

The teams:—

Tweed Consolidated — goal, Douglas Connor, defence, V. Prout, P. Baldwin, Centre, Leroy Vance, rushs—R. Offer, G. Connor, J. Bastin.

Tweed Separate—goal, J. Abrams; defence, O. Doyle, P. Chapelle; centre, H. Austin; wings, B. Gehas, B. Lajoie, S. Donohue, S. Meraw.

"FEELING FINE"

"Let me give you a tip. I'm feeling fine. Headache and pains all gone. I never miss an engagement since I learned about Paradol. It's quick and never disappoints." 25 cents.

Little Benny's Note Book

We wuz eating breakfist and pop started to open his mail ma saying, Who's that letter in the plain envelope from, Henry? Pop said I'm curious but I'd just like to know, she said.

The handwriting seems familiar, pop said I wonder if it's from the person I suspect it's from, I hope not, he said.

And he opened the envelope kind of slow with his butter knife and started to read the letter, and say, The poor little woman, that's who it's from, all rite, I bet that's the ready sorry that she ever wrote this but anyway I just send her my attention to it, he said.

Why Willyum what is it for land sakes, let me see, ma said and pop said, O, it's really not worth a post stamp I'm the silly little fool should of known there are certain things that only a wife can attend to properly. The only gentlemanly thing to do is tear it up, he said.

Which he started to do and ma said, Willyum Potts, hand me that letter, do you hear.

And she tried to grab it but pop wouldn't leave her, Mary Jane, all it's addressed to me, but all rite, I'll read it to you, he said.

Which he did, Dear Mr. Potts, I know you will agree with me I remind you that something that makes domestic life smoother adds happiness to the home, and well established hand laundry, besides being built purposes for its service in washing and ironing, makes a specialty of free darning and will replace all missing buttons with our compliments. I feel sure you will show this to your wife with a word of commendation. Respectfully, Mrs. Lorra D. Jenkins. The New Era Hand Laundry.

You crazy silly thing, give me that, it sounds like quite an idea that, it sounds like quite an idea, maybe I'll give her a trial, ma said, and pop said, It's a woman's world and man is helpless.

And he opened the rest of his mail to himself.

Several of the members who had been sick were present again and thanked the Chapter for recognition shown them during their illness. Mrs. M. Brown, the recorder, and Mrs. York, junior regent, were elected as delegates to attend the Central Ontario district meeting of the Women of the Moose Association to be held in Toronto early in April.

An invitation was received from the Royal Order of Moose to attend their meeting of this week in the Paul Smiths who is the lecturer of the evening.

SMART INTERNATIONAL SET NOT WELCOMED ABOUT BRITISH COURT

London, March 16—Three months of the new reign have made it clear to Great Britain that what its critics termed the smart international set—the pre-war denounced by the Archbishop of Canterbury—is no longer welcomed by the court.

The set that was close to Edward VIII during his brief reign was called by the Archbishop "alien to all the traditions and traditions" of Britain.

The same small circle that moved around King George VI and Queen Elizabeth when, as Duke and Duchess of York, they lived at 145 Piccadilly, are now intimates of the Royal family. Most are members of English and Scottish noble families.

The King has received and talked with countless subjects since his accession, but the business of Kingship makes difficult the formation of personal friendships.

Reminiscences

Sixty-five years ago this 11th day of March,
When a boy sixteen years of age,
To the Ashley homestead I came
The blacksmith trade to learn.

A three-years' term of apprenticeship
Was what I had to serve.
Then became the head mechanic
Of the Ashley Carriage Shop.

Well do I remember the day
When first in the shop I spent,
And can hear the anvil's ring,
And the flapping of the bellows, which I worked
And can see the roaring forge
And the red-hot iron shaped.

And how we all would listen
For the six o'clock bell to ring.
Then hasten to the little creek
To wash our grimy hands which a blacksmith always has.
Then make ready for our supper,
Which was always of the best.

Then back to the old playground,
Which was just beyond the shop,
Where some would practice jumping
the run and skip and hop.

Others turned the handspring,
And on the pole did swing,
While others pitched the horseshoes
Which has now become "The Thing".

Now the old gymnasia pole,
Has crumbled to the ground,
The horse shoes have been left to rust away,
But the lofty winding creek
Still runs the same old way.
As when we were a lad there
In that far-off day.

Nearly all those boys have passed away
I know of only one that's left.
And I think that he is living now
In the Great Wide West.

Ever since that distant day,
Providence has been good to me.
And now my wife and I dwell in a comfortable home of our own,
Where we expect from where the old shop stood.

Em living now a retired life,
In comfort I do dwell,
And I still can see the Ashley home
The place I love so well.

The older folks have all passed on
And the sons have gone down,
I hope he always prospers
And may his son, as well.

And when he's done this earthly life,
I hope he'll pass it on.
To his only son, and then to John
His grandson, now sixteen months of age.

Ira Simmons, age 81 years.
Foxboro, Ont., March 11th., 1937.

SHANNONVILLE W. A.

The monthly meeting of the W.A. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Sam Elliott on Thursday, March 11th. A busy day was spent by the ladies, some making aprons and others assisting the hostess to prepare the delicious dinner that was served at noon to nearly sixty. Many of the men came for dinner and enjoyed a visit together. Meeting was held in the afternoon. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Orval Stratton. The Devotional reading was given by Mrs. Stanley MacDonald, and Mrs. Sam Elliott led in prayer. Mrs. Frank Dorrister gave a reading. Mrs. Claude Clarke reported fifteen aprons sold. It was decided to have a pie social in the church hall. The president and the vice presidents to be the programme committee. Each member is asked to bring 2 dozen sandwiches and 2 pies. Mrs. Harvey Shetler favored with a beautiful sacred solo. Mrs. Harry Sine played the piano accompaniment. After the closing hymn all joined in repeating the W. A. benediction. The ladies were much pleased with the success of the meeting as much sewing was accomplished and the small sum of 10 cents the proceeds of the dinner was over six dollars. Thanks are due Mr. and Mrs. Elliott for their kind hospitality which was so much enjoyed by all present.

Boys' Club Social Evening

On Wednesday evening March 10, the boys of the Club were entertained at the home of Wallace Rose.

As it was Ladies' night each member had the privilege of bringing a guest for a social evening. A jolly time was spent by all present.

FEWER COLDS— SHORTER COLDS

For Thousands Who Followed this Guide to Better Control of Colds

1: To Help PREVENT Many Colds

At the first warning sneeze or sniffle or the slightest irritation in the nose—quick!—put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. This specialized medication is expressly designed for the nose and upper throat, where most colds start. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in their early stages.

2. To Help END a Cold Sooner

Of course, some colds strike without warning, or get by even the best precautions. Then you need your dependable Vicks VapoRub. Go straight to bed and massage it briskly on the throat, chest, and back for 3 full minutes. Then spread a thick layer of VapoRub over the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. Long after you relax into restful sleep, VapoRub's famous counter-irritant action continues hour after hour—loosening phlegm, easing your cough, relieving irritation, helping to break up local congestion.

Sickness from Colds Cut In Half

The two simple steps outlined above, together with a few sensible health rules, are the basis of Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds. In the biggest cold-clinic ever held—with 17,353 people as subjects—Vicks Plan resulted in fewer colds and shorter colds. It cut sickness from colds more than half!

MRS. ED. DRUMM, COE HILL, DIES AT AGE OF 104

230 Descendants Living In Eastern Ontario Survive

Believed to be one of the oldest women in Canada, Mrs. Edward Drumm, who died at her home two miles east of Coe Hill this week at the age of 104, leaves a total of 230 descendants in all parts of Canada and Eastern Ontario to mourn her loss.

One hundred and thirty-one great grandchildren survive her, with 66 grandchildren, and two great-great grandchildren. Eleven of her family of 13 children are still living. They are: Mrs. Arthur Ralph Mrs. Percy Doughty, Mrs. Geo. Monaghan and Thomas Drumm, all of Peterborough; Mrs. Patrick Finnegan, Frankford; Mrs. Peter Monaghan, Mrs. Peter Malloy, Mrs. Steven Malloy, Mrs. Joseph and William Drumm of Coe Hill village.

Other members of the family reside at Picton, Belleville, Bancroft, Whitby, Port Hope, Wooler, Roslin, Campbellford, Gananoque, Hamilton, Windsor, Chicago.

Mrs. Drumm whose maiden name was Elizabeth Nobes, moved to Coe Hill with her husband almost three quarters of a century ago. Her husband, a road builder and surveyor, who died 32 years ago, is credited with constructing the first road into Coe Hill village, and had charge of the first construction crew on the railroad laid in that northern section. Possessed of good health and extraordinary vigor, Mrs. Drumm was rarely ill, even in late years and up to 1926 started a small garden at the rear of her home. Her hearing, sight and memory were good up to the time of her death.

The late Mrs. Drumm was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church and had resided with her son, John, up to the time of her death.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Shannon of Picton are great-great grandchildren.

ANTI NAZI DRIVE OPENS IN N. YORK

Huge Rally of 25,000 Hear Speaker Condemn Nazi Activities

New York, Mar. 16 (AP)—Protests against the spreading ruin of burst against Chancellor Hitler of Germany and his anti-Semitic activities, a drive against Nazis in America was crystallized today in an attempt to obtain the arrest of some of their leaders.

Major Julius Hochfelder, in behalf of the German-American League of Culture, announced he had determined to seek a warrant for the arrest of Fritz Kuhn, of Detroit, whom he described as the head of the Nazi military organization, on a charge of violating New York's penal law.

Hochfelder was scheduled to go into court in Yorkville today to file with the Secretary of State a certificate declaring the purposes of their society, the Amerika-Deutscher Volksbund.

Hochfelder asserted the Volksbund was "an allien military organization, an agency of the Hitler government."

Former counsel of American Jewish war veterans, Hochfelder has appealed to President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull in an effort to halt the "spreading ruin" of Hitler's native Nazi organizations in this country and, if possible, obtain deportation of their members.

A rally of anti-Nazis Madison last night which filled Madison Square Garden—it seats approximately 25,000—brought Mayor Fiorello H. Laguardia the assertion he would "not lose his citizenship because of Hitler as a "brown-shirted fanatic" as often as the occasion demanded.

Call of Boycott Germans Goods

Laguardia's remarks proposed that force a group of Jewish women that the German dictator be despatched "a chamber of horrors" at New York's world fair in 1939 precipitated protests by the Berlin and Washington governments as to the Mayor-ington governments as to the May-ington governments as to the May-or's remarks and subsequent replies in the German press.

John L. Lewis, head of the committee for industrial organization, Hugh Johnson, former NRA administrator, and other speakers at the rally called for a boycott of German goods.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who presided, declared that "Hitlerism is a menace to the peace of the world."

Dr. Wise said that "Hitlerism is a menace to the peace of the world."

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLA

"After the Thin Man"

With all the entertaining points of his predecessor, and a number of others that will be remembered a year, "After the Thin Man", is now in its third sensational week at the Bella Theatre starring William Powell and Myrna Loy. This is a sequel to "The Thin Man" which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios produced in response to public demand.

The same director, W. S. Van Dyke, was responsible for both pictures, the film and there was no doubt that the sequel picks up the high where the original quit left off.

An excellent supporting cast includes James Stewart, Elissa Landi, Joseph Calleia, Jessie Ralph and Asta, the intelligent wire-haired terrier which played a clever part in "The Thin Man".

The new story presents the ace detective in the returns from New York to his home in San Francisco complicated by abandon wedding activities forever. The first thing that slaps him in the face is the A-1 mystery, with a murder and another series of irresistible adventures.

The story carries up into the sensational finish of Nob Hill in the city of the Golden Gate and involves the entire Wynant chandelier of Chinatown with the solution never in doubt until the last reel. It is a matter of fact, according to M.G.M. authorities, the "Thin Man" was produced correctly and the cast was virtually sworn to keep the plot to themselves.

"After the Thin Man" is a worthy successor to the first sensational picture which became a box-office record breaker.

Among the highlights or the Bella latest News Flashes, are scenes of the Duke of Windsor's abdicate Premier White House Guest, Mrs. Simpson, Coronation Ball Gowns, enormous crowds overrun pitch in Miami, Florida, Championship 3-1 and many other interesting up-to-the-minute events.

The feature attraction on the same program is Radio's famous Quiz Kiddies, Ted Healy and his Stooges in a comedy, "Pardon My Scotch", and a short entertaining show.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Woman Alone"

Coming to the Capitol Theatre starting tomorrow, are two grand features headed by Sylvia Sidney in "Woman Alone" and added attraction in natural color, "Bold Caballero."

Sylvia Sidney stars in the principal role in "The Woman Alone," a new picture founded on a Cosmo Hamilton story. Miss Sidney is cast in one of the strongest roles of her career is Oscar Homolka, known for his splendid portrayal of the Russian Spy in "Rhodes, the Diamond Master" and as the secret picked up another point, when his pass out from behind the goal was deflected into his own net by defence man's skate and just one minute later he passed to Provost for the seventh counter to make the score at the end of the second period 7, Belleville 2.

There was no slackening of the pace as the third period opened. The locals sensing a shut-out and revert counter for the 12 to 4 reverse they had previously sustained at the hands of Belleville, in the league series, turned on the steam and by the end of the period they had and checked the visitors before their respective goal nets. Any who did go were shunted into the corners by the Tunnson brothers on defence and Thompson and Bibb trouble in blocking any shots which came their way. Lang was particularly pestiferous and, when he failed to score himself, pulled his weight. R. Maguire drew a penalty and Seamark missed the open net on a pass from Lang.

Eight Without Reply

Courneyea again broke through to bag the eighth goal. Lang was red when Seamark spilt the defence and Tweed Thompson on the side shot for the visitors' first goal with 57 minutes gone. Maguire and Courneyea got the goal back two minutes later and Lang drove in a bumper from the corner to make the score nine to 2.

Belleville rallied in the final period, defence, J. Ethier, "Shrat" Ethier; centre, Hewitt; wings, Harvey and Seamark; goal, Doyle. McGuire, Hammond.

Napanee: Bibb, Thompson; defence, "Tip" Tunnson, J. Tunnson; centre, "Diddy" Leal; wings, Maguire and Courneyea; subs, Provost, Leal, Lang, Marsh, Gerakel.

POLICE REACH

who had heard a shot or voices at the time it was believed Hewitt was killed. The district resident said he had noticed a car beside the highway as he drove past but was not certain if it was that of Hewitt.

"Not a person is under suspicion now," said Chief Constable Ponton. "Not a motive for the killing has been found."

Call Not Traced

A telephone call to the Hewitt home yesterday puzzled investigators. Answered by a neighbor, a woman voice was said to have asked: "Have they found the man who shot Mr. Hewitt yet?"

The neighbor asked who was speaking and was given the name of one of Mrs. Hewitt's friends. The neighbor then contacted the bereaved man's widow and when she returned the line was dead. However, the neighbor said the woman whose name had been given denied the telephone and was informed she had not called the Hewitt home that day. Efforts to trace the call were fruitless.

An indication Hewitt was familiar with the person who called him on Saturday night ostensibly on business was the fact he used a coach automobile instead of a sedan. It was determined he did not use this type of machine as a taxi. He did not say where he was going but told his wife he would be "back in five minutes". That was the last heard of him until his body was found.

STIRLING

JUDGE PARKER GUEST SPEAKER

Young Men's Bible Class in Stirling Held Open Meeting

Stirling, March 16—The church auditorium of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was well filled on Sunday afternoon, when nearly three hundred persons gathered with the members of St. Andrew's Young Men's Bible Class, for an open service, when Judge James Parker of Toronto, a former resident of Stirling, was the guest speaker. Mr. Thomas Ward, first president of the organization was in charge of the service, Rev. J. A. Hoffend welcomed those present in a brief address. Members of the choir, augmented by young men from St. John's Anglican Church, and St. Paul's United Church, under the thirty-two voiced choir, conducted by Mr. Chas. E. Bridgeford, Mus. Bac., assisted him in the singing. Mr. Robt. Eggleton, Superintendent of the Sunday School led in prayer, Mr. Arthur Duncan sang a solo, "The Open Door," and "The Temple," with Mr. C. Allan at the organ.

One of the most interesting features of the program was a group of two numbers given by an instrumental trio, Mr. Reginald Wardell, violin, Mr. Eddie and Mr. Bert Breazeacombe, all of Belleville.

The guest speaker was introduced to the audience by Mr. F. T. Ward, one of the senior members of the organization, who in his address recalled vividly teaching a young class of boys in the old church, one of which the guest speaker was a member. Throughout the years of his absence from his native town, Mr. Parker has continued his interest with the church of his boyhood days, and still contributes generously to its funds.

Judge Parker

Speaking on the far reaching subject, "Things that Matter," the speaker dwelt on the progress of time demanded keener thinking. He said: "We, the men, have taken many things for granted, much the same as a court accepting circumstantial evidence. We, must not judge things by hard external appearance but inspect them carefully.

"Many personal individual strife raging and causing the world to tremble is the result individual mistrust. Let us trust and be trustworthy among men and sincerity will be ours. We must make the very best of the things which God has given, talents, and gifts; and such labours will open the way to greater opportunity. The story of the Loaves and Fishes and the feeding of the great throng, from a multiple of unwarning faith and accomplishment in the hands of the Master. They pass out the food with only five loaves and fishes available, and when they had finished, much was left of that which was given. Some would have been added to the five loaves and fishes, and so multiplied. As the young men present, he urged them to put in their leisure to constructive thought and study and out of it will come rich reward. Sir Isaac Newton, in the midst of ceaseless study and working, he said, found time to make toys for children, that though he knew this great man was also a humble worker in a drug store of Stirling village, and bore the same name, he was not related to him.

The members of the Young Men's Bible Class are very grateful to Judge Parker for his splendid address and for his interest in the activities of the organization exemplified by the fact, that though in the midst of a busy life and legal practice, he found it possible to attend the Stirling service to keep an appointment in the church of his childhood days. Changes have taken place in Stirling since he left, but remaining sufficient old landmarks to revive old memories both pleasant and sorrowful, he stated.

Three Goal Drive in Third Gives Redmen Two Goal Lead Over Sutton Irish in 1st Game

Score is 4-2 With Return Game in Sutton on Thursday

HOCKEY IS SPOTTY

"Kid Line" And St. Louis Marksmen For The Winning Clicks

Flashing through in a brilliant third period rally the Belleville Redmen came from behind to defeat the Sutton "Green Shirts" by the score of 4 to 2 in the third round of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs in the O.H.A. before a spasmodic filled arena in Belleville last night. Leading one to nothing by virtue of a middle session period, the Redmen were caught napping when the Sutton squad scored twice unleashed an opening third period drive to score twice and force to the lead, Pearl's baffled brothers, however, checked the Redmen staged homeward for the sensational come-back hectic and fast style of hockey to play their best efforts of play in the last fifteen minutes of play and not only completely checked the Green Shirts, but go on to gain a well-earned victory. The win gave the Redmen a two goal lead to take to Sutton on Thursday night for the return game in a play night for the return game in a goals to count round.

The play was listless and saw a mediocre brand of hockey played during the first period, which was caused paramountly by the Sutton seemingly lackadaisical attitude to game with a four-man defence being set up against the Redmen's fast and clever play of the Redmen. The visitors seemed content to keep the game down in the middle mass on the large Belleville ice surface but after a few long lanty shooting attempt in the early stages coupled with a brand of fence of harassed players inside of their own zone. Once the Redmen drew the Green Shirts out into open play, however, they were complete masters and went on a scoring rampage, that brought them from behind and saw them emerge with a well-deserved victory.

Should Have Had More

On the night's play the homesters deserved a better fate and should have had a larger margin of goals in their favour as the shots on net would indicate, Belleville outshot the Redmen by nearly two to one, Watt making 32 stops in Smith's 16 for Sutton, Smith, who starred for Sutton, stopped 15, 13 and 11, while Watt equalled the good stopped 8, 7 and 8 respectively.

"Hooey" Tompkins, fast skating right winger for Eddie Thomas' fast-clicking puckmen, was the chief marksman of the night, bagging two counters, one of which however was fed with excellent passes from Bill Jackson, who made scoring one of the local kid line with Clayton Jackson notching the other two goals. The Redmen line composed of the centre "kid line" and Stephen Sloan, who starred throughout for the most brilliant and sensational game of the night to score the goal, that put Belleville in the ultimate lead on a sterling effort in the pond scoop rifled with bullet-like speed through the net, as Smith made a feeble waving effort in endeavouring to save. Only scoring two minutes of good hockey and were well both ways for the night's standing and the defensively, Bentley and Ingram alternated nicely with Murphy, keeping the play in the air ing in one of his best games of the year between the Belleville netminders, with 21 fine saves including a penalty shot, that Jackie Slane attached to him for the two scored against the locals. Carl Morgan played his last game for the locals while "Buster" Whitton was always in the exhibition with his rushes, Burley checked back well. Beckett was the brilliant goal. St. Louis looked much better as the game progressed and well deserved his honors.

Sutton Goalie Smart

Leon Smith, cool-headed Sutton goalie literally stood out as the star loser over the ice-pad by the Green Shirts, his nonchalant turning away of the Belleville torrid drives on net being super-natural at times. He was given valuable protection by Stubge, burly Sutton defenseman, but by the time the defenseman had got the play carrying it, Harry Milroy, shifty Green Shirt centreman, whose ability to make plays stood out, and the steady hockey playing of Urschell on left wing coupled with Culverwell's sterling come-back on the offensive in the third stanza with his daring rushes added to the threats of the visitors. Carpentier, Brady and Schmidt played spotty hockey, however. Belleville had much the better of the offensive play during the night's play, both on the small Belleville ice surface, however, the locals will have to tone up considerably throughout, as the Green Shirts are pastmasters at the art of playing boilding-up hockey.

The Scoring

Less than 900 fans stood with bared heads as the Belleville Municipal Band sounded the strains of the National Anthem followed by Referee Bert Hedges immediately dropping the rubber. The ice was in splendid condition and lighted as fast throughout, although owing to the Sutton team playing a heavy defensive game for the first two periods the locals were unable to take full advantage of this asset. Milroy had first shot on net, when he tested Watt after gaining a loose puck in the Belleville zone, but without results. Murphy re-tested, but Burkhead drove a penalty for tripping Whitton, that Referee Hedges slap the correctional power play, without the delay of penalty. Although Belleville carried the puck continually Smith proved too good for them, successfully booted out 15 shots on net, while Watt handled but 7 for the period. There was no scoring registered. It was Belleville's turn to force with a decided edge on the play. The Redmen failed to clear the puck from their own zone, Murphy to Hickory to open the middle stamp, high sticks and slashing being the order of the day. Bill Jackson's line nearly scored, but a pile-up on top of Smith saw no real goal registered. On one occasion the referee moved its forces and gave Smith a busy session, but no scoring resulted although Tompkins, Clayton Jackson, Murphy, Whitton and St. Louis all took shots at the Sutton netminder as Watt beat Milroy, Stupe, Birchell, Schmidt and Carpenter all different interrals. With two minutes to play however, Schmidt and Brady forced Watt to make a save, but the puck rolled behind him to drop to the ice unnoticed by him and he remained there as the players skated around. Watt refused to touch the rubber until the whistle sounded for play-stoppage, Tompkins carried into the corner, passed out to C. Jackson, who in turn advanced to the rubber forward to Bill Jackson, who promptly shot the first goal of the night and put Belleville one up to open the final stanza.

The Hectic Third

Tompkins and W. Jackson combined to be thwarted by Smith and the Belleville attack was then seen moving four forward, when suddenly Burchell broke away, skated in on Watt and drove a fine Beverley aside to slip the rubber over to the left where the rolling puck peal Watt to upper right-hand corner for the tying goal. The Redmen then took score came, when Stupe broke away from the rubber forward to Bill Jackson, who promptly shot the first goal of the night and put Belleville one up to open the final stanza.

STILL HOLDING OUT

Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, is still having trouble with hold-outs. The "Iron Man" of baseball, Lou Gehrig, and Charlie "Red" Ruffing are still insisting their contracts be signed. Lou wants a contract for $40,000 for two years but the club says $35,000 for one year is fair. Ruffing is holding out for $18,000 but the club are only willing to pay $15,000. The star pitching arm, Johnny Murphy, star rookie last year was a stubborn hold-out this season, finally signed for $15,000 which is $2,500 less than he thought his services were worth.

The Scoring

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

It took a hectic and hair-raising a man to watch at all times, Carpenter, Brady and Culverwell always dangerous.

O—O—O

Of course the Green Shirts were on the defensive for 40 minutes last night, which made the going simply hard for the Redmen. When the Sutton squad fell forward to open up and carry the play on Thursday night, however, they may not find the Belleville rinks so easy to cope with. Doubtless a goodly following of Belleville fans will follow the Redmen to Sutton, which is only 30 miles north of Whitby, by highway.

O—O—O

Duke Smith's Belleville Yacht Club "Sailors" ran into a snag out at Tweed last night when the homesters won 9 to 2 in the first game of the Hastings county final play-offs. The Sailors could do nothing right, they say today, while the Tweed nines in the first series is the best two out of three with the second game slated for Madoc on Thursday night. If the present weather conditions continue the Sailors may be tempted to bring the third and deciding game to Belleville if they win at Madoc. Last night's defeat was only the second reverse the Sailors have suffered this season.

O—O—O

The R.C.A.F. hockey team must have been a much better hockey club than the Ottawa Senators, for, that is judging from the showing the Port Colborne Sailors made against them. The Senators did at last night when a one-all tie was played. Incidentally the Port Mines Club was heralded as 'tops' in the Allan Cup hunt.

O—O—O

Now that senior baseball has been definitely settled for and moved away in this city the boys are beginning to regret some of the many recent moves having been made by those allegedly connected with the game of late. They are still a few high class sportsmen left in Belleville, as a matter of fact plenty of them, and the men are ready and willing to get behind baseball and put it back where it rightfully belongs. The men referred to are those who were behind the game some years ago, when Belleville had a baseball team well to the front and we firmly hope and believe that day is not too far distant. Many baseball fans will regain its former status here, if not in 1938, well at least the following year. In the meantime we will have to be satisfied with senior league ball for one season at least.

Efforts to boost softball are the order of the day in Belleville now. "Red" Knott and Ollie Wadsworth, Jerry Knott and others sensing the lack of interest in baseball, are going to do the bit and endeavour to rejuvenate the "mushball" game locally. A meeting of all those interested are invited.

PERTH JUNIORS STILL IN WOODS

Renfrew Club May Protest Coach For Perth After Series

Renfrew, Ont., March 16.—(CP) —Gene Chalmard's Perth Juniors turned back Renfrew Monarchs 5-1 here last night in the first game of the Ottawa district finals.

Before the game started the Renfrew Club made known its intention of protesting the series. If a protest is made, Perth will be disqualified. Perth's coach president, said the Club was protesting on the ground Chalmard, a former professional player, was violating amateur rules in managing the Perth team from the bench.

Ferguson said Chalmard played pro hockey in 1933 and 1936 and has never been reinstated as an amateur and therefore was not in a capacity contrary to amateur rules. He also said the eligibility of two Perth players would be questioned, but he did not name them.

W. R. Elliott of Renfrew president of the Ottawa and District Amateur Athletic Association said he had not received any formal protest but expected one later.

Last night's match was the first of a two-game, total-goal series and the second game will be played Wednesday at Perth. The winners will meet Ottawa Rideau in their Memorial Cup playdowns.

Sports Roundup

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 16. —(AP)— Havana fans are boiling mad because Mr. Louis Cardinal came to town two years in succession without Dizzy Dean. Senor Adolfo Luque of the Giants, who understands the lingo, got a big kick out of it when he told what the boys and girls were saying, which was playing up the fact that Schmeling isn't returning the boycott. He signed his name 127 times for autograph hounds in Jimmy Kelly's Greenwich Village joint in New York the other night . . . Young Bob Feller must be slipping. Bob struck out but 15 batters in one of the three batters he pitched to in New Orleans Sunday.

Note to Pete Sarron, featherweight champ: they say Baer's manager, Los Angeles negro, who kayoed Max Schmeling in one round is a murder and that you had better watch out. . . . The Yanks have to cough up $15,000 to Ruffing if he come here from St. Pete to play the Reds today . . . In exactly 30 days, Tony Manero open champ, and Johnny Revolta have played 502 holes of golf. . . . King Levinsky is on his way to Finland (we hope not to fight). . . . Waltzmen at Lake Osceola here say if Shanky Hogan can't beat Dan Pepper Martin, they want no part of Mrs. Hogan's boy. . . . The Dodgers and Old Joes Raines of the Cardinals for the vacant coaching job. . . .

ALLAN CUP SURVIVORS

(By The Canadian Press)

When Ottawa Carsons decided to drop out of contention yesterday, the teams were left in playdowns for Canadian senior hockey laurels. Only last night failed to eliminate either. The Allan Cup field, cut to 11 teams in the east and five in the west, follows:

East — N.S.—Berwick; N.B., Moncton; Quebec—St. Jerome, Victoriaville, Quebec Aces, Hull Volants; Ontario—Smith's Falls, Buddery Tigers, Port Colborne, Toronto Goodyears and Dominions.

West — Ontario—Port William; Manitoba, — Winnipeg Packers; Saskatchewan—North Battleford; Alberta — Edmonton Dominions; B.C.—Nelson.

'CAPITOL PUNISHMENTS' HOLD SUDSMEN TO TIE

Led by New "Kewpie" Blaine, the praying goalkeeper, the "Capitol Punishments" from the Capitol Theatre, held the fast-traveling "Sudsmen" from the Sweet's Hotel to a three-all draw last night at the Arena. Free-Shot Schrieder and Joseph Hall were playing for the Maidens 10ck, with Lady-Killer, Ken Ketcheson and Jimmy Hall for the Foamers. Kewpie Blaine, who will go to Montreal for the Ladies' College team wore the knees out of three pairs of pants in his caterpillar act, but failed to be scored, the only thing to stop him being the fact that he remained on his own net in the nick of time.

Sudsmen—Goal, Ladykiller Lafferty; defence "Beer Pot; Three Goal" Lindsay; forwards Stitching Elliott; "Chalky" Parsons, "Rabbit" Oulhane.

DODDS KIDNEY PILLS

Sailors Surprise Talent by Holding Frood Mines to Tie In First Game of Playdowns

Games on Monday Night Fail to Eliminate Any of Contenders

COPPER CLIFF WINS

Junior Situation Clearer as Good Teams Show Real Class

By The Canadian Press

Observers admitted today they'd have to "await developments" before trying to select a Canadian senior hockey championship team. A flock of close scores last night failed to eliminate a single contender and the field looked as well-balanced as at any time in the season.

A 1-1 tie for Port Colborne and Sudbury, Winnipg's 5-3 victory over Fort William and Stratford's 3-1 win against Nelson's Columbus champions left little room to pick favorites. Toronto Goodyears beat Toronto Dominions 8-1 but the result only tied their best-of-five series at two games each.

Junior scores were more significant. Copper Cliff crushed Timmins 11-3 in winning the Northern Ontario title and Amherst defeated Chatham Maroons by a close margin in the first of Maritime final Montreal Ramblers and Ottawa Alberta crown with a 3-1 triumph over Intercollegiate.

Developments off the ice helped clear the air. The Montreal senior group announced that it would not be represented in Allan Cup playdowns if final series ended at Calgary, but last night directors of Quebec Aces, group winners, decided to meet tonight on the problem and club president Jack Laframboise said "an agreement reached" with President Cecil Duncan of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Ottawa Fishers decided to drop out of playdowns and Hull Volants and Smith's Falls were left battling in Ottawa district finals. They tied 1-1 in the opener and will conclude the total goals round at Ottawa tonight.

Sailors Have Edge

Because they will be playing at home, Port Colborne Sailors will be slight favorites to win game and round when they collide with Sudbury Tigers again Thursday. The Tars secured in the second period of last night's game and tried to hold on with defensive hockey but Jim Dewey, former Moose Jaw star, tied the count for Sudbury on a pass from Bingo Kamigaan. The round winner will meet Toronto's victor.

The Tigers had a tough last night when Goodyears whipped Dominions. He scored three of his team's six goals.

Winnipeg Rangers will be playing at Port William again Wednesday and if a third game is necessary it will be played Saturday on the lakehead city. Packers built up a 3-2 lead last night Port William came back in the last 13 minutes to all but level the score. Dunky Skinner got three of Winnipeg's goals.

Edmonton Dominions tallied twice in the last period to carve their margin over Nelson Maple Leafs, who are representing Kootenay Dynamiters, 1936 Allan Cup winners, in playdowns. The team played to a 1-1 draw in the opener of the best of three series at Trail Saturday and the third contest is to be played at Edmonton, as was last night's.

Copper Cliff Jrs. Smart

Early in the season Copper Cliff Redmen stamped themselves as favorites for the Memorial Junior Cup, Dominion junior trophy. Lately their showings have been disappointing, however, and reached a new low when Redmen could gain only a 2-2 advantage over Timmins in the first game of N.O.H.A. finals. But playing on Timmins ice last night the big red team looked like a world-beater, scoring three times in the second period and six in the third.

Copper Cliff will play the successful team in a round which involves Stratford and Toronto St. Michael's College. Stratford holds a two-one edge in games in the best of five series and will be at home tonight.

Amherst won the Maritimes junior championship last year and, with just about the same team, became an overwhelming favorite by licking Charlottetown last night. Portage La Prairie made its bid for the Manitoba junior title more pronounced by trouncing Winnipeg Monarchs 7-3 in the first clash of their best of three series. The successful club will face St. Boniface in provincial finals.

Perth drubbed Renfrew 8-1 in the first game of a total goals playoff, the team right to meet Ottawa Rideaus in district junior finals. Both clubs were previously beaten in Pembroke Little Lumber Kings but Pembroke was disqualified for using an ineligible man.

BAER TELLS WORLD HE CAN LICK FARR

London, March 16.—(AP)—Maxie Baer decided today he could defeat Jarvis Farr, new British heavyweight champion of Great Britain and the Empire, in his stride April 15 and then met Germany's Walter Neusel.

"I guess I ain't worrying," said Baer last night at the ringside when Farr won a 15-round decision over Ben Foord, South African who had held the Empire title.

Baer made statements to the press, to friends and acquaintances and everybody within hearing and sight. "Farr can't lick me," he said. "He doesn't believe Farr can hit very hard anyway.

With a month to train before he meets Neusel, Baer, plans to see the high spots and hot spots of London for a few days before that new haircut he got in Hollywood gets slightly flighty grows off.

Baer's opinion was backed up by "The sporting life", which said the contest was "one of the poorest championship fights staged in this country for a long time."

Joe McCarthy is Standing Pat With His New York Yankees

(By Paul Mickelson)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16.—(AP)—Joe McCarthy is standing pat with his New York Yankees.

The Powerhouse Club that tore the American League apart, smashed out 183 home runs, scored 995 runs and walloped pitching with the best of any by 1-3 games by 1936 is good enough in the shrewd McCarthy book.

Except for a battle between Alvin Powell, Myril Hoag and Ernie Koy, a big Rookie up from the Newark Farm, everything every position on the world's championship team appears to be climbed by the boys years to be climbed by the boys who shadowed records last season. McCarthy is in the market for good pitchers, a chance at that Hoag or old staff, best in the League on an earned run basis in '36, will do all the fixing.

Personally, I believe the Yankees look too good to be true on paper. They should win the flag again but the trouble is last year's dippiness don't count.

Searching for an Achilles Heel on the ball club, the spotlight falls on 23-year-old Tony Lazzeri, who operates at second base.

Hopeful of Lazzeri

Tony surprised everyone by lasting the entire 1936 season but whether he can go through another is probably the only question that confronts the Yankees. Without Tony working second, supplying advice and steadying the infield, the have trouble. Right now, Tony looks like he's good for another full three years at least and McCarthy certainly hopes so.

No one is figuring without first baseman Lou Gehrig and Pitcher Red Ruffing.

The two holdout artists are sure to line up by the time the pennants race opens, giving the Yankees the same lineup that started the final World Series game—Dickey, c; Rolfe, 3b; Gehrig, 1b; DiMaggio, cf; Henrich, rf; Selkirk rf; Powell, lf; and Lazzeri 2b.

Four Starting Pitchers

Lefty Gomez, Ruffing, Monte Pearson and Johnny Murphy, a right hander who looks better every day, shape up as the starting pitchers with Pat Malone, Bump Hadley, and Johnny Broaca set as spot pitchers. Kenny Wicker and Vito Tamulis are waging a spirited duel for a mound job and may do. Frank Makosky and Ad Liska, who won 17 for Oakland, has a good fast ball and is likely to be used as a "rally buster".

Though the infield is set with Don Heffner and John Sala-zar as Utility men, and the centre and right field jobs are cinched by the sensational DiMaggio and Selkirk the battle for leftfield may be a great one. Hoag was playing the best ball of his career last summer until he bumped into DiMaggio and suffered a skull concussion.

Koy is due for little this year and is sure to give Powell a run., Koy probably will lose out and be shipped to the Kansas City farm.

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

OLD and NEW

By George H. Carver.

Barrie O.H.A. juniors, who were eliminated last night by the Peterborough Colts waxed more or less hostile the other night following the brawl in the Lyttloch Town, at least so the Peterboro story goes . . . It appears the visitors did not take the five-goal deficit any too good-heartedly, and tried to clear things up in the Colts own corral . . . Following the game, the Barrytics threw their clothes in a taxi and ordered them to be taken to the station . . . Arriving there they refused to pay the driver the fare of four bits . . . But the driver, a wily cuss, turned his cab around and snorted back to the Arena with the sticks followed by a dozen or so enraged Barrytes.

Two up and one to go . . . The Redmen after one of the weirdish flourishes on a hockey surface ever seen in Belleville and which saw them flash to life in a torrid third period to completely take command of the situation, downed the Sutton senilelle conquerors of the Crawenhurst potential champions, last night, by a 4-2 score, which gives them a two-goal margin to take back to the village nestling on the shores of Lake Simcoe. . . . And a certain Mr. Smith, who is said to be looked like an ad for a tire corporation. . . . No foolin' this Sutton goalie stood out like a sore thumb among the Hallie Belasele's barrem. . . .

Added materially by the penalties, which did not . . . They rammed in a couple of markers which had the fans hanging over the edge, to pot them one up . . . Then Speedy St. Louis, in a solo drive whipped a lightning shot, which not only eluded the goalkeeper, but the eye of the goal judge, to plough its way through the net for the final score. . . . That was the way it happened so fast, that they escaped the eyes of everyone but Bert Hedges, the bird, who tooted the whistle for the boys . . . He did not hesitate a minute . . . "It went THROUGH the net," he said . . . "I saw it," he said . . . And that was

Our selections: the best man on the ice, Smith, the Sutton goalkeeper . . . the best line: Joe Jackson and Tomkins . . . the most graceful swandives, Smith of Sutton. . . . the most awkward ones, Wait of the Redmen . . . The pick of the visitors: Milroy, their curly-haired centre-player. . . . Most improved player: Carl Morgan of the Reds. . . . part of the reason for the Sutton defeat, the penalties . . . The guy with his feelings hurt the most . . . Trainer Whitton . . . The other part of the reason for the Sutton defeat, the sudden clicking of the Red front lines in that third period . . . Two up and one to go . . . And so into the night. . . .

Even newspaper men have to sleep . . . Believe it or not. . . .

NEW RULES HELP TO KEEP INTEREST AT FEVER PITCH

Teams Try to Better Points in Order to Have Choice

SEASON ENDS SUNDAY

Leafs Have to Play Bruins-Canadiens And Detroit This Week

(By A. E. Pulford)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Time was when tired hockey workmen practically slept through the last few games of the National Hockey League season. Once they had made sure of playoff places there was a letdown and a general air of indifference. It did little to draw customers into the stadia.

But there will be no dozing this week even though the playoff setup is practically fixed and the schedule ends next Sunday. The Maple Leafs, always keeping one eye on the gate, made sure of that last fall, when they drew standing room only.

The case of New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs is typical. Rangers can't possibly do better than finish third in the American Division and Leafs are contenting themselves with the same spot in the Canadian section. But there is still something for them to battle over.

Rangers have 43 points, one more than Leafs, and if they retain that margin they will have the privilege of saying where the first game of their playoff series with Leafs shall take place. Of course, they would name Toronto and play the second and third games in New York.

Something to Play For

The same thing applies to Montreal Maroons and Boston Bruins. Maroons still have a chance to finish first in the Canadian section, but it is likely they will be runners-up and Bruins have taken that spot in the American section. Boston now have a two-point advantage over the Montrealers and if they finish that way will start their series in Montreal.

A very neat little scheme to keep fan interest piping hot until the last scheduled game. There will be an agonizing wait to see how the west it looks.

Three games are down for decision. Toronto playing in Boston, Canadiens and Bruins become rivals in Montreal and Rangers clashing with Black Hawks in Chicago.

Apart from Ford Line for first place, the old Montreal rivals will be fighting for the Kenaston Cup, emblematic of the Montreal Championship. Maroons have a 3-2-0 advantage in games won and two ot their meetings ended in ties.

Toronto-Boston games on their games this season with a win to-night but their club record will be in keeping ahead of Rangers. The New Yorkers are tied with Hawks on the season.

CALF BORN WITH 2 HEADS AND 2 TAILS BUT DIES

Goderich, Mar. 16 (CP)—A Holstein calf with two heads and two tails was born at the dairy farm of William Long, near here, yesterday. It lived but a short time.

Calves with two perfectly formed heads are rare—about one in 1,500—but this is the first instance of a calf with two tails of equal length to come to the notice of the attending veterinarian.

The calf was otherwise normal in nearly every respect, with four legs, one body and one set of reproductive organs, it was announced. One of the calf's heads showed signs of life for some minutes.

Mr. Long visited a taxidermist with a view to having the freak animal stuffed and mounted.

QUEBEC ACES TO GIVE STATEMENT

Possibility Squad Will Remain in Allan Cup Playdowns

Quebec, March 16 (CP)—Amid a series of statements and counter statements directors of Quebec Aces will meet tonight to consider the question of the senior provincial champions' participation in Allan Cup playdowns.

(At Ottawa early today Duncan said he had been in communication with Aces and there was every possibility they would continue in cup playdowns).

Duncan had demanded a clearcut statement from Aces whether or not they would continue in the Allan Cup hunt.

In identical George Slater, President of the senior group, repeated there having to play first the Maritime champions and, if successful, the Ottawa district winners while Ontario "is sitting pretty."

MARKET COMMENT

We appear to be in a bull market, as last week's reaction did not carry as far as many quarters had anticipated. It is heartening to note that a good investment buying make its appearance on all sizeable setbacks in the market, apparently not only from local quarters but from London and New York as well.

The shares of Canadian Pacific are being favored in many quarters for two reasons. First, the more promising earnings outlook for the current year, second, the large appreciation that has developed in the trading status of Consolidated Smelters shares, foreign investors looking for a representative Canadian issue are partial to C.P.R.

"Nickel" Earns $2.39 a Common Share in 1936

The report of The International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, for the year ended December 31, 1936, which was mailed yesterday to shareholders, shows a net profit of $36,865,336.11 after all charges including provision of $8,446,629.32 for taxes, $7,81.6,731.09 for depreciation, depletion and other purposes, compared with net profit for 1935 was $26,086,-527.47.

After disbursement of $1,935,-886.75 for preferred dividends there remained $24,931,527.36, equal to $2.39 per share on the 14,584,026 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with $1.65 per share in 1935.

The earned surplus rose from $44,594,647.31 as of December 31, 1935 to $50,890,142.56 as of December 31, 1936. Cash increased from $30,471,-311.22 to $44,871,66.03 during the same period.

The annual report also gives the figures for the fourth quarter of 1936, when a net profit of $6,856,-446.36 was earned as compared with $6,973,105.82 in the third quarter, following far all four quarters show that the company's earnings available for common stock dividends were 54 cents, 59 cents, 62 cents and 54 cents per share, respectively.

Canada Wire & Cable Company Ltd.

Canada Wire & Cable Company Limited showed earnings of $13.18 a share on the preferred stock in its annual statement issued and submitted a resumption in dividend payments at a substantial rate. Payments of $2.25 on October 15, 1936, $1.50 on September 23rd, 1936, and $1.75 on March 20th, 1936, reduce arrears to $12.87. Apparently it is the intention of the management to eliminate this obligation quickly. Cash position is ample. Canada Wire & Cable is a subsidiary of Noranda Mines and the outlook is such that the parent company will soon be deriving a revenue on their holdings in this concern.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, March 16.—(CP)— The mining list, Toronto Exchange, turned definitely higher at noon and accumulated gains in nearly all sections during the early afternoon. Golds were prominent in the action and substantial gains were shown by O'Brien, Buffalo-Ankerite, Little Long Lac, Macassa, Hollinger, Wright-Hargreaves, Kerr-Addison, Kirkland Lake, Kerr-Addison, Lake Shore, Teck-Hughes, Sherritt Gordon and Sudbury Basin.

Base metals and Pacific Coast, Falconbridge, Hudson Bay and Sherritt were lower in quiet trading.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Mar. 18 (CP)—The industrial share section witnessed slow but steady gains in the early afternoon, with Bruck Silvers, Dominion Steel and Coal B, Dominion Tar, Dominion Textile, Hollinger-Seagrams, Walkers Common, Cypsum and Massey-Harris Common stood out in the action. Foods and Utilities posted a mixture of losses and gains and the oils were steady to strong.

The big metals, nickel and smelters were unchanged to slightly lower and Brazilian, Ford "A" and C. P. R. were steady.

WALL STREET

New York, March 16—(AP)—Rallying tendencies appeared in today's market and many of the leaders retrieved fractions to 2 points of their recent losses.

Dealings were still plentiful in the boardrooms, however, and an assortment of issues gave ground under profit selling. Dealings, fast at the start, slowed later and eased off from the hour the pace dragged.

In the Canadian division, Distillers Corp-Seagrams, Dome Mines, Canadian Pacific, International Nickel, and Hiram Walker were steady to fractions higher. Dominion government bonds held quiet and unchanged. Canadian dollars were unchanged at 100.06 1-4 cents. On the curb, Lake Shore mines was inactive.

On top during the most of the session were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Gulf States Steel, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio and Pullman.

Good lambs, including four carloads from Manitoba, were priced at $10 Common to medium lambs ranged from $7.75 to $9. Sheep brought $4 to $4.50 with some good light ewes as high as $6.

Modern Chemistry is Explained to Club

"We have no idea" said Mr. Davidson of the Belleville Club, in the address of welcome at Men's Club last night at their weekly supper, "how long we may have the same existence. Possibly a number of electrons may be flying around somewhere in the air came in contact with each other and so formed a start. The world may continue and so may ours achieved. We don't know what life is or even what death is. Whether we know there is a God but we don't know what He is or can say."

Mr. Davidson in his address told the Club that most of the early speculations in chemistry were based on basic metals to try to turn them into gold and that the Club was now in an age when they wrote down what they thought could not be so, today, benefit by them. We have these great timbers making sure buildings, and the great oxygen, phosphorus and many other important things.

"However, modern chemistry as we know it today is a science hardly until 1800, since that time chemistry has become one of the greatest sciences we have. A chemist is primarily a thinker who has a theory and tries to create something new or to find out why certain actions or reactions occur in place.

Mr. Davidson's address was one of interest and educational value. Introduced by Dawson Boyd, Mr. Davidson was thanked by Colby Scott.

The Y's Men's Club celebrated their twelfth anniversary, last night. Congratulations were extended by many accomplishments by Newton Thompson, Past International President. Mr. Thompson told the Belleville Y's Men will journey to Kingston to help celebrate the fourth Y's Men's Club celebrate their anniversary at Y's Men's Club.

The meal was supplied each member with a bottle of chocolate milk for the meal, last night.

HUGE DEFENCE PLANS STIR CHURCHMEN

London, Mar. 16 (CP)—Britain's huge defence program has created a new problem, apart from sections of the Anglican Hierarchy.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, has called upon the Church of England to provide 500,000 men for rearmament forebodes both the present bankruptcy of our civilization and the future bankruptcy of our economic life."

The Archbishop's pronouncement in the Review, edited by Rt. Rev. Albert Peel, Nonconformist leader.

"Where will this race in armaments end and whither will it lead us?" he asks. Rev. Dr. R. J. Bell, Bishop of Chichester.

Would Solve Problem Marrying Wealthy Woman

Oshawa, Ont., March 15—(CP)— John O'Brien, 23, said he came from Sault Ste. Marie and that he was 80 years of age promised the court he'd give up trying to find future by marrying a woman with money.

Charged with intoxication, O'Brien told Magistrate F. B. Ebbs: "Give me a chance and I'll never come back . . . I'll marry a woman with money."

"You're starting pretty late in life, aren't you?" asked the Magistrate.

Fifty dollars and costs or 30 days, the court, O'Brien took the jail term.

Record Shipments Of Poultry to U. K.

Ten Thousand Boxes Exported From Canada During Last Week

Montreal, March 16—Ten thousand cases of cheese, poultry amounting to 500,000 pounds, were shipped from Canada to the British market last week, the federal department of Agriculture announced yesterday. This was the largest shipment of poultry that has ever been made in one week.

From January 1 to March 12, Canadian export poultry amounted to Britain totalled 37,750 boxes, or about 1,777,500 pounds, compared with 18,668 boxes, or approximately 822,400 pounds, in the corresponding period of 1936.

According to advice received from W. A. Wilson, Canadian animal products trade commissioner in London, there is active inquiry for Canadian chickens on the British market.

Local produce markets generally were steady and quiet. Receipts were 681 cases of eggs, 15 boxes of butter and 1 box of cheese. Sales on the Canadian Commodity Exchange were 100 boxes of butter at 34c, 1,000 dozen eggs at 26 .5-8c, while Quebec buyers inspection was quoted 25 3-8c to 26 3-4c. On the open market, butter in carlots of L.c.l. lots was again quoted 26 to 26 1-2c. Small lots in bags of 56 grade were quoted by jobbers at 26 1-2c for large solids and 27c to 27 1-2c for prints.

Graded shipments of eggs in carlots, f.o.b. Montreal basis, were quoted 22c for A-large, 20c for A-medium and 18c for A-pullet. Wholesale offerings of these levels were posted at 26c for A-extras, 25c for A-firsts, 24c for A-seconds and 22c for A-pullets were at 18 1-2c.

Duke Not to Receive Gov't. Allowance

London, March 16.—(AP)—The British Government will not pay an allowance to the Duke of Windsor, Parliament was informed today as civil list message disclosed today.

Indeed, Edward VIII, former King, his own pocket, will make an allowance to former King Edward VIII.

There is no mention of the Duke of Windsor in the message presented in the House of Commons. It is the first message to Parliament on hereditary revenues from the Duchy of Lancaster, which is vested in reigning monarch.

The Commons make provision for members of the Royal family.

Utilities Commission Helps Cut Tax Rate

Kingston, Ont., Mar. 16 (CP)— The local Public Utilities Commission, at its meeting Monday night, decided to give the city the entire surplus on the Waterworks Department for 1936, amounting to $10,213.11, which, with the reduction turned over $10,213 in profits to the city, to assist in lowering the tax rate.

The amounts given by the Commission to the city are considered one mill on the taxation, which the city is expected to be made by the council.

Plan Huge Air Base At Tacoma, Wash.

Washington, March 16—(CP)— Plans for a huge air base at Tacoma, Wash., of the largest military air base on the Pacific coast at a longstanding estimated cost of $2,000,000 were under consideration of United States government officials.

When completed, the establishment would require a permanent personnel of 1,000 officers and enlisted men. At Fort Lewis, separated by only 350 acres from the proposed base, there are stationed units another force of 2,000 men.

Curves and Hills Sanded Early Today

No serious crime nor major accidents marred the holiday traffic during the past 24 hours, although the continued snowfall made motoring difficult, however. The highways on curves and hills were kept reasonably safe by sanding and snow ploughing normally," stated Inspector Hanson Ervine at noon.

One loss inebriate, who embarrassed the police by his condition a day when released, was picked up on a charge of intoxication on Monday morning. He was fined and will be dealt with at a subsequent court.

Eight weary knights of the road have been picked up during the past fourteen hours and appeared at the police station in quest of a night's lodging.

20 TRENTON MEN TO WORK ON HIGHWAY

Twenty men on the unemployed and relief rolls of Trenton this morning when they were selected for jobs on the highway between Trenton and Belleville exploded at the Deseronto Mine.

Witnesses said the miner was emptying a barrel of gasoline into another container and was using compressed air to start the flow. Pressure of the air is believed to have been so great it exploded the barrel and caused a blast which shook the property for considerable distance.

An inquest will be conducted by Dr. Hanley, Coroner, Montgomery date to be set later.

CORONATION LURE FOR BIG TRADING

Continental Cities Seek Proportion of This Business

London, March 16 (CP)—Continental cities are showing an increasing awareness of the immense amount of business that is going to flow into Great Britain as a result of the coronation. And they are planning their tourist advertising and publicity with an eye to their profit, a proportion of this business their own way.

Railway fares have been reduced and prominent holiday resorts are boasting that celebrations immediately after or before the coronation. The International Exposition in Paris was fixed three years ago for 1937 but the opening date has been altered to synchronize with the coronation. Germany, Switzerland, Italy and indeed all countries on the tourist's map are eagerly looking for a great summer season. Advertising, its reduced rail fares, special exchange consideration and brilliant festivals.

Continental Craftiness

Many well-known travel agencies and hotel-keepers are noting this keen interest and are playing on these feelings. Entertainment companies and merchants are suggesting a "coronation" season for the coronation period.

Behind the subject The Daily Express reports: "Apart from Ascot, Henley, Lord's, Wimbledon, the Aldershot tatoo and the Royal tournament, no special attractions to make coronation visitors to prolong their stay and spend their money in this country have been organized and the prospects are causing some anxiety."

AUDIENCE TAKES IMAGINARY TRIP

Mrs. W. N. Ponton Addresses Home And School Club on Bulgaria

The regular meeting of the King George Home and School Club was held in the Public Library on Friday afternoon, March 12th, at 3.30, with the President in the chair, presiding. After routine business a discussion was held regarding the sending of delegates to the convention of Provincial Home and School Associations at Ottawa. The president has been nominated for the office of vice-president in the provincial organization it was decided to send two delegates. Their attendance award was won by Miss Ruth Bunkey and Mrs. Bunkey then announced her committees for the year.

Committees Named

Executive Committee — Mrs. Ponton, Mrs. Ashley, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. H. Quinsey, Mrs. Ed. Quinsey, Mrs. Bunkey, Mrs. R. Smith, Mrs. J. Scott, Mrs. H. Little, Miss Dorothy Boyle and Mrs. Wilson.

Social Committee—Mrs. P. Mc-Mullen, Convener, Mrs. Ashley, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. W. Johns.

Visiting Committee — Mrs. S. Turner, Mrs. Asselstine.

Welfare Committee—Mrs. C. Coleman, convener, Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. H. Quinsey, Mrs. S. Coon, Mrs. Bunkey.

Program Committee—Miss Dorothy Boyle, convener, Mrs. G. A. Stewart, Mrs. A. Hilchon, Mrs. J. Scott, Mrs. H. Harrison.

Health Committee—Mrs. S. Turner and Mrs. MacPherson.

Press Committee—Mrs. Asselstine, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Nerney.

Mrs. Ponton Takes

Mrs. W. N. Ponton, the guest speaker, was introduced by the president. Before beginning her topic she appealed to the parents to ask help from the club in solving their problems in child training, as the club possesses a competent psychologist.

Mrs. Ponton then in her own inimitable way took her hearers in imagination to the land of the Balkans. She gave splendid word pictures of the highlights of the voyage, Gibraltar, the Rock of Monaco, and Constantinople at dawn. Difficulties with the customs officials were the start. Visas for certain countries were practically impossible to obtain, accommodation poor and food very hard to get, even at exorbitant prices.

Modes of Living.

Before the Balkan travelogue was finished, all had a greater insight into the history, the culture and manner of living of some of the Balkan States. By her humor and sympathetic insight into the present felt the breath of adventure in the journey and almost wandered in imagination on foot through the mountain passes of the humdrum life of the ordinary small town mother.

On conclusion of the Club was tendered Mrs. Ponton on the conclusion of her address. Refreshments were served and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

MINER DIES AFTER EXPLOSION

Deseronto, Ont., March 16 (CP)— Vincenzo De Severie, 46 year old miner, died early today from injuries received in a blast at the Deseronto Mine.

Witnesses said the miner was emptying a barrel of gasoline into another container and was using compressed air to start the flow. Pressure of the air is believed to have been so great it exploded the barrel and caused a blast which shook the property for considerable distance.

THREE ROLL-CALL DIVISIONS MADE

Opposition Forced to Vote With Gov't on Subsidy Bill

Toronto, March 16 (CP)—The budget debate reforms in the Legislature this afternoon. There will be no night sessions. But there was last night, Premier Hepburn having announced his intention to drive the House at top speed to assure prosperities before Easter.

Seldom has so much legislation been passed in principle and new legislation introduced as was the case yesterday. But withal, the House had time for three roll-call divisions, two forced by the Conservative opposition and one forced by the Premier himself when the opposition didn't want it.

First two divisions were on Premier Hepburn's decision to oppose motions of motion for returns concerning Civil Service salaries and appointments. The opposition didn't want the information for any useful purpose, he contended. The motions were defeated by votes of 44 to 15 and 47 to 15.

Premier Hepburn's conservative house leader, made some remarks which the Premier interpreted as opposition to the bill granting every Ontario municipality a one-mill subsidy to help raise relief costs. Premier Hepburn insisted he wasn't opposing the bill, but the opposition leader was "so much more money" for municipalities to raise relief.

Opposition Gives Support

"Now you're on the spot," the Premier told the opposition leader as he forced a division. But the opposition leader's conservative followers voted with the government. The bill was approved 47 to 15 on the second reading. It was the first time in many moons there had been a unanimous vote on a roll-call division.

The House had a non-party debate on a bill brought in by James Allan (C.C.F., Winnipeg, Wpg.), to eliminate the 35-mile-an-hour speed limit on Ontario Highways and substitute a "safe driving" provision. The bill was given second reading and sent to the Municipal Law Committee.

Premier Hepburn and Mr. Henry agreed second reading was not to be construed as endorsation of the principle. Premier Hepburn was instructed to call police officers and municipal officials concerning the s decision.

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, opposed the bill. So did Mr. Henry. Premier Hepburn said his mind was open.

The House gave second reading to a bill which would make teachers for power recently entered into between the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the Ottawa Valley Power Co.

An important piece of legislation approved on second reading yesterday was the Milk Industry Amendment Act. It was almost an exact duplicate of the Dominion Federal Natural Products Marketing Act, which gives Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, but would apply only to Ontario.

RECONCILIATION IN RAILWAY STRIKE IS POSSIBLE SAYS ROGERS

Montreal, Mar. 16 (CP) — Two days away from a momentous meeting on a possible general strike vote, conciliation hopefuls had before them today Labor Minister Rogers' statement that hope for a "just and peaceable" settlement of the wage dispute with the railways.

The minister's bid for reconciliation, the possible voiced yesterday in a Canadian Club address, came as the railway unions were streaming into Montreal from coast to coast. Their spokesmen said that was expected to determine whether or not they would call out their 117,000 members on the first Monday next.

It was necessary to speak cautiously, Mr. Rogers said, if he trusted there would be "a recognition of the fact that even the country at large is a just and peaceable settlement of this dispute and the avoidance of an interruption of trains . . ."

Workers Unanimous.

As the union executives declared 117,000 ballots on the 20 per cent wage increase demand, there were seven almost unanimous in favor of a walkout unless the railways met the demand for collective recognition of the Railway Conciliation Board's award.

Majority report of the board which has been considering the demand of the men for return of 10 per cent. cuts, the last reduction, of the depression days, is three per cents. This the railways have agreed to.

Before meeting for the general meeting Thursday, the officers of the railway unions met with the informal meetings in privacy. Howard Hyde, president of the Brotherhood's General Conference Committee, was back after Ottawa conferences with Mr. Rogers and Labor, but he had nothing to say on the meeting with the railroads reported to have been effected in the capital.

DAILY SHORT STORY

When Lost is Found

By Cordelia Bond

"Come in here Frank" said Mrs. Aitken to her son as she opened the door of her private sitting room, and when the young man had complied and closed the door the pretty little white-haired lady burst into tears.

Frank knelt beside her with scarcely concealed impatience. "What has happened, mother?" he asked.

"My gold thimble has disappeared—the one with the sapphires—I know you are going to make some joke about losing the thimble, but this is serious, dear, because your father gave it to me—and it involves the girl."

"What girl?"

"Miss Lawson, that pretty child who comes in to read to me every day, and write my letters and keep my chaotic book straight! She was showing me how to do a new kind of embroidery and I gave her my thimble to wear—I have not seen it since."

"When was that?"

"Last week—and to make matters worse, the girl has not been here since that day. I cannot find her address, although I called up Teresa Storey, who sent her to me."

"I have never met the girl, but here goes for a test of my superior knowledge, motherkins!"

He kissed her tenderly and went out in the speedy little car which stood at the curbstone. He called first on Mrs. Storey, a large and rosy widow who insisted upon taking his call as a personal compliment to her charms. She was reluctant to talk about Viola Lawson.

"Your mother called me up about Viola," said Mrs. Storey primly, "I cannot remember where the girl lives. She had had a sorrowful life indeed, and evidently had known better days. I felt compelled to give the position to a penniless little cousin of mine, and so I let Viola go to your mother. Is anything the matter?"

"Nothing serious, evaded Frank, "she hadn't been in for ten days and we thought she might be ill".

"I'll ask the nursery governess, Hilda Nelson. When Teresa returned, she bore a card on which Miss Nelson had scribbled a few lines: "Some number on Beaver Street—I forget the widow's name—I'll give it to Frank."

Presently Frank found himself in the little gray car threading a street of small cottages, all built of flimsy materials and, in spite of their newness, bearing a look of stability. At the end of the street, a tiny old-fashioned house left over from another century was perched on a slope above the others. Frank left his car below and walked up a narrow lane, through a garden of old-fashioned flowers, trees, beehives and White Leghorn chickens, to a vine-hung front porch. Response ringing at the bell brought at last a neat little old lady who was so afraid that Frank could not make her understand his errand. At last a faint, sweet voice came from another room.

"Please come in here," it said: "Granny is deaf and cannot hear."

The young man opened the door into a delightful living room, where on a sagging old couch before the fire he found a girl, wan and bigeyed, with soft brown curls tumbling into her nervelous eyes. She was racked with a terrible cough, and before she could speak Granny gave her a spoonful of medicine. As the old lady put the cup back on the table she peered into it suspiciously. "It could not get any low" she said in the unconscious, by loud voice of the very deaf. "And where the nest's coming from I—" Remembering Frank, she put a finger on her lip and hurried out of the room. The girl's face was flushed with fever, and Frank felt was a palpitating breath that Frank did not like. He told her to rest.

"Oh, how kind of Mrs. Aitken to send you—I could not get any message to her—Granny is feeble and we are not well known here—Dr. Gray has had only the boy I see here but—"

"Have you a good doctor?" he asked abruptly.

"Granny is my doctor—she has home remedies—always helps me." The girl's voice died out as she fell asleep.

Frank went out into the kitchen and communicated with Granny by means of pencil and paper. He was anxious about the sick girl that he quite forgot his original errand, and by the time he had telephoned for his own physician and a trained nurse and brought a carload of necessities and luxuries to fill the empty larder, had ordered ice and fruit and flowers, it was dusk and he looked younger and happier than if he had played a round of golf. But there was latent anxiety in his eyes as he described the condition of the sick girl.

"I shall take her South with me as soon as she is able to go" exclaimed his mother. "I am going to Virginia again and the change will do the child good—and, oh, Frank, I found my thimble!"

Frank stared.

"Right in my workbag, where the child had put it. There was a little hole in the lining and it slipped between the layers of silk. I shall look more thoroughly next time."

Frank smiled sheepishly. "Do you know, mother," he confided, "I believe I am in love. I handed the thimble for you I discovered a wife for myself."

And Mrs. Isham gave Viola the gold thimble for an engagement present.

ROBERT S. WHITE OLDEST IN HOUSE

Celebrates 81st Birthday in His Hotel Room With Cold

Ottawa, March 15 (CP)—Robert S. White, Conservative House member for St. Antoine-Westmount who has known every Prime Minister since Confederation, today celebrated his 81st birthday anniversary with a cold.

"Bob" White, oldest man in the House of Commons, was first elected in 1896, but he had sat in the House since 1962 as a press gallery reporter. He represented Cardwell, Ont., constituency till 1896 when he was appointed Collector of Customs for the Port of Montreal a position he held for 21 years before re-entering politics.

Native of Peterborough, where his father, Hon. Thos. White, founded The Peterborough Review, Mr. White went to The Montreal Gazette as a cub reporter in 1874, seven years after Confederation.

Sent Maid By Air

When Mr. White was first elected he took the seat held for the previous 4 years by his father, Minister of the Interior in Sir John A. Macdonald's Cabinet. Between them they held that Commons constituency for 10 years by his father, Minister of the Interior in Montreal.

After the general during which he was Montreal Customs Collector and editor-builder of The Montreal Gazette, Mr. White returned to the House of Commons for his present constituency. He has been back 11 years.

When he retired from his Customs post Montreal citizens presented him with a purse of $21,000, or $1,000 for each year he held it.

Mr. White became ill last Thursday and was sent to bed at his home. He had the grippe and a high temperature but his physician today reported him cheerful and recovering rapidly.

WOMAN WILLINGLY SLIPS INTO COMA

Los Angeles, March 15 (AP) — Helen Wills Love convicted husband slayer who boasted "I can foster myself die whenever I want to," began the fourth day of a strange sleep today, insensible to pain or sound.

For a second time, her translation condition prevented her from being taken to court for sentencing. Her conviction carries a penalty of from seven years to life imprisonment.

The 31-year-old woman was convicted of slaying Harry A. Love, last New Year's Eve at a Beach Club when he went with his socially prominent mother.

Since she slipped into the coma last Thursday night, all organic activity of her body have ceased, aside from breathing and blood circulation.

Ammonia fumes and pin pricks, usually of avail in "sham" cases, have failed to arouse her.

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Jane could not believe Prince Sborov's charge that Brown or Tibbs had murdered the princess. She looked questionably at the valet.
"Well, Mikady, Mr. Brown did suggest that I 'bump her off'," Tibbs admitted; "but it was only by way of being a joke."

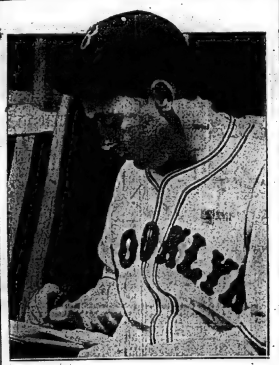
BLIND WAR VETERAN'S WIFE ADMITTED TO U.S.

Blind Roy Tessier, world war veteran, shown as he reached Boston, after he and his wife finally were allowed to return to their home from Montreal, through a labor department ruling. Mrs. Tessier and her son, Arthur, who was alone at the Tessier home while his parents were away, are shown looking on happily. Customs officials at Newport, Vt., had refused Tessier re-entry to America since last September on grounds he entered the country illegally in 1911. The Tessiers had visited friends in Montreal.

TRIES TO DIE BY WILL POWER

Only a few hours after she had asserted that she could induce her death by sheer force of will, Mrs. Helen Wills Love, convicted for the slaying of her husband on New Year's Eve, was found in a death-like trance in her cell in Los Angeles jail. Mrs. Love is pictured in that trance in this Central Press Soundphoto. Nurse Esther Neiman is seen taking Mrs. Love's pulse.

KITCHENER, ONTARIO, TAXI DRIVER SLAIN IN "MYSTERY MURDER"



Containing all the drama of fictional murder stories, the killing of Lawrence Hewitt, Kitchener, Ont., taxi cab owner and sportsman, is being investigated by Ontario provincial police. Hewitt, called from his home late at night to take a "fare" was found three hours later in the ditch of the Galt-Kitchener highway by a passing motorist. The 30 year old cab driver had been shot by a .32 calibre bullet and because of lack of blood stains in the automobile, police believe he was shot while standing on the side of the road. Police began an intensive search for a man and woman alleged to have been seen in the cab parked on the highway in exactly the same spot where the body was found. The theory of murder for money was blasted with the finding of $17 in the dead man's pockets. Lawrence Hewitt is shown at the LEFT in a photograph taken last summer while the picture at the RIGHT shows the victim's automobile with a newspaperman pointing to the ditch where the body was found.

SKI TOURNEY DRAWS MOUNTIES AND INDIANS

CANADIAN ATHLETES STAR AT TORONTO'S 1 NDOOR TRACK MEET.

Greatest upset of Toronto's annual indoor track and field meet this year was the defeat by Cl. Wallace Brown (right), of the University of Toronto, of Eulace Peacock of Temple University and Sammy Richardson of Toronto, in the broad jumping event, with a leap of 23 feet 7 inches, Brown won top honors over these two outstanding broad jumpers. Another spectacular event saw the world's record for the 60 yards high hurdles smashed by Larry O'Connor, another University of Toronto athlete. His time for the race was seven and three-tenths seconds which lowered the Canadian and world indoor records. Albert Threadgill, Temple University star, won the high jumping event with a leap of 6 feet 2 inches. Threadgill is shown clearing the bar in the high jump. BLUM ASKS FREE HAND TO SETTLE RIOTS

Communists are Warned Premier Blum to Resign Unless Harmony Rules

Leaders of Radical Wing Agree to Waive Their Demands

SEVERAL STRIKES

Threat of General Walkout Heard as Aftermath of Struggle

Paris, Mar. 17 (AP) — Premier Blum, beset by spiden protest strikes and political eclipses from his popular front supporters, was said by a member of the cabinet today to have threatened resignation of the government unless enraged French Communists give him a free hand to settle the aftermath of last night's bloody Clichy riots.

While Actions Latitez called at the suburban scene of the Leftist-Rightist street fighting which killed five persons and wounded 200, this minister—who asked that his name be not cited—said the premier told the Communist leaders, Maurice Thorez and Jacques Doriot, he would continued be wa seared of harmony in the ranks of the Popular Front or dealing with the consequences of the Clichy struggle.

Demons Are Waived.

The Communist leaders, it was understood, agreed provisionally to waive their own demands and to extend Blum's hand of friendship with the situation.

Coincidentally, there were several brief strikes and talk of a 24-hour general walkout in protest the action of police in dealing with the Communist demonstrators who last night bombarded a Rightist meeting in Clichy, part of the industrial "red ring around Paris".

OUTSTANDING LAWYER MOURNED BY BAR

Danville, Que., March 17.—(CP)—An outstanding member of the bar, James Nasmith Greenshields was mourned today by the Quebec bar.

The 56-year-old Montreal Counsel, leader of the defence for the Metis Rebellion Leader Louis Riel, died at his home here yesterday. He had been in retirement for several years.

Greenshields, brother of Chief Justice R. A. E. Greenshields of Quebec, defended Riel against high treason charges in Regina in 1885, and was associated in numerous famous cases during his career as prosecutor or defence counsel.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thomson

Science Service Meteorologist

Ireland's weather is fearful and wet! St. Patrick never had to bother about weather on his old emerald isle, despite the popular legend about his role as a snake-driver. For snakes or snakes there to chase—hadn't been for a period of a thousand years. The long chill of the great Ice Age, that gave Ireland a fine climate, like Ireland's for something like a million years, cleared the land of snakes ages before the first Irishman stepped on its soil.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, March 17 (CP)—A deep low area, accompanied southward gales has caused strong winds and gales with rain in the Maritime provinces and moderate to heavy snowfalls in Quebec, Northern Ontario and Manitoba. Elsewhere in the country the southern western extends from Manitoba to the Rocky mountains and moderate to heavy snowfalls in Southern Ontario, Lake Superior and Eastern Ontario.

Lake Superior cloudy and somewhat milder today and Thursday.

Minimum and maximum (if rain or thunder, or flurries, Thursday, mostly fair and comparatively mild.

BILL INTRODUCED TO REPEAL ACT

Amusement Tax Will Be Abolished by Legislature

Toronto, Mar. 17 (CP)—The last major piece of government legislation having been introduced, probably tomorrow, Premier Hepburn today in Commons Chamber Historic Star Legislature would reach adjournment by Easter, the Premier Hepburn had planned.

The budget debate will be resumed today and will continue probably tomorrow night. The details of the budget will be introduced shortly there being fewer than thirty members in the House at times during the debate.

The bill to repeal the amusement tax act was introduced by Premier Hepburn given notice of it Monday but it appeared in the proceedings and notice of intention to repeal the Income Tax Act. This brought opposition questions and the Premier reintroduced the bill with its proper title.

Mr. Hepburn assumed the opposition there would be no redistribution bill this session. He said the minds of those members who have been pressing about an election this year. The premier previously put himself on record as saying a redistribution bill will precede a general election.

Premier powers for the Ontario Securities Commission was the purpose behind a bill introduced by Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck. The bill would empower the cabinet to appoint any person to investigate any fraud against the government or any municipality. The purpose of investigation the person so appointed would have the powers of the Security Commission.

Hon. D. Marshall Presents Bill Giving Assoc. Power to Levy Tolls'

GOVT. POLICY OUTLINED

Kemptville, Ont., March 17 (CP) —The Ontario Cheese Patrons Association went forward with its annual convention today while Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, hurried back to Toronto to introduce a bill in the Ontario Legislature giving the Association wide powers to carry on its marketing activities.

Today Mr. Marshall was scheduled to bring down a bill giving the Association power to levy tolls. He told delegates here last night that the Act would be wide enough to benefit producers of other farm products "to whom group bargaining and group selling will be a some advantage."

France's Popular Front Party Threatened by Difficulties

STRIKES CALLED

Communist Forces Driven From Central Square by 3,000 Police

Paris, Mar. 17 (AP) — France's Popular Front Government was threatened with grave strikes and political difficulties today as the outgrowth of night-long rioting in the workers' suburb of Clichy in which five persons were killed and at least 300 wounded.

The bloody struggle between Communists, mobile guards and Rightists brought a one-hour strike of workers all the grounds of the Paris International Exposition, and at the Hotchkiss plant and in the metallurgical stores in protest against the deaths and arrests of many workers. Premier Blum called political parties in the government.

Twenty hundred workers in the La Valette Construction Want in Saint Ouen, outside Paris, decided a sit-down, and workers in the whole so-called "red ring" of industrial suburbs were called to a general walkout tomorrow.

LAGUARDIA-HITLER FEUD DANGEROUS

Toronto, March 17—(CP)—Every effort must be made to avoid the consequences developing from the attack on Canadian Labor History by Fiorello Laguardia of New York, Mayor, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson declared in Hydro Chamber last night before the Method Fire Underwriters' Association. Such consequences would become a second Belgium in the event of an attack on United States by Germany or Japan.

The former Canadian High Commissioner to London said Japan had been waiting for an opportunity to attack the United States for years.

"Where would they land their forces?" he asked. "In New York harbor, in San Francisco's Golden Gate or in Canada?"

"I believe the attack on the United States would see Canada the battle ground, the consequences of warring factions," he added. Canada should assume a greater share of Empire defence, Mr. Ferguson said.

Rearm on Sea, Sky, Land Imperious Duty Says Duce Speaking at Tripoli

Italian Will to "Live in Peace Manifest an Identical Will" Visiting at Italian Colony

With All Those who Statement of Mussolini

Tripoli, Libya, March 17—(AP)—Premier Mussolini, referring scathingly to what he called the pessimistic forecasts of democratic countries over Italy's ascendancy in the Mediterranean, told a mammoth throng of 100,000 today the Italian empire had been forced to rearm in need of rearmament threat of others.

While the guns of the Italian fleet boomed in the harbor and the colony's capital, Mussolini shouted:

"We rearm so we, in the air and on land because it is our imperious duty in the face of the armaments of others."

Declaring such reports disturbed the peace of all peoples, Mussolini said "an alarmist campaign has been evident in the news of some great democratic countries over my trip to Libya.

Marshal Balbo Dictatorial Peace

"This neuropathic alarmism, this sowing of suspected dangers, does not enhance the cause of peace because it profoundly disturbs relations between peoples."

The Premier, paying his first visit to the Italian colony on the southern shore of the Mediterranean in 10 years, spoke from a huge pavilion erected in front of the governor's palace on gigantic lictor rods—symbol of Italy.

Addressing the crowd of native Libyan Moslems and Italian colonists, Il Duce proclaimed an Italian will to "live in peace with all those who manifest an identical will."

But, he warned, he had not forgotten the League of Nations coalition which tried to crush Italy's conquest of Ethiopia by imposition of sanctions.

Referring to the immense throng beat a wild acclamation on their drums and cymbals, Il Duce declared: Duce promised them "Moslems may be sure that from Rome and Italy they will find just and well-being and above all their religious usages will be rigorously respected."

Irishmen World Over Pay Tribute to Patron Saint

More Than 1400 Years Ago He Brought Christianity to Ireland

LEGENDS PLENTIFUL

It is more than 1,400 years since St. Patrick, Patron Saint of Ireland, lived and labored to bring Christianity to that then Pagan land, but today, March 17, the anniversary of his death in the Abbey built, founded by himself in County Down, Irishmen the world over unite to pay him tribute.

So deep an impression did St. Patrick make on the minds of his adopted people that after centuries filled with wars and religious and social differences have passed his memory is still as green and believed as then. Barristers, judges, drivers of Ireland and churches the world over have been named after him and countless sons of Ireland answer to the name of Patrick.

The land that he adopted him as its patron saint first knew him as a captive serving as a slave according to tradition. Patrick came from Scotland. Pirates raided and captured on the northern coast of Ireland while engaged on a military expedition in Scotland. Patrick. He was sent to be a swine herder and the life was dull, even hard among the Pagan Irish for many years, finding them immortal. One of the Druid priests challenged the mystery of the Blessed Trinity and while stooping to pick up emerald sod, picked up a shamrock and held it up to prove it was possible to separate three in one and one in three. From that day the shamrock has been the national emblem of Ireland.

There are many legends associated

NO COUNSEL YET OBTAINED

Sarnia, Ont., March 17.—(CP)—No attempt has been made to obtain legal counsel for William Latchford, 16-year-old farmhand charged with the murder of seven-year-old John Lackina. It was learned today after a visit here of the accused boy's mother, Mrs. Mary Campbell, Detroit waitress, whom he had not seen in five years.

Magnificent Auditoriums Urged Upon Cities of Canada

New York, Mar. 17 (CP)—Deploring what he termed the inadequacy of music instruction in the schools of his native Canada and the lack of proper concert halls in the Dominion, Edward Johnson, manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company, today urged a huge auditorium-cum-music for its cultural value and suggested the building of a huge auditorium as the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

The former world-famous tenor, born in Guelph, Ont., and credited with doing more to popularize opera in America in his two years as manager of the Met" than did any of his predecessors, visioned Toronto as a potential opera-making centre.

BLIND PERSONS TO GET PENSION AT 40

General Criticism of Old Age Pensions Made in Commons

Ottawa, March 17.—(CP)— While the principle of applying the privileges of the old age pension to blind persons at 40 years had now received the enthusiastic endorsation of all parties in the House of Commons, passage of the necessary amendment yesterday aroused a storm of criticism of the Pensions Act itself and the debate occupied the greater part of the day.

The amendment will enable all blind persons from 40 to 70 to draw pensions of $240 a year providing their income from other sources does not exceed $400 if married and $200 if single. The pension would be reduced by whatever amount more than $400 the pensioners may earn by his own efforts. All the provinces have endorsed the move, Finance Minister Dunning told the House.

General criticism of administration of the old age pensions in the Province drew from Mr. Dunning the announcement that befor the next session of parliament the Dominion-Provincial Conference would be reconvened to study the purpose of studying old age pensions legislation with a view to eliminating abuses which have been disclosed.

The federal treasury pays 75 per cent or old age pensions and the provinces 25 per cent, but administration is largely in the hands of the provinces and the municipalities. Under the many quarrels, were directed mainly against the regulations set up by the provinces and the manner they were enforced.

DR. W. M. MATHER DIES AT TWEED

Coroner of County And Practised in Tweed For 50 Years

A long and useful life came to a close, when Dr. William Milton Mather passed away at his residence at Tweed after an illness of about eight weeks' duration, on Tuesday, March 16th, which day was the anniversary of his birth.

In the passing of Dr. Mather, the village of Tweed and the County of Hastings as a whole have lost a prominent figure, a man of fine character, endowed with a pleasing and friendly personality, whose life was devoted to the welfare of others and who served well his day and generation. He had been ailing brought deep feelings of regret to all who knew him and pleasant memories of him will long be entertained by all who knew him and esteemed his friendship.

Born in Thurlow

The late Dr. William Milton Mather was born on March 16th, 78 years ago near Plainfield in Thurlow Township, his parents being the late Archibald Mather and his wife Eliza Jane Sadlier.

After completing his studies at the little brick school house in Thurlow Township, he attended Albert College at Belleville, and later entered Queen's College, Kingston, from which institution he was graduated in medicine in the year 1886. Soon

Public Good Was Served Court Finds by the Acts Charged Against Worker

Woman Freed on Charge of Advertising Control Information

20th DAY OF CASE

750,000 Words Written Into Records at The Trial

Eastview, Ont., Mar. 17 (CP) — Dedrowska Palmer, 29-year-old Ottawa mother of two children today was freed from a charge of advertising birth-control information and contraceptives in this town.

Magistrate Lester Clayton rendered judgment on the charge laid under section 207C of the Criminal Code, at the end of a trial believed unprecedented in Canadian legislation. Charged with the defence conclusion that the defence "has proved that the public good was served by the acts she is alleged to have done and that there was no excess in the acts alleged beyond what the public good required."

"In the Public Good"

Section 207 of the Criminal Code, a section governing obscene libel and dissemination of contraceptive information, among other things, provides a loophole in that no one may be convicted under it who can prove that the acts alleged against him were performed in the public good and without excess beyond what the public good required.

It was this point that defence counsel P. W. Wegenast stressed particularly in his case, bringing from Theodore Frankford, Ont., and Kitchener, Ont., numerous expert witnesses to give their opinion that the work Miss Palmer was doing for the Parents' Information Bureau of Kitchener was in the public good.

The magistrate found in fact "that the acts alleged to have been done by Miss Palmer were done knowingly, without lawful justification, and for the purpose of aiding the Parents' Information Bureau to advertise means or instructions intended or represented as a means of preventing conception," within the definition of section 207C but that on account of the charge laid against her last September, the other counts were dismissed early in the trial.

HON. P. PRIMROSE LIEUT. GOVERNOR OF ALBERTA, DIES

Was Pioneer of The West During Turbulent Days of The 80's

BORN IN PICTOU, N.S.

Educated at R.M.C., Kingston, Later Joining Royal N.W.M.P.

Edmonton, Mar. 17 (CP) — Hon. Philip Carteret Bill Primrose, Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta since last Oct. 1, died today at Government House after a lengthy illness. He was 73 years old.

Veteran officer, magistrate and colorful public figure for a half century, the Hon. Primrose was a pioneer of the west and lived through the turbulent days of the early 90's on the prairies.

Col. Primrose was born in Pictou, N.S., Oct. 2d, 1863, and completed his education at the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., because he was attracted to military service. He joined the Royal North West Mounted Police soon after graduation and rapidly climbed ranks. He was inspector at Regina, territorial headquarters, during the early days of the North West Rebellion.

When the Yukon gold rush was underway in 1898, Col. Primrose was transferred to Dawson City in the Yukon where he met a young lawyer, W. L. Walsh, who almost forty years later to the day succeeded as Lieutenant-Governor of the Footloose Province. Col. Primrose was transferred back to Regina in 1901.

In 1915, when in charge of criminal investigation work, he retired from the force which later became the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, his resignation was sent in to permit him to accept appointment as police magistrate in Edmonton at that time fighting a wave of crime. He also served as chairman of the Edmonton Police Commission and the Provincial Police Commission.

Handled 40,000 Cases.

After twenty years as police magistrate, Col. Primrose retired and the bench he had held with more than 40,000 cases.

He was the sixth person to be appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, the appointment being made Oct. 1, 1936.

Col. Primrose was married Jan. 8, 1902, in Lethbridge to Miss Lily Deane, daughter of Major Richard Deane who was the first Commissioner of the N.W.M.P. in Calgary and also had a long and distinguished career. There are two daughters, Evelyn Sidmouth and Mrs. Neil D., a barrister at Vegreville, Alta.

Thurlow Family Forced from Blazing Home in Night Attire

Mrs. William Cox And Five Children Taken in by Neighbors

FIRE ORIGIN UNKNOWN

Awakened by the crackling of flames shortly after midnight, Mrs. Cox was forced to find their home a blazing inferno, Mrs. William Cox and her five children were taken from the house in their night attire, and found refuge in the nearby home in Thurlow Township, adjacent to the city limits, watched the flames completely destroy their home. William Cox, husband of Mrs. Cox, an employee of the Canadian National Railway, was away at the time of the conflagration.

According to reports from the scene of the fire none of the Cox family were injured.

Red flames sent a lurid glow into the sky, when neighbors rushed to the scene. Mrs. Cox and her family who were sleeping at the time were awakened by dense smoke and flames, which were enveloping the house. Neighbors came to their aid. Saving garments Mrs. Cox rushed with the blazing home to her children.

Answering a belated alarm, members of the Belleville Fire Department rushed to the scene of the fire, but were unable to save the home. The flames which were fanned by the strong winds made short work of the building and contents impossible. Blazing embers swept high in the air by the wind, threatened to destroy nearby buildings, but concentration of firemen's efforts prevented ignition. Neighbors succeeded in saving a sewing machine from the burning building.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The house which is now a pile of smouldering ruins is the fourth building to be destroyed by fire on the present foundation.

LOCAL REACTION HEARD OVER FATE OF MANAGERSHIP

Ald. Jennings States View Committee Does Not Fully Understand

OTHER OPINIONS

Members of city council greeted with mixed feelings today the decision of the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature on Tuesday that Belleville be refused the right to reduce the number of aldermen from 12 to 9, and that the application for power to appoint a city manager form of government be not allowed.

Belleville electors voted and carried both propositions at the last municipal election. The city manager plan by a majority of 30. The vote to reduce the number of council had ten votes.

Debated briefly in the committee on Tuesday morning, the city manager clause received only one vote, that cast by Sam Lawrence of the Hamilton East. The debate followed a personal appearance of the Mayor W. D. Mikel, K.C., of the city, before members to the Municipal Committee in favor of the passing of the bill which would grant the right to reduce the number of council and the appointment of manager. Mr. A. E. Collins, K.C., city prosecutor, also addressed the committee in favor of the bill.

Opposition had been pointed out by the Hon. David Croll, who spoke against the application of the Chairman Wallace McCutcheon, M.P.P., and by Ontario municipality having a city manager, that they are just using the term, he added, Mr. Croll indicated the department would not look not approve of city managers.

Opposition also came from Mr. Lawrence, who said:

"I opposed the applications for reduction in number of council and the appointment of a city manager because I opposed it from the start," said Mayor Mikel today. "I considered as to his appearance in Toronto in opposition to the bills. I was asked to go to Toronto and do this by a number of citizens and Belleville who are against both moves.

"They realized that I do, it would be a bad mistake to reduce the number of councils, as the work of the city was authority now handled by twelve men. Also they were against the appointment of a city manager for the reason that with the setting up of a public utilities commission—which authority has been given—he would have nothing to do. Also his duties have not been specified. Nor has his salary been mentioned. The committee who heard me were unanimous in the feeling that Belleville does not need a reduction in number of its council. Nor does it need the city manager form of government. On these grounds I opposed the bills in the interests of the city, and in the interests of the numbers of the people who have to go to Toronto and do so," declared Mr. Mikel.

Ald. Lewis Voices View

Marked with the same emphasis that he characterized his fight for reduction in council and the appointment of city manager, Alderman Laurie Lewis, today, following a careful study of the bills affecting the Private Bills Committee yesterday, made the declaration that the matter of reduction of the Private Bills Committee, Belleville still does need the reduction and application and appointment of city manager.

"I still think the will of the people should prevail in matters that concern the people," he said. "I don't think the legislature should take it upon themselves to go against the expressed wish of the people who voted on and carried out this attitude I can't understand this attitude of Queen's Park when they know we in Belleville have done little."

"Communities of late years have been so disorganized and hampered by legal and financial difficulties that it seems to be almost impossible for any one municipality to progress. I know that it is not likely the application will be granted. They are in danger of losing their initiative. They are acting in the best interests of the community they represent and are anxious to pass legislation which may be of great benefit to the condition which is prevalent in their own city or town. We are fringed and bound 'round with these hampering rules. What do they know in Toronto of the condition of Belleville and how do they know the best legislation which may be passed for her own particular benefit. The people's will should rule in matters such as these."

Bills "Not Specific Enough"

Chief opposition of the members of city manager form of government, Alderman Harold Ellis declared yesterday introduced this recommendation on the floor of the city council soon after he managed to retain his composure in referring to the action of the provincial body. The bills, he indicated, were not presented properly, nor to the best advantage. "If they had been they might have received more consideration."

"Personally I have no regrets. I think, perhaps, it is for the best that the bills were defeated at this time. The whole thing is, they should have been more specific. If they had been presented as the resolution formulated by myself and the city solicitor, they might have had a chance to pass.

"As it was, however, they were put in such a way that the members had no clear idea of what was wanted. For one thing the duties of the city manager were not specified. It didn't mention what the duties consisted of. If it had been worded differently I have an idea that the Private Bills Committee would have arrived at a clearer understanding; they would then have been in a position to say 'yes' or 'no' definitely and with meaning.

"I am in full agreement with Mr. Mikel that the bill as drawn up should have been defeated. The most important things as stated in the recommendation were not outlined."

City Solicitor A. B. Collins, K.C., absent from his office today, declining could not be reached. Mayor Arnott is attending Dominion convention of Mayors being held in Ottawa. He is expected back on Belleville Thursday. Any matters concerned with the matter of council reduction and city manager could not be reached or wished for more time to study the matter before being quoted.

Around the city hall today, however, interest was the same tension that has been apparent for the past several weeks since the recommendation for the reduction in council and the appointment of city manager was introduced—was lessened. Rumours of replacements, appointments to different offices and other changes in the executive offices if the bills had carried yesterday were less noticeable today. What these changes at city hall—if any changes would have been under the government of city manager, was not indicated. Nor was any audible comment or statement given on the matter in the offices of city hall by any official or employee.

Whether further official action will be taken on the matter of council reduction and the appointment of city manager was not indicated by members of council questioned today.

DR. W. M. MATHER

after graduation he took up the practice of his profession at Tweed and from time to time and up to the time of his last illness he was actively engaged in ministering to the sick. He was a true family physician and was held in affectionate regard by those he served. By his confreres in the medical profession he was most highly esteemed and as a means of showing their high estimate of his worth, the medical association in this district tendered to him a complimentary dinner at Tweed on June 9th, 1926. At this event prominent medical men from near and far were present. For fifty years he ministered conscientiously and sympathetically to the sick and his life was replete with good works.

Coroner of County

He was a Coroner for the County of Hastings for many years and held the office up to the time of his death.

In religion Dr. Mather was a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church at Tweed, in which congregation he held the office of an Elder.

Surviving to mourn his passing are one daughter, Mrs. A. C. Locke of Tweed; four grandchildren, John Locke, Grant Locke, Mary Locke and George Locke; all of Tweed; one brother, Mr. George Mather, Vancouver, B.C.; two sisters, Mrs. George Reid, Flushing, Mich., and Mrs. Jane Bellerville. His wife passed away two years ago.

The funeral will be held from the late residence on Friday. The only public observance will be a memorial service which will be held at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tweed, on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

GROWTH OF ORDER IS TOLD MEMBERS

Paul P. Schmitz of Royal Order of Moose Welcomed as Guest

A splendid insight into the growth, development and work of the Order of Moose throughout Canada and the United States was given to nearly one hundred members and guests of Belleville Lodge, No. 1004, Loyal Order of Moose, 1004 by Mr. Paul P. Schmitz, Director of the International Membership Recruitment Department and the L.O.M. of Aurora, Illinois, in a splendid address given at an enthusiastic meeting held in the Moose Hall last night.

PAUL P. SCHMITZ

Director of International Enrolment Department of L.O.M. of Aurora, Ill., guest at the local lodge.

Accompanying Mr. Schmitz was Mr. Norman G. Wood, Supreme Past Dictator, and Director of Moose in Canada.

Another important feature of the meeting occurred, when five candidates were initiated into Belleville Lodge by the members of the Lodge Degree Team, Members and guests from Trenton, Belleville, Port Hope, Cornwall and many other points were present and guests included the members of the Ladies Charge Team of Belleville. Also musical program was the fine voice of Clare Patterson, and piano numbers by Mrs. Bowerman. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by the ladies of the local chapter.

At present touring Ontario in the interests of the Order is Mr. Schmitz, the guest speaker at the meeting last night is recognized as one of the outstanding orators on Moose principles. His early education in his native state he graduated from a Commercial College in Chicago. When remanded to civil life he entered the Organization Department of the Moose and from that time his rise in the order was meteoric. He has held the offices of Director, Governor, Dictator, Deputy Supreme Secretary, Secretary of Canada and Dictator and his present position in the order.

His friends say however ever-extend beyond the Moose, for he is also an Elk, and a member of the Knights of Columbus.

POLICE BLOTTER

Completely dismantling the large radiators of two "donkey engines", the property of the Johnson Construction Company, Toronto, thieves stole several hundred sections of the radiators and sold them to local junk dealers early this week. Provincial Constable K. Smith stated today. The cross sections of the valuable radiators were removed. The articles were stolen from the "donkey engines" while they were stored along the side of Highway No. 2 near O'Brien's bridge for many years.

It is believed by Constable Smith that, after the thieves removed the sections of the radiators some time prior to the week-end, although the donkey engines have been located at their present position ever since Highway No. 37 was widened some years ago, the radiators of these engines are valued at $800.00 each, the cross sections stolen being recovered yesterday. These articles were undoubtedly stolen for the value of the copper, zinc and lead, that is contained in the radiator cross sections.

Charges will be laid in the matter, although the Provincial Police refused to name the alleged robbers today.

Manford Corby, local resident, who police say is an old offender, was arrested by the Provincial Police on a charge of intoxication last night. When remanded in custody today, Corby appeared before the Police of the Peace suffering somewhat from facial injuries, including a colored eye. Charges of assault may also be laid against Corby, Chief Hubbard informed him as Provincial Constable Wm. Mehrten secured the services of the police cells, county jail bound, at noon. The case will be heard in open court later.

No other arrests were reported in Belleville yesterday, barring the odd block free for the accommodation of the few inebriates who braved the stormy blasts to arrive in Belleville last night.

KING'S MESSAGE READ TO HOUSE

Financial Provision For Royal Family is Requested

London, March 16 (C.P.-Cable) — The King's long-awaited message to parliament requesting that financial provision be made for the Royal Family was delivered today.

His Majesty's message did not mention the Duke of Windsor, his predecessor, and it was assumed the Royal Family would make provision for him privately.

At the end of question hour, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, proceeded to the bar of the House of Commons and in a loud voice announced: "A message from His Majesty the King, sir, signed by his own hand."

The chancellor then walked up the floor of the chamber, bowed twice to the chair and handed the message to the Speaker, Captain E. A. Fitzroy, who proceeded to read it.

The King's Message

"The demise of the crown renders it necessary that renewed provision shall be made for the Queen, and His Majesty's message read. "His Majesty places unreservedly at the disposal of the House those hereditary revenues which were so placed by his predecessor and has commanded that papers necessary for full consideration of the subject that be laid before the House.

"His Majesty's government desire that provision shall be made for Her Majesty the Queen, and His Majesty's children other than Princess Elizabeth corresponding to the provision which the House has been willing to make in like circumstances in the past.

"His Majesty also desires that suitable provision be made for Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Gloucester. It is, however, His Majesty's intention, so long as the Duchy of Cornwall revenues are vested in himself, to make provision for Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Gloucester and hardar as those revenues are sufficient to provide for His Majesty's civil lists and in the event of the birth of a Duke of Cornwall to assent to arrangements similar to those assented to by his predecessor.

"His Majesty recommends consideration of these several matters by his faithful Commons and relies on their attachment to his person and family to adopt such a measure as may be suitable for the occasion.

"George."

A select committee will be set up probably Thursday, to consider the question.

STRIKES TIE-UP DETROIT HOTELS

Heating Suspended—Sonja Henie And Lily Pons Make Light of Trouble

Detroit, March 16 (AP)—Detroit's four largest hotels, in a "mutually agreed" decision, suspended activities and closed their doors to new patronage today in response to growing labor disputes.

Joining with the Hotel Statler, where a sit-down strike thwarted ordinary facilities, to guests yesterday, the Book-Cadillac, Detroit-Leland and Fort Shelby closed up.

Policemen stood at the doors to each hotel, motioning visitors and prospective patrons away. Facilities, including heat, were suspended.

Together, the four hotels, members of the Detroit Hotel Association which made the announcement have accommodations for nearly 4,000 persons.

"Maybe I'll go on a sit-down strike myself," announced Lily Pons, opera star, who came here to sing at a concert tomorrow night.

"The sit-down strike originated in France, didn't it?" Miss Pons then asked the French madamoiselle.

"No, no, no!" she replied quickly, "I think it was Detroit."

At the Book-Cadillac, Sonja Henie, figure ice skater, found herself without accomodations because of the shutdown, but was invited to a private home.

Byrona Lee Dewey, young screen actor, who appeared with Miss Henie at a local theatre last night, also was a guest at the hotel.

Unperturbed by the turn of events was Evelyn Gardiner, contralto with the Detroit Opera Company.

As she left her 10th floor Statler room for a theatre, she chuckled:

"Just what I've needed—three trips a day and I'll be right down where I want to be."

FL. LT. HARDING HURT IN CRASH

Plane Bursts Into Flames But Flyer Manages to Make Escape

Camp Borden, Ont., March 16 (CP)—Flight Lieutenant D. Carl A. Harding, former prominent football player, was injured in an airplane crack-up near here yesterday but is expected to be fully recovered in three of four days, Camp Borden officials stated today.

Squadron Leader C. F. Brookes, officer commanding the Royal Canadian Air Force station here, said Harding suffered a slight concussion but is resting comfortably and will be all right in three or four days. He said no bones were fractured but added he was unaware of details of the accident.

It was understood the crash occurred while Harding was landing at Leach's Field, private field used by Camp Borden flyers. The field is about six miles south of Camp Borden which is some 50 miles north of Toronto.

After landing on the level sandy field, Harding's plane broke into flames, all the fabric being burned, but the flyer managed to leap from the machine before the outbreak. A court of inquiry is considering the crash and will report later.

Harding played with the Ottawa Roughriders and Toronto Argos in the Interprovincial Rugby Union and with Queen's University in the Intercollegiate circuit.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Bordentown, N.J., March 16—(AP)—A 900-year-old bronze Chinese incense burner, which a century ago graced the United States cottage of Joseph Bonaparte, exiled King of Spain, was stolen 18 days ago by two youths, chopped into pieces and sold for $14.45 as junk, police said today.

The 30½-pound relic was valued at $100,000 by Charles Parke, Sr., caretaker of the borrytown estate built here by Napoleon Bonaparte's brother.

Two men were held for a grand jury on charges of trespassing and grand larceny.

Salt Lake City, March 16 (CP) —A weary traveller, found walking barefooted near the depot with $300 in his pocket asked police to help determine whether he was himself or his brother.

He said he knew his last name was Perry and that he was going some place, probably Montreal, but he was divided:

"I guess I'm Robert, but if I'm not I'm my brother, Earle." Police telegraphed a brother, H. E. Perry, Camarillo, Calif., who replied the man must be Earle.

Santa Barbara, Calif., March 16 (CP)—San Miguel Island had a new schoolhouse today capable of holding its entire student body —both of them.

The new building, transported to the island by four families aboard a fishing boat, is 18 by 15 by 8 1-2 feet in dimensions.

Its student body consists of the two daughters, 5 and 7 years old, of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lester, only family on the island.

ST. PATRICK AND HIS DAY

Today Irishmen throughout the world, whether native of Erin or the descendants of Irishmen and Irishwomen, celebrate a national patron saint and a day with more than national importance. Like their patron saint, the Irish have exerted outside of the little island vast influence in all parts of the world; their saint was a missionary and one of the greatest builders of churches in history, influencing many peoples.

Patrick was the son of a deacon, Calpurnius, and the grandson of a presbyter Potitus. He was born about the year 389. The name of the future apostle in British was Sucat and his Roman name survives in a Hibernized form Cothrige. He was educated as a Christian and with reverence for things the Roman Empire. He had troubles which included his capture by a band of pirates when he was sixteen years of age. Irish tradition represents the youth as tending the herds of a chieftain in County Antrim or in Connaught. This bondage lasted for six years and during this time he became subject to religious emotion and beheld visions which led him to escape to the coast of Wicklow where he encountered a vessel engaged in the export of Irish wolf-dogs. The voyage took him to Gaul, and Patrick went to a monastery at Lerins. Later he returned to his home where it is said his missionary zeal was aroused. He returned to Gaul to be trained for his mission. He was consecrated a bishop to the missionary work in Ireland. He crossed the channel and on the shores of Strangford, Lough, a small wooden barn utilized for worship. He ultimately came in conflict.. with High-King Loigaire, whose brother had been a catechumen of Patrick. He challenged the royal authority by lighting the Paschal fire on the hill of Slane on Easter Eve, the occasion of a pagan festival. Trials of skill between the bards of the Druids of Loigaire ensued and Loigaire, though unwilling to accept the creed, undertook to protect the Christian bishop. Later he was invited by Loigaire to assist in codification of the Senchus Mor to preserve the interests of Christians. Patrick visited Connaught three times and founded churches as in Ulster. In the south he acted as organizer. After a visit to Rome he founded the church and monastery of Armagh.

The Saint was a man of intense spiritual devotion. He brought Ireland into touch with western Europe and Rome. His work consisted largely in organization of Christian groups which he found existing on his arrival and in planting the Christian faith in regions which had not come under the influence of the gospel. He founded, it is said 365 churches and baptised with his own hands 12,000 persons. He ordained a vast number into the church.

While at times there is not a clear line of demarcation between fact and legend in the records, there is ample to give him the high place he holds in Irish hearts. His zeal for religion is marked in the Irish, one of the roots of Irish religion is found in him.

As March 17th. always falls within Lent, the occasion is always marked with festival and rejoicing. In that it is near the vernal equinox, it is associated with spring's coming.

Today the shamrock the flower associated with Ireland is worn by Irish and others not Irish, so great has the influence of this Saint's day spread among men.

UNBLATTERING SELF

A distinct reaction from the urge for notoriety has brought Monsieur Jean Giraudoux greater fame than comes to those who consent to be interviewed in Paris by newspapers in order to keep themselves before the public. Giraudoux, author of "Siegfried," told a woman's reporter that he never reads his proofs or knows what he is going to say on the next page. He has no plan and follows no fixed line: "As to the value of my books, I don't care a rap. Good or bad, it's all the same to me. I've even lay great stress upon imperfection, incompletion."

Here's a man who does not flatter himself, indeed unflatters himself, for perhaps the sake of flattery—another way of being flattered. He roasts himself.

Is it modesty, any more than the desire of others for notoriety?

BOMB-PROOFING HOMES

This is a strange world when Japanese public men start to build assassination-proof houses. The Premier has had one built at a cost of $28,000, bomb-proof, with subterranean passages, camouflaged doors and hidden armour plate, besides concealed periscopes.

While it pays in contentment to live in a land where such houses are not necessary, yet from the attention which is being paid to means to defend themselves against war's havoc, Europeans may be thought as running a close second to the Japanese premier.

VALHALLA OF THE BEAUTIFUL

When all disastrous ties have fled the omen,
And all the dolorous dreams been swept away;
And jewels, like the eyes of beautiful women,
Shine where the deep gloom fell but yesterday;
When we possess the intaglios' caracole-story,
And all their colorful lines are ours to hold,
Made one with music's vast, ineffable glory
And all the immutable, sensuous fires of gold;
When songs hurt those who have not power to carol,
Are poured like wine from some ethereal glass,
Flecking the labiate blooms' perfumed apparel
And beading with carmine dews the emerald grass;
Then shall the grandeur and the glory smother
Desire, and the gods' unrest be done—
The wandering children, the virginal mother
Of beauty enfolding the beauteous One.

SPRING IS IN THE OFFING, as the sailors say, and business awaits the quickening urge of spring buying. Members of both sexes are planning new garments, and home owners are planning more or less improvements to their homes.... "Save the surface and save all," slogan of the Paint Men, will animate the desire to "Paint Up, Clean Up," the urge that blooms in the spring. This spring much additional activity is looked for because of the Home Improvement Plan which makes easy financing for home owners who wish to improve their properties. This plan covers so many different departments of home life that it cannot help but provide a great deal of extra employment both in the building and generally in making business better, besides protecting the investment in home properties and adding to their value.

"VIM COCKTAILS" is about the newest thing to come up for discussion in sporting circles. It is said that some hockey teams are given glucose before a match to stimulate energy, and there is some one who says that during the Olympics German coaches gave their charges from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of baking soda before competing, and this corrected any chemical reaction caused by physical energy being burned up in training and anticipation. Other energy creators have been mentioned as being used by athletes, and from New Haven comes a formula said to be used by the head trainer of Yale's athletic squads. Pineapple juice is the first ingredient, making up sixty per cent. of the finished product; then 30 per cent. orange juice is added, and ten per cent. lemon juice, plus a small quantity of sugar. Thoroughly chilled the drink is given to each member of the squad as he enters the locker room after practice. It is said to produce excellent results.

WELCOME HOME

A fashionably dressed woman approached the flower seller and asked for a shilling's worth of blooms. After the purchase she inquired:

"Will you be here next Wednesday, as I shall want some flowers for my daughter. She's coming out on that day."

"She shall have the best in the market, ma'am," the woman answered..... "What's she in for?"

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

March 17th., 1917.

Mr. William McIntosh and Mr. Harry McIntosh, sons of Mr. McIntosh, have become on a brief visit here returned, the former to Cobalt, the latter to Ottawa, Ont.

Twelve years ago today the Moira River was in flood and the waters invaded the land on the west side of the river as far west as Everett Street.

Chickens sold on the Saturday market here at $2.00 to $2.00 per pair; butter 24 cents to 30 cents per pound, and eggs 36 cents and 40 cents per dozen.

Major Osborne, formerly of the Ontario Business College staff, and a veteran of the Great War, is in the city on a visit for a few days. He was wounded in the Battle at Regina Trench. Major Osborne enlisted at Fredericton, N. B.

30 YEARS AGO

March 17th., 1907.

Mr. Richard Cunningion is home from Toronto on a visit to his parents.

Mrs. C. E. Brooks is visiting Mrs. D. N. DeMille at Bay Crest.

The Belleville Hardware Company has awarded the contract to tin the roof of Trinity Church.

A. Bennett of this city. The building will be four stories in height and be built on the west side. The new building is made necessary owing to the rapid growth in the company's business.

Mr. Harvey Clair left today for Toronto.

Mr. Walter Symons has returned to the city from New York.

Dr. Marshall has returned home after a six weeks' holiday in Cuba.

Mr. Richard Ketcheson left today on a business trip to Western Canada.

40 YEARS AGO

March 17th., 1897.

The great fight for the championship of the world between Robert Fitzsimmons and James J. Corbett took place at Carson, Nevada, March 17th., and was won by Fitzsimmons in the 14th. round. Time was 1 hour 15 minutes. The ring refused to shake hands. The big fight was a game of skilful manoeuvring. Corbett fought for his body and Fitz. for the head. The "Lanky One" was fairly punished. Fitz. outstayed "Gentleman Jim." The blow that did the business landed over Corbett's heart and he collapsed. The last round lasted 2 minute and forty five seconds.

Mr. John Miller has gone to Ottawa on business.

The weavers of the grown were out today.

Mr. H. E. Fairfield of this city is attending the dairy school at Kingston.

Mr. William Johnson, Inspector of Weights and Measures, is in Peterboro today.

40 YEARS AGO

Mr. Dr. Mellish's choral class will produce the oratorio Ruth at the Methodist Church, corner of Bridge Street Methodist Church on the evening of March 31st. inst.

The echoes of a police constable for the city force has narrowed to Mr. F. Price, chief clerk in the office of Mr. Mellish, superintendent of the G. T. R. here, has been promoted to the position of agent and will assume his new duties the 1st. of April. Mr. Price is popular with his associates here and his promotion is well deserved.

Mr. F. Hitchon, G. T. R. Fuel Inspector, has come from Brockville to this city to reside. The Inspector's office is in the building G. T. R. officials who have taken up residence with us lately.

Knock Knock

"Knock Knock" is a game which every American housewife plays constantly. Of course, she has a maid "of sorts," she is not exempt from taking a large part in this front-door sport which, like procrastination, is such a "thief of time."

On her return to the smaller retail of the knocker, she is asking herself, not "Who's there?" but "Is that the butcher, the baker or the candlestick maker?" However, it may be the collector, who has a business mop or less legitimate at her door. Or, it may be a canvasser to benefit association selling tickets to the annual ball; a small boy selling the newspaper which every other member of the family has already remembered; the little neighbor, a small girl selling kitchen pot holders or artificial flowers; needle packets or a map, who wants to do a little work (or preferably none) about the house; the iceman, not enough to buy a couple of doughnuts.

The day begins with the baker. By the time the loaf has been despatched by the magazine-fed, the pantry shade after the baker man's new baby daughter, the back-door hunter is subconsciously replaced by man. By the time the back entry is filled with knock-kneed boys selling scrapbooks, beds and the like, the front-door knocker announces the expressman . . . or a man collecting money for some organization, or postage due on a letter, or a new magazine, or one of a number of genuine takers. They want to know everything from your latest temperature to your preference as to how many magazines are admitted to the family household.

Having disposed of the quota of salesmen at the front door, the burner at the back wants to admit the oil man to fill the heater, the ice-man to put some cakes in the wash, and by the time the knocker has had a friendly chat with the clerkin call of the egg woman, the vegetable man left for supper, the boys who are not at home to receive it, or someone wants to sell a load of coal.

Interruptions via the knocker, in the form of the housekeeper, are a formidable battle array. Not long ago a woman's magazine published an article entitled "Warning to Wives," an article purporting to be written by a man, a husband, who supposes that wives are chief offenders in the matter of the interruptions. The author of the article told them off roundly for telephoning to their husbands at their offices to ask them to bring home some possible trifle. But while secretaries are throwing protective barriers around executives, the door is going to lift a hand and a voice in protest against interviews and their attendant Egyptians must have reached a high level since they mastered to operate upon ruptures and upon aneurysms. Unfortunately details of Egyptian skill are not given. It is only said "thou shalt perform an operation." Wounds healed with that degree of suppuration which was considered normal in the days before Listerism, and it cannot, for example, have been until it passed from view in mid-April to reappear from May to July, that the Egyptians slayed the opposite side of the sun.

Though often referred to as a "star" Venus is not a planet in the sun's family. Like the earth, she is held in her position in the orbit of Mr. Stephenson, General Superintendent, by the sun. Venus was popular with his associates here and his promotion is well deserved.

Mr. F. Hitchon, G. T. R. Fuel Inspector, has come from Brockville to this city to reside. The Inspector's office is in the building G. T. R. officials who have taken up residence with us lately.

Pharmacopoeia of Pharaohs

The use of vitamin A for the relief of night-blindness and tannic acid applications for the treatment of certain types of burns are some of the modern remedies mentioned in "Papyrus Ebers."

This was probably written about 1550 B. C., although the contents are almost certainly much older than the writer or documents ...It is an interesting experience to turn its pages and see to what extent remedies then advocated are still employed. The two examples given above are, perhaps, almost too good to be true. Actually the first mentioned, regarding the treatment of night-blindness, states: "Liver of ox, roasted and crushed out." The modern remedy is obtained from the liver of cod or halibut, and the common curative principle is in all probability vitamin A. The second is the treatment of burns, one of the conscientious readers of "Papyrus" and it seems justifiable to imagine that the probably was strong in tannic acid, yet recognized as at such great value in dealing with burns even of the skin.

x x x x

"The Papyrus Ebers" is said to have been found in a tomb in Egypt and was brought in 1873 to Berlin, where it is now carefully deposited in the University Library of Leipzig. A facsimile has been made and published, and various investigators have translated and commented on portions of this amazing document. A previous translation of the whole papyrus, published nearly fifty years ago, is held to be vague though the use of honey as almost the favourite liquid with which medicines were concocted—has not been handed down through the centuries quite so faithfully as certain other less pleasant fluids.

x x x x

But it must not be too hastily concluded that medicine has made little or no progress during the thirty-five centuries since the Ebers papyrus was compiled. Some of the recipes could not be quoted in full because the last ingredient may be cited-the following:

To expel blindness: burnt frog in oil & anointed therewith.

To make the hair grow for sportsmen: Hoofs & cuticle of hedgehog with oil, the head is anointed with the cuticle.

To expel white spots in the eyes: Fish's gall & honey, are applied as cuticle.

For pains in one side of the head: Fat of crocodile, fat of lion, fat of oil, and the head is rubbed therewith for pain.

To make the hair of a baldheaded person grow: fat of lion, of hippopotamus, fat of crocodile, fat of cat, fat of serpent, fat of goat, cooked in plants. And Ebbell has the advantage in his version of being a recent researcher in Egyptology.

x x x x

For the most part the remedies recommended are much more rational than might be expected of an age when incantations were still in daily use. For example, disease medicine is ordered to be swallowed; external applications are suggested for relief of pain; and in the diseases of the bowels inhalations are frequently suggested. Gargling is prescribed for diseases of the mouth and throat, and poultices and ointments for disorders of the skin. The actual form of the prescription was also all-form of the at present in use, although the mixing together and the of four are mixed and person is anointed therewith.

x x x x

The quantities used in the prescriptions, and in certain instances the actual substances intended, are still extant today. Allowing for the uncertainty of exact translation these are physicians, surgeons and gynaecologists, not sorcerers or conjurers, men who used superstitions; means to cure disease, or, to adopt modern terminology, "quacks."

The section on surgery is, in fact, almost entirely concerned with the medicines .... Nevertheless, the directions given for dealing with swollen glands in the neck are practically the same as the best of the possible cause and the various methods of treatment available. The ancient Egyptians must have reached a high level since they mastered to operate upon ruptures and upon aneurysms. Unfortunately details of these operations are not given. It is only said "thou shalt perform an operation." Wounds healed with that degree of suppuration which was considered normal in the days before Listerism, and it cannot, for example, have been until it passed from view in mid-April to reappear from May to July, that the Egyptians slayed the opposite side of the sun.

Though often referred to as a "star" Venus is not a planet in the sun's family. Like the earth, she is held in her position in the orbit of Mr. Stephenson, General Superintendent, by the sun. Venus was popular with his associates here and his promotion is well deserved.

Venus Reigns in March

The planet Venus has been star performer in the February drama of the skies, and will continue to hold the spotlight as queen of the night during March.

Nothing more than four hours elapse between the planet's setting and rising. Venus reached greatest eastern elongation on Feb. 5, but will continue to hold the post of "evening star" until it passes into view in mid-April to reappear from May to July, that the Egyptians slayed the opposite side of the sun.

Though often referred to as a "star" Venus is not a planet in the sun's family. Like the earth, she is held in her position in the orbit of Mr. Stephenson, General Superintendent, by the sun. Venus was popular with his associates here and his promotion is well deserved.

Knock Knock

"Knock Knock" is a game which every American housewife plays constantly. Of course, she has a maid "of sorts," she is not exempt from taking a large part in this front-door sport which, like procrastination, is such a "thief of time."

On her return to the smaller retail of the knocker, she is asking herself, not "Who's there?" but "Is that the butcher, the baker or the candlestick maker?" However, it may be the collector, who has a business mop or less legitimate at her door. Or, it may be a canvasser to benefit association selling tickets to the annual ball; a small boy selling the newspaper which every other member of the family has already remembered; the little neighbor, a small girl selling kitchen pot holders or artificial flowers; needle packets or a map, who wants to do a little work (or preferably none) about the house; the iceman, not enough to buy a couple of doughnuts.

The day begins with the baker. By the time the loaf has been despatched by the magazine-fed, the pantry shade after the baker man's new baby daughter, the back-door hunter is subconsciously replaced by man. By the time the back entry is filled with knock-kneed boys selling scrapbooks, beds and the like, the front-door knocker announces the expressman . . . or a man collecting money for some organization, or

My cousin Artie came home with me for supper today, being canned salmon and lettuce salad, me saying, I'm sorry we haven't canned salmon, my most favorite food, and Artie saying, Mine too, but I'm not about lettuce salad, that's my most unfavorite.

Then too, I said, and me said, Never mind the canned salmon—have lettuce salad instead, both of you, or you expect any more salmond, remembering the time Romeo McGuffey and his fellow Romeo McGuffey and His Readers." Copyright 1936 by American Book Company and used by their permission.

McGuffey's Readers

A seventh point in the supremacy of the McGuffey Readers is literary value. Many of the selections were written by the first school readers of the Middle West were completed. ... was all that known. Aesop's fables, Mother Goose rhymes, and Maria Edgeworth's adult-child literature were printed the catalog. Hans Christian Anderson's fairy tales, published in 1835, did not reach America for the early school readers.

Many of the selections were descriptive. ... were taken from experience actual or created in the new-found land. Doubtless many of the stories and descriptions in the First and Second McGuffey Readers were of McGuffey's own composition, such as "About the Beaver," "Reward and the Cat," "About the Peacock", "Squalls on the Ocean," "Fruit Oranges," were the stories he had told to his own and neighborhood children when he was holding informal classes in his home, putting into practice his new theories of teaching by the lectures of the community and exhorted all teachers in emphatic terms in the prefatory remarks of every volume to effect this science-like way.

The style of the language of both the original and selected stories was also very interesting to children. The rapid sequence of simple ideas in narration, the romantic factors in description, and the exciting appeal to imagination all exhibit McGuffey's anticipation and appreciation of the desires of interest and to make the readers superior to their competitors.

Even the earliest edition, book by book, the literary character of the selections was of high standard. "The great compendium of the first Fifth Reader," the author designed as an historical guide, a book of elocutionary exercises, a book of moral instruction, and a book of the amplitudes of the emotions of solid American youth by reading aloud with strict observance of the rules governing articulation, inflection, pitch, accent, rate, emphasis, and gesture. It was announced as a book of "Eloquent Selections in Prose and Poetry." It says, however, an excellent survey of the best literature of the English-speaking world.— From McGuffey's "Fifth Eclectic Reader and His Readers." Stirling.—The members and officers of the Women's Institute, Corner Orange Lodge enjoyed a splendid address on the Vimy Pilgrimage, given by Mr. Beryl Carmen, and some fine musical numbers and readings offered by a group of visiting artists on Wednesday evening of last week. About sixty were present at this, the first of such gatherings to be sponsored by the ladies, and many favourable comments passed from one to the other, regarding the fine program presented. Rev. James Bechtel, of Hawkon United Church, assisted as master of ceremonies for the evening and introduced the various numbers in his own pleasing style. Special music was provided at various points throughout the evening, by an instrumental trio consisting of Jimmie Armstrong, Bill Jones and Maurice Neil of Stirling. Artists also led in community singing, interspersed with a few humorous selections. Alex Part, well-known elocutionist of Stirling gave two splendid recitations and Bill Jones and Jimmie Armstrong offered a duet. The toast to the King was proposed by Mr. Reginald Rine, Master of the local Preceptry, and responded to. Mrs. Clancy proposed the toast to the guests, after an interlude of selections by the trio, which included a vocal solo by Maurice Neil and a humorous recitation by Mr. Armstrong. Mrs. Carter, the past speaker, Mr. Beryl Carman of Eldorado was introduced by the chairman, Mr. Carman gave a splendid and very interesting account of his trip to France with the Vimy Pilgrimage. One of the outstanding features set forth in his graphic address of organizing accomplished by those in charge of this great venture. Five great ocean liners carrying approximately six thousand people, and yet the venture was carried through with the least possible confusion. At the close of the address, luncheon consisting of sandwiches, cake and hot coffee was served and the National Anthem climaxed a most enjoyable program.

"HOW MUCH WILL A PACKARD COST ME?"
"ONLY $40 A MONTH, MR. JONES!"
Yes, I hear that the new Packard Six costs very little to operate. But what I want to find out is — how easily can I buy one?
The car you're driving now will probably more than cover the down payment. So you get your new Packard Six for only $40 a month!
SEND IN THE COUPON and you'll find that the Packard Six costs less to buy than you ever dared hope.
And here's more good news . . . the Packard Six can challenge any car for low-cost operation. This is true for two reasons . . .
First, because this powerful Six is unusually thrifty with gasoline. (Ask us to show you the actual gas mileage that local owners are getting).
Second, because the car is designed so simply that it costs very little to service. For example, most service operations can be performed on the Packard Six in less time, with less labor hours, than on cars lower in price!
And the Packard Six will not only need very little service but will last longer. This long mechanical life, coupled with the famous lines that keep Packards looking like Packards, make it the ideal car for the man who buys out of income.
So fill out and mail the coupon, and get the pleasantest surprise in motoring!

Poem for March 17th

IRELAND—A-CUSHLA-MA-CHREE

Dear Ireland! To-day in our memory rises,
Fond thoughts of the land whence our forefathers came,
So thy children abroad, of all ages and sizes,
With "The top o' the mornin'" now greet thee by name.
Fair Emerald Isle, in a setting of sea,
God's blessing upon thee, a cushla-ma-chree.

Dear Ireland! How oft have we shed tears of sadness,
At thought of the strife that has torn thee apart,
How welcome the news! How we'd hail it with gladness,
Could we see thee united, thou pulse of my heart.
Fair Emerald Isle, like a gem in the sea,
God bless thee and keep thee, a-cushla-ma-chree.

Dear Ireland! Thy beauty, in song and in story,
The sages have sung down the years of the past,
And the charm of thy culture but adds to the glory
Of a name and a fame which thro ages will last.
Fair Emerald Isle, from thy place in the sea,
Receive of our homage, a-cushla-ma-chree.

Toronto, Mar. 17th, 1937. —George Allen Kingston.

NOTE:—From the information at hand, who may possibly not know, the term "A-cushla-ma-chree" forms a Gaelic expression of endearment, commonly used in Ireland in much earlier days. Translated, the expression means "The pulse of my heart."—O. A. K.

The above poem was received today by The Ontario Intelligencer with the compliments of the author and permission to publish on March 17th.*

Sir Austen Chamberlain, Great Statesman Dies at 73

Political Triumph Was Drawing of Locarno Pact After War

CREATED A K. G.

London, March 17 (CP)—Britain honored in death today Sir Austen Chamberlain, one of the dwindling group of statesmen who shouldered the burden of Empire during the final three decades of this century.

The former Foreign Minister whose greatest triumph was the Locarno pact, died last night of a heart attack, aged 73.

His friends of all parties in the House of Commons, and the press, paid tribute to the man who, great son of a great father, held most of the important cabinet posts during a long parliamentary life.

Sir Austen's career reached its peak in 1925 when King George V created him Knight of the Garter in recognition of his work in securing the Locarno pact, that guaranteed the peace of Western Europe for a decade. He was the only commoner to be so honored, and was awarded a share in the Nobel Peace prize for his contribution to world security.

Sir Austen's death came suddenly. He spoke in the House of Commons March 3. For four days he had been confined to his home with what had been considered a minor illness. Shortly after six p.m. last night he left his bed to go to his library, collapsed, and did not recover consciousness.

"His absence from the House of Commons will reconcil with praises of the man who, in the language of The Times, "had a long, honored and honorable career....he never failed to adorn the high positions which are the proudest possession of this country in its political leaders."

Baldwin to Speak

Prime Minister Baldwin will lead the parliamentary tributes for his colleague in many years. He will be followed by Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor party, who will lay on his informal tribute that "we have lost a great parliamentarian and a very great gentleman. Everybody in the House had the highest respect for him; he was a man of the highest mined."

Member of the House of Commons since 1892, first representing East Worcestershire he took over the Birmingham West seat of his father, Joseph Chamberlain, in 1914 and has represented it since. With Lloyd George he shares the distinction of never having been defeated in a parliamentary election.

His father, the great Imperialist and proponent of fiscal reform, died a month before the Great War broke out. By that time Sir Austen was firmly established as a leader of political figure. From 1903, when he was made Civil Lord of the Admiralty he was rarely without office until 1921, when he resigned as First Lord of the Admiralty in the National government.

Born October 16, 1863, Sir Austen was a half brother of Neville Chamberlain, present Chancellor of the Exchequer and widely mentioned as successor to Premier Prime Minister.

Named Two Chancellors

It was the judgment of Sir Austen's friends, that he might have been Prime Minister on several occasions had he not placed party and country before his personal aspirations.

His tall, somewhat figure, with the inevitable monocle was known all over the world, either through his visits to Hollywood or the cartoons of caricatures. He visited Canada in 1928 and received the honorary degree from University of Toronto.

Twice Chancellor of the Exchequer, Foreign Minister from 1924 to 1929, Secretary of State for India, First Lord of the Admiralty and Lord Privy Seal at various stages of his career, Chamberlain also brought to the House as a private member in his closing years a wide knowledge that made his speeches ones to command respectful attention.

He did not hesitate to criticize the British government, in particular last year he accused it of reflecting the views of the Socialists with a major part in forcing the resignation of Sir Samuel Hoare from the Foreign Office after the Hoare-Laval plan to settle the Italo-Ethiopian war had disclosed in 1935. Lady Chamberlain and three children survive.

ALL-NIGHT RIOTING

Members of parliament filed notice of interpellations of Socialist Premier Leon Blum over administration for his handling of the riots, the most sanguinary in Paris in three years.

Strong cordons of police were thrown about strategic government centers to guard against riding political agitation.

Arrest Demanded.

Communists, enraged by what they called the "murderous attacks of Clichy," demanded immediate arrest of Col. Francois de la Rocque, leader of the militant right wing Croix de Feu, his French Social party, a meeting of which led to the demonstration, demonstration and the riots last night.

Authorities announced 94 mobile guards and Republican guards had been injured in the street battles during which mobile guards charged Communist barricades outside the Nightclub meeting place.

Three were seriously wounded by bullets. Eighty of the demonstrators were hurt when police charged with quire further treatment, and 140 police were more or less seriously injured.

The rioting flared at nightfall when thousands of Leftists attempted to prevent members of the French Socialist party — formerly the semi-militarized Croix de Feu — from holding a meeting in Clichy.

The Communist forces held the central square of the suburb until early morning when they retired before 2,000 police, mounted and mounted Republican guards, leaving the night in the streets of the battlefields scarred by bullets. Shops were wrecked, windows shattered and paving ripped up.

HUGE MUSIC HALL

Cultural Desired.

"Agriculturally and industrially," he said, "the Toronto exposition equals, if it does not surpass, anything of its kind on the continent. It is a pity that nothing musically cultural is offered to the thousands of persons who go there each year."

His suggestion was that the provincial or municipal, or federal, work together with the committee in charge of the exhibition and arrange the building of an auditorium large enough to seat about 8,000 persons, and in which could be held a form of music festival each year in conjunction with the exposition.

Magnificent Dream.

"It would be a dream fulfilled," he said, "and would not only benefit Canada culturally but would surely attract greater number of visitors annually."

"There is no reason why Canadian cities should not follow the example set by American cities like Cleveland, Hartford and St. Louis," he continued. "All of these have magnificent auditoriums and enjoy a season each year of the best in symphonic concerts and opera. Cities like Winnipeg, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Quebec, Halifax and Toronto, need adequate auditoriums such as these.

"Music stands on the threshold of opportunity because it is typically an art of self-expression and does it has that unique position, an understanding of music is necessary for the adequate appreciation or interpretation of any culture."

Remembrance of Teaching.

A basic reorganization of teaching procedure is needed, he said. "We have been more concerned with what our children did to music than with what music did to them or for them. Music in schools should be regarded with the same importance attached to mathematics; it is certainly as valuable to the development of a cultured mind."

Mr. Johnson commended the recent formation of an operatic guild in Toronto. He added reports he was actively connected with the project, saying:

"I will be always happy to advise them," he said, "and will help them in any way possible in this respect."

PUP 'CORONATION'

Alarm is Given

While her son, Arthur, who assists the widowed woman in running the cattle farm near Norwich, was away, Mrs. Kendall made a telephone police regarding the second loss of a pup. Constable Constable "Pat" Henry had reached the farm with the pup under his arm. The pup was delivered to the humble home near the Kendall farm and the grandmother had remained there when it followed them to the village.

Provincial Constable J. Clark left the pup with Tillsonburg police where Magistrate McCrimmon in a holding court to have him sign commitment papers for the incarceration of Mrs. Kendall in jail for non-payment of dog license. It is not known whether she will be allowed to take "Coronation" to jail with her. "I'll go in Sir Patrick's Day and come out Good Friday", was Mrs. Kendall's final utterance before she had been given time to "think it over".

Court action was made after a County Constable had called at the home of Mrs. Kendall to collect a reward for finding her pup. The widow explained she was not wearing a uniform and said she, therefore, felt free when she put his foot in the doorway as she tried to close the door. Constables said the defendant had been relieved of his duties and would not be replaced, but added there was no connection between this action and the Kendall case.

Dearth of Shamrocks

Dublin, March 17.—(CP)—There was a near-famine of shamrocks for Ireland's celebration of St. Patrick's Day today. Hundreds of acres of the little green plants have been buried under a heavy blizzard.

The shortage, however, failed to dampen holiday spirits. A military parade, sports, dancing, singing and feasting were on the program.

Undertake Long Walks

Toronto, March 17.—(CP)—St. Patrick's Day saw two veteran Toronto pedestrians step along the highways on their annual lengthy walks.

Herbert H. Davis, 68, started out on a 43-mile jaunt to Hamilton, planning to cover the distance in 13 1-2 hours. Charles Priestman, 76, left for Oakville, a 33-mile walk which he hopes to complete in six hours.

Fife Played in Commons

Ottawa, March 17.—(CP)—The Irish notes of "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning", echoed today down the long corridors of the House of Commons. A fife was the instrument the player Rev. Dando Mercer, an Irishman born and bred in County Armagh.

The Liberal House member for Port William left Ireland 43 years ago as the age of 21, but still remembers the celebrations that he attended St. Patrick's Day in his native land.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, or tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly thought to be a disease that is incurable and to master, requiring long treatment, care over a period for years of time. It can seldom be cured at home, but there is a consultation for this disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realized by the founders of the National Sanatorium Association, when they started their campaign to stamp out this terrible disease in Canada for the treatment of consumption.

Many people are sick with much spread that and even ridicule, for at that time the world believed that tuberculosis was incurable. It was just one of those things which had to be, as we say because.

However, it was not long before the scientific people were actually doing curing—going home with health about it.

This was the small beginning of the splendid work carried out by the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptives, which now provides for more than one thousand patients.

Great progress made and the change in nothing is more striking than the enormous decrease in the number of deaths from consumption throughout the Dominion, and by the large number of public and private organizations which are now engaged in the fight against this disease.

The results have been that Grosmonde Consumption Sanatorium has been given a chance to get well, who but for hospital treatment would be dead. Deaths from tuberculosis have been reduced by 75%.

With tuberculosis treated from the premier position to seventh place as the cause of death, it is now the most curable disease of all. Everyone is also the fight, the world indeed be a calamity, for tuberculosis is the cause of more deaths than all other diseases put together. With the continued co-operation of the people at large.

The Trustees of the Sanatoria, the Provincial Government and the Medical Staff for Consumptives are doing their part. It is now up to the other power, no one who has consumption should delay in seeking a chance to get well. If you would help in the great fight write to Dr. Bruce Fraser, 4 Gerrard St. E., Toronto, and ask for a free copy of "Reaching the Goal."

AT THE CAPITOL

Sylvia Sidney in "Woman Alone"

Once again that master craftsman Alfred Hitchcock, famous director of "The 39 Steps", brings to the screen a thrilling and absorbing melodrama in his latest production, "The Woman Alone", starring Sylvia Sidney and Oscar Homolka at the Capitol today until Friday. It is a picture of grand double feature bill. His many deft touches, coupled with a story of absorbing interest plus the outstanding acting of the stars places the picture in the forefront of highly exciting screen entertainments.

Based on a novel by Joseph Conrad, the action of the story is laid in and centres about the teeming city of London. Verloc acts as a secret cashier for her husband, the owner of a picture theatre and the quietest neighborhood of the city. Unknown to Sylvia, her husband is the head of a band of terrorists who have sworn to cripple the city by outrages, by the use of bombs and other acts of sabotage. Scotland Yard has a thorough knowledge of operatives to ferret out the ring-leaders. Verloc has a confidential shopkeeper next to the theatre to watch the theatre owner.

Sylvia, unaware of the mystery wife of the suspect, and her little brother, in terms of like mystery, love to come evenings and goings of her husband. The boy has planned to blow up part of the subway system, and Verloc uses Sylvia's little brother to carry the deadly missile. It explodes atop a bus, killing the boy and other passengers. Sylvia learns of the terrible accident and realizes it was her husband who sent her brother to his death. Confronting him, she stabs him to death with a kitchen knife and runs down the London and Yard man, now in love with Sylvia, begs her to escape and not to give herself up to the police, and while talking to her, accuses her of the murder. Sylvia, in terror of the mutilated body of her brother, sets off a bomb, blowing the dwelling to bits. Then in terror of the dead man, she bolts through the open door, and into the arms of Scotland Yard.

As the wife, Sylvia Sidney gives one of her best performances since her memorable portrayal in "Fury". While Oscar Homolka, who can previously in the role of Verloc in "Rhodes, the Diamond Master" and in "Sabotage" as the husband, is without a doubt one of the outstanding actors on the screen. John Loder as the Scotland Yard detective and Desmond Tester, who is featured as the boy in "Nine Days a Queen", play their roles admirably.

In Natural Color

For its first color picture, Republic has chosen the Sierra mountains in California when the Spanishare were the romantic, swaggering conquerors of most of the New World. The film "The Bold Caballero", which begins Thursday at the Regent Heather Angel, supported by a large cast is shown as his No. 2 on this year's program.

The vine-covered missions, white and adobe casas, tropical foliage, shrubbery and flowers, gaily colored costumes and horses provide an excellent background for this new flashing-eyed sensation, Heather Angel, in natural colors. The coloring is simply and naturally done, free from the gaudiness so often found in days of this character.

Cast in the two romantic parts are Robert Livingston, Republic's dashing action star and protege, and Heather Angel, who was introduced to American audiences in "Berkely Square" and has continued her success in scores of films since.

Livingston plays two contrasting parts with a versatility that he has never shown before. In addition to his part as Zorro, a masked, mysterious rider and son of Monterey, to the down-trodden peons, he also plays the role of Don Carlos, who is a banger-on at court, where Miss Angel plays the role of governess.

LINCOLNSHIRE STAKE WON BY AN OUTSIDER

Lincoln, England, March 17. — (CP Cable)—Mrs. G. Robinson's Marmaduke Jinks, an outsider in the betting, negotiated the Lincolnshire handicap, first major event of the English racing season today.

Second in the one-mile test was Martin Benson's Laureat II while E. Davey's Coldron took third money. Thirty-two horses ran.

Marmaduke Jinks, starting at 33 to 1, was ridden by D. Smith and finished a head in front of Laureat II. Coldron was two lengths back of Benson's gray.

Laureat II started at 100 to 7 and Coldron at 66 to 1.

HINDE AND DAUCH EARN 2-ALL TIE

Hold Fast Carrying Place Squad And Force Series Into Extra Game

Trenton, March 17 (Special) — Hinde and Dauch pulled the surprise of the season Monday night when they held a rampaging Carrying Place organization to a 2-all tie after seventy minutes of hard bought hockey. The Dauchmen featured one of the stiffest defences seen at the arena this season in accomplishing their feat. Bowen and Claude Rattan formed the bruising rearguard of the paperman's team and performed excellent in front of Steenburg their plucky little net minder. The Dauchmen were first to mark on the score sheet and at one time were two up on the Latourmen. Lost starry middle forward of the Hinde and Dauch first line secured the initial counter on a lovely pass from Derry.

With the one goal margin under their belts the Papermen relied on defensive tactics and for the entire first session managed to keep their opponents well in hand. The smooth working Carrying Place line of Davis, Johnson and Derry, combining with their rivals blocking until late in the second canto. Ten minutes after the middle stanza commenced Derry again scored through the Carrying Place outfit and Hinde and Dauch entered the second tally of the match. Both squads checked closely in the third period interval and finally Davis and Johnson broke away to beat Steenburg and register Carrying Place with its first count. The score was made after a lovely pass from Johnson, with only three minutes to go on the clock sounded to close the second period.

Davis and Johnson Beat

Davis and Johnson were the best duo that managed to register goals over the boards for Carrying Place while Lotz and Carmen Rattan combined to form the stellar exhibition for the Papermen. After four minutes of scoreless exercise of play in the final period, Davis wriggled through the Hinde and Dauch defence and knocked home the score on an ankle high shot that Steenburg had no hope of handling from the ice for two minutes charged with roughing a Carrying Place player. The penalty was the only one of the fracas. Shortly after with nothing to lose and a chance pleonatip to gain the Latourmen turned on the pressure and rained rubber at Steenburg in the Hinde and Dauch twine efforts but time for the remainder of the regular playing time. The Hinde and Dauch goaler rose to the occasion, and stopped all visible shots from all sides to keep his club in the race for the Courier Advocate trophy. During the first few minutes of overtime Steenburg was called on to halt a terrific number of drives from all the two former frames.

Fast hockey was a description of the brand of hockey displayed in the regular sixty minutes and each organization appeared to be satisfied with the split when the last bell tolled. These same teams battle on Wednesday night. Should Carrying Place win, the Ed Hinde cup will be awarded them but a Hinde and Dauch triumph will send the duo into the next game. Teams:

Carrying Place: Goal, Miller; point, defence Davis and Lemoine; centre, K. Davis; wings, Miller and Johnson; alternates, Vanderwoort, Drake and Anderson.

Hinde and Dauch: Goal, A. Steenburg; defence, Gordon Bowen and Claude Rattan; centre, Derry; wings, Carman Rattan and G. Derry; alternates, Finnegan, O'Malley, Wells and Hood.

COULD HARDLY RISE FROM HER CHAIR

RHEUMATISM RELIEVED BY KRUSCHEN

This woman was such a confirmed sufferer from rheumatism that she thought she would never get relief. But before she had finished one bottle of Kruschen her rheumatism was leaving her. Here is her letter: "I had rheumatism so badly that once I got into a chair I found great difficulty in rising again. A friend told me to try Kruschen Salts, but I thought it was no foolish idea to be persuaded to me to be nothing that would relieve rheumatism. My friend gave me two doses to try. I took one dose on Monday and another on Tuesday, and by then my pain had moved to another part of my body. Well, that was a good start, so I bought a bottle and it gave me great joy to find my rheumatism disappearing, and now for a long time I have been free." — (Miss) A. B.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently due to deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen Salts, by helping the kidneys, the sewers of organs to healthy, regular activity, enables them to expel this uric acid from the system.

BELLEVILLE GIRL IN CAGE TILT

Miss Eugenia May to Play in All-Star College Game

Oberlin, O., March 17. — Miss Eugenia May of Belleville, Ontario, and junior at Oberlin college, has been chosen to play in the 32nd all-star women's basketball game which will be held in Warner Gym this Thursday night, March 18.

The Yale-Princeton tilt which was started in 1905 is one of the oldest all-star games in the United States. Only the outstanding event in the women's sports season at Oberlin college since the 1919 early women have been permitted to attend; and Warner Gym, home of the co-ed, is annually jammed with more than one thousand, mostly co-eds and high school guests.

Miss May, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. May of 192 George Street, Belleville, Ontario, will play forward on the Yale team.

McVEIGH'S HAWKS KI-Y CHAMPIONS

Juvenile Section Won by a Score of 2-0

Jack McVeigh's Hawks triumphed over Ed Shapiro's Orioles by the score of 2-0 to win the Ki-Y juvenile championship of the Ki-Y League in a sudden death game played at the Belleville Arena last night.

In winning the juvenile championship of the city the Shapiro Hawks battled to a scoreless first period, locked in a tie score at the end of the middle stanza and Hall potted the title on ice with a third period goal for the game's only tally.

The line-up of the Champion Hawks—Goal, Cook; defence, Weber and Reynolds; centre, Storms, wings; Martin and Cowan; substitute, Ladd and McBride. The Orioles—Goal, Clark; defence, Bellinger, Shaddock; centre, Clare; wings, Gordon, Samain; subs—Kellaway, Doolittle and Farquharson.

Referee—Norman Barriage.

Lecompte Leads Team Mates In Scoring Points in Season

Lalonde Leading Defencemen

Flyers Averaged 5½ Goals a Game With Eric McNeeley Having Greatest Number of Goals Scored—Lalonde Served 38 Minutes in Penalties During Season—Records Given

(Compiled by Ken. J. Colling)

In their triumphant march to the Intermediate "A" championship of the O.H.A., and their two subsequent games in the Allan Cup eliminations, the H.C.O.S.S. "Flyers" played a total of 17 games, nine in the regular season schedule, six in the intermediate "A" O.H.A. playdowns and two in the Allan Cup elimination during which the team scored a total of 92 goals with 71 assists being successfully registered and resulting in subsequent goals being scored during the past season.

Leo Lecompte, centre player, led the scorers of the team with a total of 36 points, scoring 17 goals in 17 games, or one goal per game, and handing out 19 assists. Eric McNeeley, runner-up in scoring points, scored the greatest number of goals, however as he successfully defended the opposition goalkeeper on 18 occasions. Dan Cowley, Ernie McGregor, Jr., and Ken Lowrey followed respectively, while Johnnie Lalonde, stonewall defenceman of the Flyers, led his position-mates on the offensive and scored 14 goals, with nine assists, to give him a total of 30.

Average 5½ Goals Per Game

As a team the Flyers averaged slightly over 5½ goals per game during their playing season, but in the intermediate O.H.A. series, aside from the two Allan Cup games played, they averaged over six goals per game. Lalonde was the leading defenceman, serving 19 penalties, all minor ones, for a total of 38 minutes. Stan Partridge was first on an even number, minor penalties and one major, for a total of 34 minutes ruf. Lecompte was the only other Flyer to draw a major penalty, however. As a club the Flyers served a total of 192 minutes in the penalty box, or a total of two hours and 12 minutes, for an average of practically nine minutes per game.

During their regular O. H. A. schedule the Flyers played nine games, six with Peterboro, two with Belleville and one with the Toronto intermediates. In scoring during their regular group schedule Lecompte headed the goal and point lists, Cowley had 11 goals and ten assists, Eric McNeely, 14 goals and five assists, Lalonde, seven goals and seven assists, Ernie McGregor, seven goals and six assists and Lowrey, five goals and four assists.

During their six games in the intermediate "A" play-downs, however, the Flyers scored a total of 40 goals. Individually the scoring records of Eric McNeely found Ken Lawrence's Flyers in the play-downs read—McNeely, 7 goals and four assists, Lecompte, three goals and six assists, Ernie McGregor, seven goals and four assists, Lalonde, seven goals and four assists, John Lalonde, four goals and two assists, Lowrey, three goals and two assists and Roy Laing, two goals.

In the Allan Cup elimination games the Flyers scored but two goals, Frank Lowrey and Ernie McNeeley getting credit for the score, with Dan Cowley assisting on the latter.

In all of their games played this season in the O.H.A. and Allan Cup eliminations the Flyers were only whitewashed on one occasion, that being their final game of the season in Peterborough when the Sailors eliminated them, winning 5 to 0.

Gibson Splendid in Nets

Laurie Gibson, the Flyers' stellar goalkeeper was only the losing "goalie" throughout his entire career in the O.H.A. including the regular group schedule games and the O.H.A. play-downs, on one occasion, that being to Peterboro in a regular group game. In the O.H.A. play-downs, Gibson was the winning goalie on every occasion, except once, when the Flyers played the Toronto Pontiacs a twogame total-goals series to get their six play-offs in the O.H.A., tying with Pontiacs and won the intermediate championship series from Point Rivard in successive games, defeating Point Rivard at home 3 to 2 and winning in Belleville by the score of 3 to 1 thus bring the first O.H.A. championship to the Bay of Quinte District. They also eliminated the Gananoque "Aces" series.

Previous to their winning of the intermediate O.H.A. championship in the "A" series, the H.C.O.S.S. "Flyers" won the championship of the Kingston and District League, a pre-season league, that saw all Kingston teams participate. In that league the Flyers won nine out of ten games played to win the league honors.

MEMORIAL CUP SURVIVORS

(By The Canadian Press)

Because Stratford and Toronto St. Michael's College had to play off their game on a deciding winner in last night's only game, the list of teams seeking the Canadian junior hockey championship remained unchanged at 16. The Memorial Cup field, including nine teams in the East and seven in the West, follows:

East

P.E.I.—Charlottetown; N.S. — Amherst; Quebec—Montreal Victoriaville; Ontario—Kenora, Rideau-Copper Cliff, Stratford, Toronto St. Michael's College, Perth, Renfrew. West

Ontario—Port Arthur; Manitoba —Portage la Prairie, Winnipeg Monarchs, St. Boniface; Saskatchewan—Regina Rangers, Wesleys; Alberta—Edmonton Rangers; B. C.—Trail.

ALLAN CUP SURVIVORS

(By The Canadian Press)

When Moncton Maroons and Hull Volants met in sectional title last night the number of contenders for Canadian senior hockey laurels was reduced to 14. Today's Allan Cup field, made up of nine teams of the east and five in the west, follows:

East

N. B.—Moncton: Quebec — Hull Volants, St. Jerome, Victoriaville, Quebec City; Ontario—Sudbury Tigers, Port Colborne, Toronto Goodyears and Dominions.

West

Ontario—Port William; Manitoba —Winnipeg Packers; Saskatchewan —North Battleford; Alberta—Edmonton Dominions; B.C.—Nelson.

N.H.L. STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Aurel Joliat, Canadiens, who scored the goal that gave Canadiens a 1-1 tie with Maroons and clinched them a spot in the League championship playoffs.

Pep Kelly, Chicago, whose goals enabled the "Yankees" to defeat New York Rangers 4-3.

Leroy Goldsworthy, Boston, and Bob Davidson, Toronto, who performs each as Leafs and Bruins fought to a 1-1 overtime tie.

GRAND NATIONAL STANDS ALONE AS A MAJOR THRILL

Steeplechase First Run in 1837 And Accepted by Publicans

KING TO SEE RACE

Bookmakers Will Bet Your Choice Won't Finish Course

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Aintree, England, March 17 (AP) —You can take all your horse races from Bar One to Hasty Aside and jump them all together, and you still won't have anything like so fantastic and completely dippy in every respect as the race to be run here again Friday afternoon.

The Grand National stands alone. You can believe it or not, whichever you ever heard or read about it. There is a widespread belief the man who invented it had been reading Alice in Wonderland. The facts, however, are even "curiouser", Public race was originated actually by a group of high-spirited Liverpool publicans (broadly, alcoholdispensers) who needed something exciting to do one afternoon, and so decided to hold themselves a horse race. Being a lively set of men, they decided to fit it among the longest race on record, with many rail fences, hedges and creeks that are not to be narrowly jumped. They felt, too, that a course so testing as to be able to carry a full-grown man, like a publican.

The race hasn't been changed much since then, except that the course has "been altered and the modified very slightly and the tone of the grandstand and spectators improved somewhat. The King and Queen and Royalty are expected to be on hand this Friday.

Run Since 1837

As might be expected, nobody seems to know exactly how old the race is. This supreme test of horseand-man may score record books, had its inception in 1839, but the year 1837 is accepted "officially". So this Friday night possibly be its centenary.

Perhaps the simplest way of giving a graphic general idea of the "National" is to point out that several thousand bowler-hatted bookmakers scattered around the lawns and fields of Aintree pay out to and are out to bet you even money that your favorite won't get around the course.

Any horse that runs four miles, 856 yards and carries a heavy burden of 12 stone without scenthing coming home first is a winner. Eight or nine finishers out of a field of 30 to 40 starters in the Grand National is a good, high score.

The King's private stand is situated near the Canal course and turn, about halfway around the big-shaped course. The very best that can happen, about then. On a misty day (which it usually is) the King may have to wait some minutes to learn what horse is the winner, as it is close to a mile away from the finish line. But he will have seen some thrilling spills.

Indians flash, made up for this defeat, however, by taking the two mile run. Fenske's time for the winning finish was 4 minutes, 12.9 seconds.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

The reason the Sutton "Green Shirts" lost to the Belleville Rangers, they say, is because they were over-confident after eliminating the highly touted Greenshirts at Oshawa. That may be the Green Shirts' side of the story, but from what we saw of them we are still trying to fathom out how they ever beat Gravenhurst in the first place, that is if the latter team was as strong as they were reported to be. Of course we realize the Green Shirts will be a tough proposition to beat on their own small ice, but providing the Rangers play the same style of hockey they put on that race, then they should be able to defeat the Green Shirts by a comfortable margin.

The King's private stand is situated near the Canal course and turn, about halfway around the big-shaped course. The very best that can happen, about then.

On a misty day (which it usually is) the King may have to wait some minutes to learn what horse is the winner, as it is close to a mile away from the finish line. But he will have seen some thrilling spills.

Local fans desirous of making the trip to Sutton for the purpose of supporting the Redmen, could easily leave Belleville by motor at 6.00 p.m. on Thursday and be in Sutton in time for the face-off. We understand the road to Sutton is paved with the exception of some eight miles of improved gravel leading out of Cannington. The better route is to drive to Whitby and turn north on highway No. 12. It is practically a direct route, but you must turn west just north of Derrydale and proceed into Sutton. Manager Thomas is leaving at noon and taking the same team to Sutton, that won here. A little more covering up of their checks coupled with more accurate shooting the Redmen should return victorious, but they do not want to think they have a soft spot, because those Green-Shirted lads are tough medicine on their own home rink, we are reliably informed.

o o o

Two goals down, the Green Shirts will not be able to set up a fourman defence and play a purely defensive game, as they did here. They are down two and will have to force the play, thus giving the shifty Belleville "kid line" an opportunity to strut their stuff, for the Redmen win they may right into the intermediate finals.

o o o

The B.C.I. & V.S. intermediate basketball teams, the junior and senior boys only, leave for Toronto on Friday where they enter the O.B.S.A. semi-finals that evening. The Belleville Collegiate boys meet the winners of the Niagara District, while the B.C.I. seniors clash with the winner of the Georgian Bay winners. In the girls' groups the Picton C.I. seniors and the Trenton junior girls will represent the Bay of Quinte district in their respective play-downs at the same time. The successful teams on Friday night will advance to the O.S.S.S.A. finals on Saturday.

o o o

The Kingston Frontes are endeavouring to procure Richardson Stadium for their home O.H.A. diamond this season. The Frontes used the stadium along about 1924, but found the short right field barrier a handicap and also that the stadium was not constructed particularly for baseball. Perhaps a slight change in the direction of the diamond might remedy this fault, however. From what we can ascertain the going is to be rather torrid in the Central League this summer, every team having bolstered their roster to the hilt with imports from all parts of the compass.

o o o

If rumour has it learned, that Belleville was not officially represented at the semi-annual meeting of the O.H.A. on Saturday, then Walt Giroux enquired "how about Belleville then, will they be eligible to play with Napanee? It's their season's senior hockey town, you know! Upon receiving an answer in the affirmative, Walter at once proceeded to inform the native to Alex playing for the Gilbards next summer. Naturally Alex jumped at the chance and low and behold at the end of the season a hundred per cent old - Belleville National trio garnering fins in the outfield for the Gilbards next season. Art Scarlett has been in Napanee for the past two years and last year was just about tops in the class of the Intermediate in the C.O.B.L. Cliff Bennett is already booked in Napanee, as with the Gilbards Manager Haydon Wels, Coach Wall Gerow will have just about as fine a club as the chasers as could be desired. With Belleville and Napanee fighting it out, Bennett will have a rather easy time in the third field. The title fight should be interesting to witness. Judging by balls and their ability to hit them it actually as well as capsized.

o o o

Elsewhere in today's issue we have published the scoring records of the C.O.B.L. series for the season just passed. Unfortunately, however, we mislaid the goal scorer-against and were unable to find same. The Flyers played 18 games during their triumphant march to the intermediate "A" championship, winning 14, losing two and tying one. The Flyers lost to Peterboro on two occasions, once being when they took a make-shift team to the Lindsay City to complete the group schedule after having been assured of a group title. Laurie Gibson, Flyers' goalie, had the unique record of being the lone goalie to play one game during the intermediate "A" season, that being in Peterboro. Gibson was not between the posts when the pulsated on Teams was sent to that city. Of course in the Allan Cup play-downs that followed, the Flyers were the only team sustaining their only white-wash of the entire season at the hands of the Port Colborne "Sailors". Lindy Gerow was the leading scorer of the season with 36 scoring points, but Eric McNeeley scored the greatest number of goals, 18 to be exact.

o o o

The Stratford "Midgets' mulfed or fanned their golden opportunity to cop the Ontario Hockey title last night when they bowed to St. Michael's College 3 to 2 at home. The "Irish" were never headed and celebrated the "17th of Old Erin" gaily permanent. The fifth game will doubtless be played Saturday afternoon at Maple Gardens and a sterling torrid game can be looked for.

o o o

Much to the surprise of all concerned the Barrie juniors downed the Peterboro Colts 8 to 3 the other night and knotted the round 10 all. A third game will be played. The Colts and the Peterboro supporters received a rather frigid reception in Barrie, where it was alleged by the hoosiers, that the Barrie fans and their supporters were on the right end of a rather sharp deal in Peterboro, in the matter of accommodation and seats and a rough passage with Peterboro previously. The Barrie fans not only got sweet revenge, but closed the Peterboro's gang up like the proverbial trap. Incidentally we were always of the opinion that the second game of the O.H.A. play-offs must be played overtime and a winner declared if possible. Apparently Coach Bradland and his Colts were quite willing to call it a day at the end of the regular 60 minutes, however.

o o o

Two tie games were played in the N.H.L. last evening when Toronto stepped into the ring and balled the Bruins to a 1-1 tie, while at Montreal the Maroons and Canadiens duplicated this feat, Major McLaughlin's alleged 100 per cent Yankee hockey team surprised all and sundry by walloping the Rangers 4 to 2, however.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Johnny Gagnon and Aurel Joliat, the Canadian veterans, formed their respective sixth and seventh positions in the National Hockey League's Big Seven last night by gaining a point apiece while the Montreal pair were resting. Gagnon's 36-point total, four more than his linemate, left him seven behind the leading trio, Detroit's Marty Aurie and Marty Barry and Syl Apps of Toronto.

"Bucko" McDonald Must Be Reckoned As Barrier To Winning Stanley Cup

Husky Detroit Rearguard Still a Mighty Cog in Champion's Machine

By PHIL WARWICK

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Toronto, Ont., March 17— Forwards beware. That big, bad bomber of Detroit Red Wings is ready and anxious to get into the Stanley Cup play-offs again. It's "Bucko" McDonald, or, to give his full name, Wilfred Kenneth McDonald, who teams up with Ebenezer Goodfellow to form one of the hardest pitching defences in the National Hockey league.

In last year's Stanley Cup playoffs, which Red Wings won, "Bucko" played a large part in the victory. Little was known of McDonald until he began to throw his body to the puck, to throw his hefty form at oncoming forwards who had their eyes on the goal behind him. It was in the first series of play-offs against Maroons— last spring when "Bucko" really made his presence felt. His bowling over all comers but centred his attention on Maroons' ace centre player, "Stanley" Smith. Two stiff bodychecks from McDonald just about finished Smith for the remainder of the series.

Graduated From Lacrosse

"Bucko" acquired his great bodychecking ability while playing lacrosse. It was while playing that hard hitting game that hockey scouts spotted him, and he was on his way in the ice world. The season of 1935-36 saw him first with Buffalo of the International league, Detroit Olympics purchased him in mid-season and the following year he graduated to big-time hockey with the Wings.

Red the 195-pound defenceman is having difficulty with Manager Jack Adams. Last summer, reports received his 1936 contract and in it there is a clause which states that "Bucko" has to let Jack Adams deduce from his salary $50 for every pound he weighs over 195, and $100 for every pound over 200. The reason for this is due to Wilfred's enormous appetite. He is credited with being the most sincere trencherman in the major leagues, destruction of 14 successive hamburger steaks being one of the feats attributed to him. Adams is not taking any chances on his ace bumper eating himself out of the league.

McDonald was born near Ferguson, Ont., Oct. 31, 1913. He played his first amateur hockey in 1930, but specialized in lacrosse. He is five feet ten and a half inches in height.

Flying Habitants Capture Canadian Division Title; Meet Detroit for N.H.L. Crown

Tie Maroons 1-1 And Cannot be Edged Out of Position

LEAFS EARN DRAW

Chicago With Rookies in Lineup Score 4-3 Win Over Rangers

By A. K. FULFORD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Modern hockey's greatest comeback is complete today. Montreal Canadiens, the team that finished lowest in the National League last season, has captured the Canadian division title, and will meet the world champion Detroit Red Wings in the NHL play-down.

Little Aurel Joliat put the finishing touch to the Habitant performance last night, when he scored the goal, that gave them a 1-1 tie with Montreal Maroons, that point was all Canadiens needed to be sure of first place.

Canadiens Can Ease Up

Few had any doubt the team Cecil Hart rebuilt would finish first but Maroons had an outside chance to overtake them until last night. Now Canadiens can ease up and will they meet Detroit in the first game of the best-of-five series on March 23.

It was only fitting Canadiens should take first place after the grand fight they put up this season. A month after the season started they overtook the early front runners, New York Americans, and never left first place again.

Pete Lepine was out for a month and Johnny Gagnon was away for the same length of time but they never faltered. Then in January they lost Howie Morenz and also suffered the shock of their great teammate's sudden death. If they never get by three games with Chicago they still will have had a fine season.

LEAFS EARN TIE

The Canadien tie was the only important result in the three games staged last night. Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs played a 1-1 tie in Boston and New York battled the third. Then Jerry Shannon scored to equalize Joliat's counter.

Scored in First Period

Both goals in the Boston game came in the first period. Red Dutton opened scoring for Toronto and Leroy Goldsworthy for Boston. Play was fast and exciting through most of the game and Ned Hohner of Leafs and Bruin Charlie Sands, did yeoman work in the field of play in the teammates, put on a fight in the third, that got them both majors.

Chicago used their two American rookies against Rangers and although the youngsters didn't figure in the scoring they played well. Twice Rangers held a goal advantage but took it. Bill Kelly scored twice for Chicago and Paul Thompson and Doc Romnes got the other. Clint Smith, Lynn Patrick and Frank Boucher tallied for New York.

OTTAWA DISTRICT SENIOR TITLE TO HULL VOLANTS

Defeat Smith's Falls on The Round by a Score of 7 to 3

(By The Canadian Press)

Only one district of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association remained to be settled in championship playoffs today. Games tonight may eliminate two of the three contenders, representing their sections.

Last night Hull Volants won the Ottawa and District title by defeating Smith's Falls 6-3, taking the round 7-3. For the second straight year Moncton Maroons earned the right to represent the Maritimes, holding Berwick to a 1-1 tie after taking the first game 3-2. Hull and Moncton will start a two-game total-goals series Saturday in Allan Cup playdowns.

The Ontario Hockey Association still has three contenders battling its crown. Port Colborne or Sudbury Tigers will be eliminated tonight, when the two clash and Toronto Goodyears and Toronto Dentals will decide their series Monday.

Quebec Aces to Carry On

Quebec Aces will continue now to represent the Quebec Association, with directors not last night and agreed to ask the group executive for permission to carry on instead of entering a post-season series with Eastern Canadian and United States teams.

St. Jerome and Victoriaville will meet tonight in the second playoff of their total-goals round for the Quebec intermediate title and the winners will be eligible for senior playdowns. But Saints battled to a big odds one or the other would be little more than a formality for Aces. St. Jerome won the opener 6-0.

Tonight Winnipeg Packers and Edmonton Maple Leafs can win their interprovincial series with Port William and Nelson respectively. They won the opening game in the total-goals rounds Monday. The fifth western club is North Battleford, Saskatchewan winner awaiting its next opponent.

Kasson Scores Three

Frank Kasson contributed three goals to Hull's margin of four over Smith's Falls. Moncton was just able to hold on against Berwick's surprising Eureka, who got their goal in the third period from Foster's stick. Carroll scored for Maroons in the first.

If Moncton wins the impending Hull series, its next opposition will be the Quebec winners March 24. Volants will oppose the Quebec winners March 26 and 27.

Only one game was played in Dominion Junior hunt last night but it involved two ranking Memorial Cup contenders, Toronto St. Michael's College and Stratford Midgets. The result, a 6-5 victory for St. Mike's, left the respective round at two games each. The series, for the Ontario Hockey Association junior A championship, will end at Thursday evening.

Tonight Amherst can win the Maritime junior title by retaining part of his nine-goal lead over Charlottetown. Perth will earn the right to meet Ontario Rideau in Ottawa and District finals if it manages to beat Carleton by a four-goal margin over Renfrew. Maritime and Ottawa District survivors will tackle each another March 27 and 29.

NOT QUITE SURE

ROGERS HORNSBY

(St. Louis Browns)

Manager Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns, is having some difficulty trusting his own judgment on the playing ability of one particular member of the team — himself. Donald Barnes, Browns' president feels that Rogers is a drawing card and should be in the line-up as much as possible. Hornsby is not certain as to his fitness to play and so at Tyler, Texas has been appointed to return a verdict at the end of the training season.

Rangers were defeated 4-3 in New York by Chicago Black Hawks. But these results had no effect on the standing.

They were important to the teams fighting for points so they can choose their venue in the play-off games. Toronto and Rangers probably will meet in the series between third place teams and the Leaf tie pulled them on even terms with the New Yorkers.

In the game at Montreal Canadiens played listless hockey for the part they needed and held a goal lead from near the end of the second period until more than half way through

A bit of the cold Ostic . . .

The story of the memorable fight between Peter Maher and Kid McCoy, which is not in the books . . . These two cold spalpeens, beyond their fighting days were still deadly enemies, . . . And held nothing but contempt for each other. . . . A benefit card was being arranged by certain folks who thought it a good idea if the two could be thrown in the ring against each other. . . . .

A wise one drew Peter aside. . . . "Did you know, Peter," he said, "that McCoy called you an cold forest weed" . . . . Peter bristled . . . . "He said that" he roared . . . "Then and furthermore he said he licked you and you were the softest thing he ever tackled" . . . . Maher was speechless with rage. . . . "Peter" said his tormenter "there is a boxing benefit next week and all the oldtimers will be on the bill including McCoy" . . . . Peters glittered. . . . "I'll go on, if you let me box McCoy," he said. . . . .

The wise one approached McCoy with the same yarn regarding Maher. . . . He said that Maher had called him a ton of brick. . . . "Sure, an 'I'll fight, if you let me at that fathesded Irisher," he shouted. . . . .

Relics of their former selves, the old warriors crawled through the ropes on the memorable night. . . . .

"Remember, boys", cautioned the referee, "this is only an exhibition. . . . Use the soft stuff, please" . . . . They shook hands, squared away and sparred for a few seconds, . . . Then McCoy looked away, and ignoring Maher, looked around the crowd as if searching for someone . . . Maher watched him blankly for a while, then stange a trick . . . . At last he decided; it wasn't a . . . "Old fossil oh", he thought, rage swelling in his throat . . . . He took a step forward, and still McCoy did not move . . . . Another step and he was within range of the McCoy jaw . . . . He doubled his fist, brought it back for the blow from the cellar and let it go at McCoy. . . . .

But it never landed. . . . McCoy, one of the brainiest fighters that ever stepped in a ring, has assumed that attitude in the hope of luring Maher into a swing . . . . When Maher started the punch, which was to blast McCoy out of the ring, the Kid whirled out of range, and before Maher could recover, smashed a right hook to the Maher jaw . . . . Peter dropped as though he had been kicked by a mule. . . . The fight was over and the Kid had scored a K.O. which cannot be found in the books . . . .

Chiplets . . . Homer "Red" Townsend will loot the flute in the final series of the Picton and District Hockey League . . . Al Smith, sports writer of the Sudbury Star dropped into the office prior to the game on Monday night, and made a few caustic statements. . . . "We should have had a Dionne Quintuplet on each A . . . . In fact we didn't beat 'em, they beat themselves" was their style of play, that spelled curtains for them in that world famous Brewsheimil, when we beat them 8-4. . . . "They sent four men behind the blueline from the opening whistle and kept them there all through the game. . . . Even our eight goals were scored when our forwards broke away with only one man to beat" . . . . 'Tis was their own fault that they were defeated. . . . Other than that they were a smart hockey team, and with a little different management might have stopped the Leafs in the Championship Play-offs.

Pilate, hockeyists, winners of the Wellington and District Loop will battle the winners of the Milford-Rivards series in the Picton League for the county title . . . The O.P.'s will play their home game in the Wellington Arena . . . Aged, like murder, will out. . . . The Pembroke Lithic Limber Kings are of the classiest junior sextettes in the east, have been clamoring for a playing a player past the voting age . . . 'Twas ever thus. . . . .

Orlando, Fla., March 17.—Now that they know about it, New York Giants are well pleased with the 1938 National League ball. The new spheres, with a heavier cover and slightly raised stitches, was tried out without their knowledge in yesterday's tilt with the Bees. Result: One homer by Mel Ott and eleven other assorted blows for the Giants; Two boundary bells for Boston.

Clearwater, Fla.—It may not be an original remark, but Percy Beard, Brooklyn's new running coach, says the Dodgers have been getting off on the wrong foot for years. When starting from off first base, he explains, most runners start with the right foot first, although they can't take a full step toward second until they bring the left foot around. So, why not start with the left?

St. Petersburg, Fla. —Red Rolfe of the New York Yankees' star shortstop, apparently solved a problem when he made three hits against the Cardinals yesterday. His chief complaint has been that he never has succeded in hitting well until June and he couldn't find an explanation for the failure.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 17 (AP)—Same old Cardinals . . . Same old Pepper Martin . . . Just can't stop that fellow . . . He and his ball-field friends are making the Cardinal training camp here just about the liveliest in Florida.

Some of the natives may long for a few close-ups of the Mr. Dean, but Pepper and his pals won't let them. Miss even old Dizzy Dean.

First time he reported to a St. Louis camp, Pepper rode the rails. This year he showed up from Oklahoma in a hand made truck . . . If he isn't leading in wise cracks and roaring up and down the basepaths with the fireside open, he's taking on a cargo of baseball troubadours and going about serenading the citizenry.

MARKET COMMENT

The Trader in Barron's this week finds that the action of the list of 50 selected stocks have been over-expanded. In a general way, issues that are selling at a capitalization of 1936 per-share earnings in a ratio commensurate or higher than 1929, and which are not morally certain of equaling earnings during through the spring, should be avoided.

By the Dow Theory, the stock market is still in a major upward cycle, the culmination of which would, in the opinion of the warranted wholesale conversion of securities into cash by investors for a protracted liquidating movement. With that theory "Trader" has no quarrel, His thesis for some weeks now has been simply that speculation has been discounting the future too far and too liberally for permanent satisfaction, that human psychology as home and abroad has been crowded that, sooner or later will be shattered.

Brokers know, more patiently than ever before, that the one unpardonable sin is a recurrence of dalion to sell stocks short of the very top. For this reason alone, he fit causes the most anguishing of heartbreak is an almost undying resentment on the part of customers who will sit patiently with losses. As human nature never changes, that attitude still prevails. The market may be headed for much higher prices—no one knows. It may take several months to tell the story. Almost every major stock, however, except United States Steel common and the Standard Oils, has fulfilled the most optimistic price projections of insiders and therefore, at current levels the risks involved in buying seem out of all proportion to possible profits.

B.A. OH

The raising of the B.A. Oil dividend from 40 cents to $1.00 annually is due to the improvement in the company's earnings. Shareholders have every reason to look forward to another cash bonus at year end, the amount depending entirely on earnings results.

Sladen Malartic

As the annual meeting of shareholders of Sladen Malartic, Quebec gold producer, Andrew Walk, gave shareholders a pleasant surprise when he mentioned that at least 750,000 tons of 813 ore had been indicated. It had been generally expected from earlier indications that the ore grade would be $10 or slightly under $10 per ton. On the basis of 500 tons a day the company is assured of substantial earnings and profits should equal 30 cents or better per share on the outstanding capital. Profits would be more than doubled with a production of 1000 tons daily.

Leitch Gold Annual Report

Showing a bank balance of $40,-161, Major A. C. Springer, president, reported to shareholders of Leitch Gold Mines in the first annual report of the company.

Cost of development, including shaft sinking, crosscutting, drifting, stoping, raising, surface equipment, amounted to $144,667, according to the report. Gold bullion sold totalled $111,277, after deducting selling expenses.

Including the cash in the bank, the company's net current with the accounting to $459,902, including investments in investments at cost, buildings, prepaid insurance, development, plant, equipment and organization and mining properties.

"Your directors view the results of the operations during the period with a great measure of satisfaction and look forward with confidence to the future of the property", President Springer states.

Manager W. G. Hamilton in his remarks stated that he would recommend the sinking of a winze to be capable of sinking to the 1,500 foot level. This would enable further excellent possibilities of developing new ore in the vicinity of the diamond drilling east of No. 1 shaft and on other parts of the property", he said, "it calculate that down to the 725-foot level there is partially developed ore in sight of several thousand 16,113 tons of .90 gold ore."

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, March 17 (CP)—A sharp reverse ruled over the mining section of Toronto Stock Exchange with buying action bulking in a few of the leading golds. Kirkland Lake was the early afternoon feature as it jumped nearly to $1.25 for a gain of about 25 cents. Trade in the issue was heavy, McKenzie, Macassa, Lake Shore and Teck-Hughes also were active.

O'Brien and Hard Rock were offered down, the former sagging to around $8.65 before the late metals prices were a bit heavy for Noranda, Falconbridge, Hollinger, Bell Telephone, Beatty-Blackeys 21¼, Con Smelting 85.

receded slightly, while Distillers-Corp. Seagrams and McIntyre lifted fractionally. Dominion Government bonds were off a bit. Montreal funds held unchanged at 100.06% cents. On the curb, Lake Shore Mines was active, rising more than a point.

N. Y. Central led the forward tilt with an opening block of 12,000 shares. Well ahead also were Baltimore and Ohio, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Pennsylvania and Southern Railway.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, March 17—(CP)—The industrial list of the Toronto Exchange pressed forward for a narrow average gain but the action centred in a few issues. Canada Malting common was a feature, showing a turnover of 3,000 odd shares and a price gain of more than a point to 38, a new high for some years. The big distillery issues, Distillers Seagrams and Walkers Common also traded in quantity with Seagrams ruling higher.

Mixed Smelters were off slightly and early afternoon prices were lower by minor fractions for Smeltings, Noranda, Falconbridge and the steels, including United Steel Corporation and Dominion Steel were slightly weaker and the bridge stocks advanced.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR IRISH STATE

President De Valera of Irish State Issues Message

By EAMON DE VALERA

(President of the Irish Free State; Written For The Associated Press)

Dublin, March 17—Today is St. Patrick's Day five years ago the present government took office. Today, therefore, is a day of stock-taking, a day on which we may review the progress we have made in the years of our independence.

A few weeks later an opposition newspaper reported millions of pounds in profits which the Irish banks had been insured against riot and civil commotion by people who feared the effects of a change of government.

That was a direct result of the scare produced by alarmist declarations of opposition speakers. It proved groundless as did so many other alarmist forecasts and rumors of a similar character.

Instead of riot and civil commotion, the change of government brought peace and stability and the progress which has been made in every direction, industrial, social, economic and cultural.

Objectives Realized

In the five years since St. Patrick's Day, 1932, most of the immediate objectives we had in view have been realized. Recognizing that nothing short of complete independence for the whole of Ireland would satisfy the aspirations of the Irish people, the government proceeded on that basis and removed the last of the badges of subject to the British Privy Council and other provisions of agreements and constitutions temporarily of the Irish people which were incorporated in the constitution of 1922.

The new constitution to be submitted to the people this year will consolidate the constitutional advance made and affirm the right to basis for unity of Ireland and for better understanding with Britain.

As a recognized independent nation, Ireland could enter into special arrangements with Great Britain which would take into account the geographical, financial, economic and other conditions common to both nations. Without that independent basis such arrangements would be impossible.

WOULD LIMIT 'GAS' STATIONS

Legislative Committee Favors Amendment to Municipal Act

Toronto, March 17—The Municipal Law Committee of the Legislature approved a bill amending the Public Health Act to give municipal councils control over furnishings, irrespective of the materials used. The present act applies only to the use of hydrocyanic acid or cyanide compounds.

City Solicitor Colquhoun, Toronto, asked committee to approve an amendment to the Municipal Act to enable municipal councils to place a limit on the number of public garages and gas stations which may be licensed.

Fred G. McBrien, solicitor for the Joy Oil Company, declared the bill was an attempt to curb that company and maintain an monopoly in Toronto.

Fraser Hunter (Lib., Toronto-East) declared there was no competition would force hundreds of independent station operators out of business.

Municipalization of Stations

Dr. Smith declared the consumer would eventually pay for the municipalization of gasoline stations.

Hon. David Croll, Minister of Municipal Affairs, declared the principles of the bill was vicious. The principle of municipalities making enormous profits and nothing has returned to the public unless [illegible] is wrong.

"I don't care who breaks their necks in business and I don't care if it isn't the public," he said.

Mr. Croll said municipal councils to regulate trade, without supervision by the province would be folly, he said.

"If this bill will break the price of gasoline in Toronto," he said, "it's never been done before." He asserted there was no need for any special legislation but it should not apply to Ontario generally, as many people say at lows of competition," he said. "But I am afraid of such laws are compelling in their character."

The committee refused to approve a measure to permit municipal councils to license for dealers.

PICTON

Picton and District [illegible] to Address Rotary

Picton, March 17—F. F. Macdonald was guest speaker at the March meeting of the H. & S. Club, held in the Legion Rooms on Thursday afternoon. He chose as his topic, his own experiences in writing for more than ten years the Wells Gray Column in the Province, and the many stories of human interest, he showed, the curtailment of which was largely caused by intemperance, and the great power of prayer and trust in God. For the visitor, Rotarian Ward extended the appreciation of the club for the address. Community singing and a vocal solo by Mrs. Ward, accompanied by Nelson and Cowan formed the musical part of the programme. Mrs. E. Geary, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Ward and O. Walmsley were appointed members of the membership committee, as nominations will take place at the next meeting. Mr. Treasurer read reports showed that more than $30 had been spent by the club for milk for the [illegible] fund. The next meeting is to be a joint meeting with the Kiwanis Club, at which who will furnish a speaker from Toronto. In connection with this there will be a social meeting and refreshments will be served. The mothers of the Rotary Club, under direction of the Department of Health, who will be present to assist in the work in the near future.

Mr. A. E. Morden is confined to his home, Main street, with illness.

Mr. Cy Welsh returned to Oshawa, on Friday after spending a few days with his father., ex-Mayor Welsh.

Mrs. C. C. Winter, who has been ill, is some better.

Mrs. Bolton, tenant on Mr. John Ostrander's farm near Bloomfield, who underwent an operation for appendicitis, is doing well.

Mrs. Ernest Hall returned to Picton from Montreal on Friday. He attended the funeral service of Mrs. Hall's mother in Montreal on Thursday.

Miss Mary Delaney has severed her connection with Newman's Wholesale and left on Monday to accept a position with National Grocers, Belleville.

On the close of the weekly sewing meeting of the Guild of St. Mary Magdalene, held in the Parish Hall on Monday afternoon, an old-fashioned tea was served. Hostess was pleasantly surprised when a delightful tea was served by Mrs. Ernest Hall, Mrs. Thos. Shaw and Mrs. Chas. Patterson in honour of Mrs. Shaw's birthday. The tables were take with lighted green candles and [illegible] lilies, vines and the decorations carried out the St. Patrick motif. A very pleasant social time was enjoyed. Rev. C. C. Winter expressed the best wishes of the Guild to Mrs. Shaw, and replied thanking the three ladies. Mrs. Shaw received a gift. Fifteen members were present at the meeting.

Mrs. (Dr.) Chas. Thompson of Toronto, formerly of Picton, and early in May, for England, for a visit.

Birth—In P.E.C. Hospital on Tuesday, March 16th, 1937, to Mr. and Mrs. Cy Welsh, a daughter.

Mr. Stan Hutchings of Picton, and Mr. Hubert McDonnell Belleville, spent both very ill with pneumonia.

tural Products Marketing Act, the Minister of Agriculture outlined the Provincial Government's intentions.

Operating for a time under the Farmers' Creamery, these Farmers Association was able to collect money and Mr. Marshall said, there was no question as to great measure of success.

"It is only able to co-operate provided you have some powers of compulsion," he said. "You small minority people shy at laws of compulsion," he said. "But I am afraid most of our laws are compelling in their character."

Friendly Relationship With Buyer

He was confident that under the new Act the cheese producers would be able to work amicably with buyers. "We sincerely hope that under this act the men who produce the cheese will be able to work in a very amicable relation with the men who buy the cheese, for after all the cheese buyer is an important and valuable man, but if you are strong enough to handle your own business and at least dictate the terms to a certain extent you will be able to have it entirely his own way. You will both be better satisfied.

"We hope and believe that your Provincial and other organizations of farmers will be able to make bargains and conditions under which your products are sold that will be profitable to you and will also be profitable to the people who have to buy and merchandise your goods and thereby bring reason why you should not merchandise goods of as fine a character as across the line or wherever you undertake to sell.

Resolution Adopted

Sponsored by George Gardiner of Brighton and seconded by Councillor Cecil McAllister of Pendleton, the following resolution was adopted:

"That this annual meeting instruct the Cheese Patrons' Delegate to put into effect at the earliest possible date the following regulations:

"That all cheese manufactured in the province be sold only according to the method of an organized Cheese Exchange, and that no cheese shall be recommended for exemption by Cheese Board officials and the Dairying Superintendent for consideration of the cents-per-pound.

"Prolonged debate as to compulsion was given before the resolution on Cheese Boards ended in adoption of a resolution by Mr. J. Stewart and Mr. Peter Thompson that "cheese must be sold to the highest bidder, provided that the buyer can give satisfactory assurance he is financially able to pay for same."

A Crippled Child Cured Is Valued at $7,000.00

So Say Expert Statisticians — Interesting Report of Crippled Children Work by Rotary

Belleville Rotary Club reviewed its work for crippled children at the regular meeting Monday, surveyed the work since its inception by the club and made plans for even more extensive work in the future. President Joe Shortt occupied the chair and the speaker was Chas. J. Symons, Chairman of the Belleville Rotary Club Crippled Children Committee, since the beginning, and member of the Executive Committee of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. The Crippled Children Committee of Belleville Rotary Club is composed of C. J. Symons, Chairman, Dr. Van Blaklee, Mackenzie Robertson, J.A. McFee, J. R. Boyce

The history of Rotary efforts on behalf of crippled children was outlined by Mr. Symons in a very interesting manner, showing the great good that had been accomplished by united effort. One of the first to sense the importance and necessity of united effort in the cause of crippled children was Edgar Allen, of Menlea, M. Y., a retired business man, and an ardent Rotarian, who devoted his life to the work and was affectionately called "Daddy" by thousands of children who had been helped back to life and vigor through his efforts in their behalf.

Many Causes

A careful study of the causes underlying crippling of children has revealed that 31 per cent. come from injuries, 21 per cent. from rickets, 18.5 infantile paralysis, 9.3 amputations, 8 per cent tuberculosis, 8 per cent. malformation.

Sixty-three per cent of these unfortunates are crippled before they reach the age of 16 years, 37 per cent. after that age.

In the care and cure of crippled children only 20 per cent have to remain in hospital for any length of time.

Increasing Numbers

In the early days of crippled children work statistics showed that there was one cripple for every 1000 of population. Today statistics show that there are three crippled children under 16 years of age to every 1,000 of population.

Helping the Children

In 1923 ten Rotary clubs, of which Belleville was one, reported that they had aided seventy-five crippled children that year. In 1936 196 clubs reported that they had helped over 1,800 during the year. Statistics show that well over 7,000 cripples had been looked after in the last fourteen years — this does not include tonsils, adenoids or eye treatments.

In the treatment of crippled children it has been demonstrated that fifty per cent can be cured, 35 per cent made self supporting, while 90 per cent can be helped in some way to make life brighter for them and better for their parents. The ten per cent of incurables can be helped said Mr. Symons, by the personal touch revealed in visits and other little attentions so much prized by the afflicted.

The First Rotary Case

Belleville Rotary Club undertook its first case in 1921 and since that time more than 270 crippled children have received treatment through the efforts of the club. All have been helped and many cured. Belleville Rotary Crippled children committee does not confine its efforts strictly to crippled children but has helped many grown-ups hard pressed through injury, sickness or other disability.

Paul Harris, of Chicago, founder of Rotary, is one of the most enthusiastic supporters of crippled children work and President Franklin Delano Roosevelt has always taken a keen interest in all efforts to provide care and cure for the crippled child. Through the president's efforts millions of dollars are raised every year to endow the work of providing facilities at Warm Springs for the treatment, care and cure of infantile paralysis.

Shadows Turned to Sunshine

On account of the desire to avoid publicity by those benefiting from Rotary efforts, and their families, the public knows little of the great scope of this work and the many who have been benefited and transformed from dependents to community assets. Chairman Symons gave brief sketches of some of the cases and the success which had attended the efforts of the committee, sometimes in the face of stubborn family opposition and prejudice. Many cases had been treated at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, and treatment by specialists secured when necessary. Belleville Rotarians give time, effort and money cheerfully to make this work as efficient as possible, doctors, lawyers, dentists, optometrists, etc., give their services gratuitously and gladly, and great specialists in the cities are glad to give of their valuable time and experience to help the crippled children back to health and happiness, Withal there is considerable expense which can not be avoided, hospital fees, clothing, transportation, etc, and this is for the most part provided by the Rotarians themselves, with an occasional opportunity for the general public to assist, such as in the publication of the Rotary, Crippled Children Edition of The Ontario Intelligencer.

A feature of the address of Chairman Symons was a demonstration showing the worth of Rotary work. A young man on crutches, was a guest at the meeting. Beside him was a parcel. Opening the parcel an artificial foot was displayed. This the young man attached and triumphantly walked around the room without crutches or cane. So proficient has he become that he can even skate. His foot was provided some time ago and after consultation, treatment and the help of Belleville Rotary Club the young man is able to get around nicely as well as usual.

A young married woman on the verge of a complete break-down, was helped to a much needed vacation, examined at a chest clinic and treated at Belleville Hospital with splendid results.

Five years ago an ailing baby was given about one chance in a hundred of living six months. Rota efforts and specialist treatment have worked a miracle and that baby is a very active mite now, bright and happy and on the high road to complete recovery.

Both feet crippled a man was in desperate straits. Rotary help rolled the clouds away and assisted him to be self-supporting.

Another grown man, deprived of the use of his limbs, was given specialist treatment in Toronto, and helped materially back to health and happiness, and to a condition where he can help himself.

A two-year-old baby treated first two years ago, badly crippled, is now one hundred per cent cured.

A young man with brittle bones which broke at the least excuse was treated and cured and is now hale and hearty, married and raising a family. Isn't he happy, and all his kith and kin?

Another child, temporarily domiciled in Belleville, was treated at Belleville hospital as the instance of Belleville Rotary Club. The mother was brought here from a distance, met at the railway station by Rotarians and taken to the hospital, besides being given every attention and courtesy while she remained in the city.

Cripples, Physical, Financial

Many other instances could be given where health and happiness blessed the efforts of the Belleville Rotary Club in behalf of crippled children, and older folks crippled physically or financially. Instances cloaked in the kindly mantle of secrecy, as that even the most sensitive need not hesitate to take advantage of Rotary assistance.

Sympathy Sweet, Cure Sweeter

Crippled children have been cared for and cured not only in Belleville but in various parts of the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward — as far north as St. Ola.

In presenting the report for the crippled children committee for the year, Chairman Symons reminded Rotarians that in this work not only the child is helped, but the parents and home as well. This work is not a charity, said Mr. Symons, and cripples do not want sympathy. They do want the opportunity of being like other folks, and you men are making that possible for them.

There is a saying familiar to all workers for crippled children which says in effect that had it not been for the grace of God you and I might have been one of these unfortunates.

THE CASE VALUE OF ANY CRIPPLED CHILD THAT CAN BE CURED HAS BEEN PLACED AT SEVEN THOUSAND DOLLARS BY EXPERT STATISTICIANS AT WASHINGTON.

WHEN IRISH EYES ARE SMILING

Many is the Irish eye smiling today, St. Patrick's day—and many are the costume parties Lucille Ball, screen actress, shows you how she dressed for a Hollywood affair. Lucille designed this costume made with two folds of white crepe paper, while green crepe paper constitutes the bodice and trimmings. A tarlton underskirt and muslin underbody make the proper foundation on which to stitch the crepe paper. The top hat is of silver paper and the cane, wrapped with strips of the same. Shamrocks and gay ribbons are tied on.

91st Birthday Is Celebrated

Peoples are never too old or never too young to enjoy a birthday party with its excitement and good wishes perhaps. It is fo the very young and the very old that the pleasure is the greatest.

A goodly number of relatives arrived at the home of Mrs. Howard Dafoe on Wednesday, March 10th, to join in celebrating the 91st birthday of her mother, Mrs. Nancy Sine and to enjoy a delicious dinner complete with a beautiful birthday cake followed by an afternoon of pleasurable social intercourse.

Mrs. Sine is the daughter of Caleb Dafoe and Lanty Sharpe, having been born on the upper 6th Con. of Sidney. When five years of age, she moved with her parents, to a farm on the lower sixth now owned by Mr. Morley Sine. At the age of twenty, Nancy married Stephen Sine on the adjoining farm, where she resided for over half a century. Her husband was a great grandson of the pioneer Peter Sine. Mrs. Sine is a cousin of the famous Callendar Dr. Allan B. Dafoe, both being descendants of Michael Dafoe.

She is the only surviving member of a large family of nine. Her children, Percy, Lorne, Simon, Mrs. Beatrice and Raymond, all grew to manhood and womanhood, but the last four have predeceased her.

In 1917 she and her husband went to Frankford to live. Here they enjoyed a relaxation in the evening of their lives, when death, the grim reaper, called her partner home in 1926.

For the past seven years she has lived with her daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dafoe, on the farm where she had always resided prior to her removal to Frankford.

She has enjoyed the best of health and vitality, falling eyesight and up until about three, or four months ago, assisted with some light household tasks. Each Sunday still finds this great old lady in her accustomed seat at Church. Although almost total blindness now prevails over from independent activity, she continues to accept life with the same cheerfulness and peacefulness of mind that has always marked her life. She is contentedly spends her fireside hours with her memories and visits on the radio, which my daughter recently bought for Mrs. Sine's special entertainment.

Among those present were the only two grandchildren, Ross and Grant Lott, and three great grandchildren Allan, Joyce and Doreen Lott; Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Ross Lott; Mrs. Geo. Bell; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Sine; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moon; Mrs. Harvey Dafoe; Mrs. H. Yeleman and Miss Marion Glennie.

All joined in wishing that the remainder of her life would be filled with sweet content.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays. It just clogs up the bowels. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Poisonous poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get rid of this bile. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get them you, gently but surely. Dr. Carter used them for 40 years. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c.

"Silent Barriers" is Splendid Canadian Film

Silent Barriers, the film epic of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which had its Empire premiere under the patronage of Her Majesty Queen Mary, and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin, in London recently, and its Canadian premiere in Montreal, and which depicts one of the most important chapters in the history of the British Commonwealth of Nations, will be shown in theatres from coast to coast during the current month. The story, based on Alan Sullivan's book "The Great Divide," brings back and vitalizes the titanic struggle with nature waged by the giants of pioneer railroading in this country, and particularly in the seemingly impossible task of thrusting the road through the Rocky Mountain barrier. The story has a tremendous Canadian historical value, as well as being first rate entertainment. The film, a Gaumont British production, was made at Revelstoke, B.C., and in the surrounding mountain area. It includes such great stars as Richard Arlen, Barry MacKay, Antoinette Cellier, Lilli Palmer, Donald Smith. Picture No. 2 shows one of the tense moments of the play and is a scene between Richard Arlen and Lilli Palmer.

"I shouldn't," he answered very quietly, and went on without another word.

It was five o'clock when Mathews' car drove up to The Haven. They had stopped several times on the road to allow Caesar to rest, but he was looking better than he had since his illness as he was helped (quite unnecessarily) from the big limousine. He looked at the house—not at all a beautiful house—but solid and cheerful—and then he turned round toward the sea and drew a deep breath.

"This is Nirvana!" he said fervently.

"What's he mean?" Effie whispered to Bruce, but he only shook his head. It was a perfect day—and the sea was a sparkling blue beneath a cloudless sky.

The house was only a hundred yards from the shore, which one reached across a rough piece of ground which Mathews informed them he had purchased in order to prevent the creation of bungalows, which would spoil the view.

Heather had gone into the house to be a note of proprietorship in his kindly voice; and she thought that perhaps he believed this new proof of his generosity would inevitably break down her resistance.

"In a minute!" she called back gaily and turned away as Effie burst into the room enthusiastically.

"There are two bathrooms, " she said in an awe-stricken voice. "And there's an enormous garage with room for four cars."

At supper time every one was instinctively happy and cheerful. Jolin had arrived by train, looking rather odd of the seaside picture in his neat blue serge suit, but he woke up sufficiently to make a formal speech to Henry Mathews, thanking him "on behalf of us all" for his great kindness in making this holiday possible.

And then Bobbie, carried away by his own exuberance, rapped the table and called for a reply and Henry rose, laughing and self-conscious, and said that if they were all half as pleased to be there as he was, he was completely satisfied.

Perhaps unconsciously he looked at Heather as he spoke, and she smiled and assured him that they were all wonderfully happy. She could feel that from the other end of the long table Bruce was watching her but she carefully avoided his eyes, though once, when she saw Yiletta slip her hand into his she lost her color and forgot to answer when Bobbie spoke to her.

But on the whole it was a very happy evening, and although she had rather dreaded the night, Heather slept soundly, tired out with emotion and excitement.

Instalment 30

For a week there were long glorious days and heavenly nights, and Heather was feeling wonderfully well. She spent as much time as possible out of doors, she had given up wearing a hat and following her sister's example, sometimes went bare-footed. She was so terribly happy, though sometimes as she watched Yiletta she would suffer a moment of unbearable pain which needed hard fighting.

She could see, although she tried to blind herself to it, that Yiletta generally took the initiative, instead of Bruce; he was attentive and affectionate, but not Effie remarked shrewdly one day, "I thought the men always did the love-making."

Heather did not ask what she meant, but Effie explained grudgingly: "Bruce doesn't, it's all Yiletta! . . . She takes him for a walk, doesn't take hers; she calls him darling, and he never calls her anything. It's not my idea of being engaged at all." She looked at her sister considerately. "Yesterday," she said, "I heard Mr. Mathews call you 'Heather'."

"Did he? That's nothing very dreadful."

Effie wriggled her bare toe in the warm sand. "It sounded all wrong," she pronounced after a moment.

She was silent for a moment, then she said, "And Yiletta's been writing had a telegram from Paddy Jepson, but I don't call that much when she's engaged to Bruce. And she wrote to Paddy every single week, I suppose the next thing will be that he'll come down here and spoil everything."

"I thought you liked Paddy."

"Well—I do, in a way, but we're quite happy without him."

Effie left her, and Heather leaned back against a warm sand bank which Bobbie had built for her and looked out to sea. Yiletta and Bruce were standing on her face and bare arms, and the soft voice of the sea was a lullaby but she did not sleep—her mind was too active.

Wasn't Yiletta happy?

"Do I intrude?" a voice asked behind her and she opened her eyes with a start to Henry Mathews' smiltering face.

Heather sat up hurriedly. "No, of course not—I wasn't sleeping I was just distinctly conscious of it."

He lowered his big body awkwardly to the sand beside her. "Happy?" he asked.

"Very—so all are."

There was a pause, then he said, "I suppose it's time I went home—I meant to stay only a week."

"Oh, but why? Don't you like being here? After all, it's your house."

He laughed a little awkwardly, "I've never been so happy in my life," he said simply.

He picked up a strand of seaweed, still wet from the receding tide, looked at it as if it were a great curiosity, and threw it away again.

"Why can't it go on—for the rest of our lives," he said.

Heather looked steadily out to sea. "You mean—?" she said slowly.

"You know what I mean."

Funny how her heart was racing and yet she had never felt calmer. It was as if everything had taken her to the edge of a high precipice, some one whom she trusted, and was saying, "Jump, and I'll catch you—you'll be quite safe," and as if she confidently believed it. Yes, she would be quite safe, she knew that—and she was not afraid, but for a moment she kept perfectly still before, very gently she moved a hand, laying it on his—on the big broad hand with its many freckles.

"Very well," she said.

Henry Mathews made a little inarticulate sound and wiped his forehead with a soft handkerchief with a chief.

"You'll never regret it," he said huskily, "I told you I'd be good to you if you'd ever have me, and I'm a man of my word."

She looked at him with a wavering smile. "You'll be marrying the family."

Mathews chuckled. "Bless my soul, I love the family," he said, "love 'em as if they were my own, even that saucy baggage Yiletta. Do you know," he half turned to face her, his face beaming, "it was always my ambition when I was a youngster to marry and have half a dozen kids. The idea was at the back of my head all the time when I began to make money."

"Why didn't you marry?" Heather asked.

"Because I never met a woman I fancied—till you came along." There was a little silence, then he said, "I was afraid of you at one time, you know—you seemed . . . somehow, somehow" he looked up at the sky, "right above me, like the day your father was taken ill, and I saw the tears in your eyes. That settled me. (I'll ask her,' I told myself, and I did."

He thrust a hand into the pocket of his flannel jacket. "Mind if I smoke?"

"Of course not."

It gave her an odd feeling of tenderness to see that his hand shook as he tried to light his pipe, and again the thought went through her mind that this man was real and that with him she would be quite safe.

He went on talking, telling her little bits about his life—of its struggles and disappointments, and she listened with silent sympathy, the last of her dread slowly drying away.

"It's been uphill work all my life, he said simply, "but I've got my reward." And then he asked, almost painfully, "Can we tell them?"

Heather nodded. "Yes." She smiled and held out her hand. "Pull me up, please."

He lumbered to his feet and lifted her as if she had been a child. "You're very unhappy?" he asked wistfully.

"Never with you," she said.

They walked back to the house and found Caesar stretched full length in a deck chair by the front door.

"I was just telling myself that it is time for a little liquid refreshment," he said mildly. He had quickly discovered that Henry's cellar was by no means empty, and at invitation it had become a sort of rite that in the middle of each morning he and his host should share a bottle.

Caesar's knees smacked his knee delightedly. "Bubbly, this morning," he said. "I told Jennings to put it on the ice." Then, frowning there would be a celebration."

Henry chuckled. Caesar questioned with dignity.

Henry looked at Heather, then at Caesar. "We thought you fancy me for a son-in-law?" he asked.

Caesar's voice as if suspected a plot to deprive him of his daughter. "Son-in-law!" Caesar repeated after. "When there is at most a year's age and difference in our ages?"

Henry chuckled. "Can't be helped," he said soothingly. "You've no reason to object if Heather doesn't mind, she doesn't, bless her heart! Do you, my dear?"

Heather looked from one to the other, his face a study. "Is this supposed to be humorous?" she asked.

Heather took his hand. "It's true, dear," she said. "Mr. Mathews has asked me to marry him, and I have said 'yes.' That's why I'm not only a whipper.

Caesar sat down again, holding his brow. "And what, may I ask—will become of me?" he demanded pathetically.

Henry took the matter in hand, and his face beaming, he went to Jennings to bring the bubbly," he said over his shoulder, "while I explain to your father that I am really marrying the family."

The family said a great deal about the engagement in very different ways. Yiletta was obviously grateful, John bewildered, and Bobbie delighted and not quite sure whether he ought to be. Effie burst into tears and ran away. Bruce, in the midst of the clamor, standing with his arm round Yiletta and looking over the sea, turned suddenly to Henry with outstretched hand.

"I congratulate you sir," he said.

And through it all Heather looked on a little pale, but smiling determinedly, although she secretly felt herself brimming with glass of champagne.

Later, alone, was later on, down-right in her disapproval. "What! That girl! That baby!" he said, forgetting her manners. "Old enough to be your father, indeed! Why, I'll tell them what I think of the whole affair myself!"

"Darling," Heather said very tenderly, "he's so kind — and he loves us all. You think what it means for any one to be willing to take us all to live in his house — not only me, but Bruce and Yiletta and—and Effie and Bobbie and John?"

"And me," was on the tip of her tongue, but she stopped in time. "We're all going to live at Mr. Mathews' house," Heather explained to her lover as if it were a new idea, "and—and it's quite impossible for us to live in his house — not only me, but Bruce and Yiletta and—and Effie and Bobbie and John?"

"And me," was on the tip of her tongue, but she stopped in time. "We're all going to live at Mr. Mathews' house," Heather explained to her lover as if it were a new idea, "and—and it's quite impossible for us to live in his house — not only me, but Bruce and Yiletta and—and Effie and Bobbie and John?"

"Well, I'm not living there, and that's that," Priddy retorted. "Living there and standing on end's not comfortable for sacrifice yourself! . . . You think I don't know why you're doing it, my dear. Pride! I ain't a fool and she can see through most windows, I'm thinking. They've got the blinds down. Oh, Miss Heather, don't do it, my dear, don't do it!"

She was the most difficult of them all to cope with, but in the end Heather won her argument. She had been keen about that—"it went against the grain," and that is not quite what it means for Henry's sake.

She thought thankfully that the worst was over, but later in the evening when Heather had gone into her own room — ostensibly to put on a cardigan — for The Haven was frightfully chilly — Yiletta suddenly linked her arm in Heather's and said, "Let's go out," she said, restlessly.

Instalment 31

Heather and Yiletta went down to the sea and walked along the sands. Neither spoke for some time, till Yiletta asked abruptly:

"Heather — do you hate it very much?" And then, as her sister did not answer, she said, "Of course I know why you're doing it."

And the silence fell again until Heather — "What a curse money is. If you're poor you're not happy, and if you haven't, you're miserable. I think you're miserable anyway—at least most people are."

"But you're happy?"

Yiletta shrugged her shoulders. "Oh, I suppose so—I've got what I wanted—anyway—at least—"

She stopped, and Heather said, "At least—what?"

"Only that nothing ever seems as wonderful as you think it's going to be. Oh, I know I talked a lot of sentimental rubbish that night—before we left Tasso . . . I believed in it then, I really believed in it, but now . . . ." She stopped abruptly.

Heather did not dare to ask what she meant, though presently she made a half question. "Perhaps we all expect too much—for our selves, I mean, I know I do."

"You!" Yiletta said impatiently. "You're an angel of unselfishness. You want to be loved, is it? "And then there was another happy break before she said sullenly, as if the words were forced from her. "And you're going to love me."

"Oh, Yiletta!"

"It doesn't," the younger girl insisted doggedly. "Do you think I don't know? She never kisses me unless I let him see that I expect him to—he's never called me 'darling'—or anything that I long to hear." She laughed angrily. "That's an admission, isn't it? And it's true . . . I often think how I told you that I would make him love me—and that I knew I could . . . well, I haven't and that's all about it."

She took her arm away from Heather's and moved aside, facing her.

"Do you think he loves me?"

Heather did not answer, and Yiletta laughed and walked on again.

"You see! . . . and you know him better than I do, at least I suppose you do so . . . What was he like seventeen year ago, when you and he were sweethearts?" she asked suddenly. "Oh, you needn't mind telling me—I can't be hurt any more than I am now, and I want to know. I want to see him as you were ever before—to—to rouse more feeling—more emotion in him than I can. Other men have been sexy enough—but Bruce—" She made a despairing gesture. "He isn't a lover at all—he behaves just like an ordinary friend." She laughed rather pitifully. "You see what a pass I've come to, to be able to tell you all this—I'm not really very good at turning myself inside out — but sometimes I feel as if I should go mad when—when he . . . Well! you don't answer," she said suspiciously, "so I've got to make me no believe that it's just my imagination when I think he's so cold—and quite indifferent. It's not as if I were plain—or stupid . . ." Her voice trembled ignominiously.

Heather's heart ached for her. "He was so much younger—when I knew him," she said. "And when people are young it's easier—isn't it?—to be romantic. You see me—I wasn't quite twenty then—and I was much younger than girls of twenty are today."

Yiletta broke in impatiently: But Bruce was twenty-four, and that isn't a boy."

Then her mood changed suddenly and she laughed.

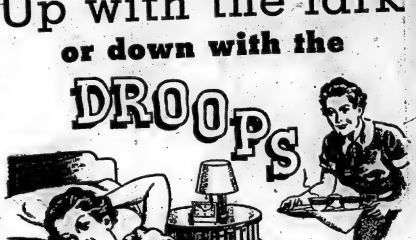
Let's go to town —at home!

NO TELLING what tomorrow's weather may be... It fools the best forecasters. But we do want that chintz for the windows. We do need a carpet sweeper, a new percolator, and a new end-table in the living-room... And we DON'T want to slosh around rainy streets to hunt them.

Problem: How to thwart the weather man.

Simple enough!

Let's sit down by the fireplace and read the advertisements. Here it's comfortable and snug. We'll take the newspaper page by page, compare prices, qualities, brand-names. Tomorrow, rain or shine, we'll head for the store that has what we want, and be home again in a jiffy.



"Buying at home"—through the advertising columns — gives you wide selection, more time to decide, and satisfaction when you decide. Make it one of your pleasant habits!

Up with the lark or down with the DROOPS

WE all know who is Public Enemy No. 1 when it's time to get up! The "Droops", You want to get up, but the "Droops" won't let you. But what a clearing of the mind and a brightening of the senses when you take your early morning cup of refreshing, stimulating tea!

It does more than just take the taste of sleep out of your mouth. It stimulates you—gives you zest and zip in the healthiest possible way. Doctors say that—but of course we all know it from experience. And after your cup of tea, you're not up in the skies one moment, and down in the depths the next. The feeling lasts. And see what an appetite and what a good digestion you take with you to breakfast.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Roger's Press Agent

By Mark Healey

Roger True always had dreaded parties, but that night of the Shaws' dinner party was a particular cir-cumstance. The charming Mrs. Shaw favored him with a beaming smile and Mr. Shaw, whom he had met only once before, had treated him like an old friend. After that show-ing and he had gone arm in arm into the dressing room while Mrs. Shaw had presented him to the other guests.

"I do want you to meet Mr. True," she would say to one of the young women. "Roger True, you older people know. It's a great treat to have him with us." Or to another guest, "Molly, dear, this is our friend Roger True. You and he must have a chat together."

And then Mr. Shaw would again taking his arm he led him to the next to two of the older men. "This is Roger True," he told them. "He's doing great things at the Durand plant—put over that new dehydrated potato idea." And Roger did not forget all about his sandy red hair, his spectacles and his large awkward hands, and felt as much at ease as he would have felt at the Durand plant.

Naturally Mrs. Shaw didn't present him to Stella. Rose hesitated him to Stella. Rose hesitated him with us." Or to another guest, "Molly, dear, this is our friend Roger True. You and he must have a chat together."

And then Mr. Shaw

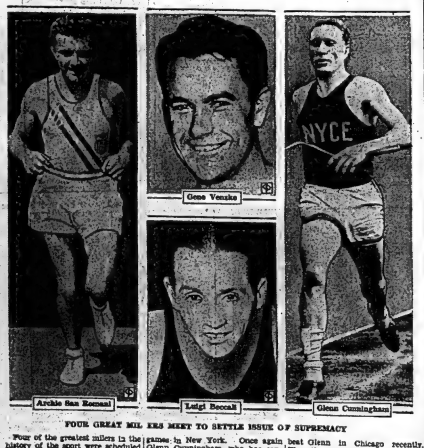
PASSES UP $50,000

Clarence A. Dykstra, city manager of Cincinnati, has accepted the presidency of the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, Wis., to succeed President Glenn Frank, ousted by the board of trustees. As city manager of the Ohio city, Dykstra received an annual salary of $25,000. The presidency of the university pays $18,000. Dykstra was made practical dictator of Cincinnati while the city was ravaged by the recent floods.



FLIES WITH AMELIA

P. J. Noonan (above) veteran trans-Pacific flier, will accompany Amelia Earhart Putnam on the first two legs of her trip around the world. He will leave the aeroplane at Howland Island, the first stop after Honolulu. Harry Manning, another navigator, will go as far as Darwin, Australia with the woman flier.

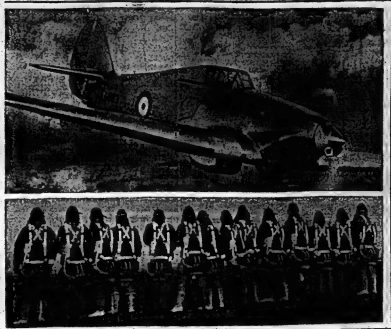
At the top of the ABOVE photograph is the giant four-engined clipper of the type already in use, which will make the test. The solid line in the map shows the present trans-Pacific clipper route to the Orient.



FOUR GREAT MILERS MEET TO SETTLE ISSUE OF SUPREMACY

Four of the greatest milers in the history of the sport were scheduled to compete on the boards to settle the issue of supremacy in the Columbian mile, feature of the annual Knights of Columbus track games in New York. Once again Glenn Cunningham, who has captured the event four times in a row, will be rated the No. 1 man, closely pressed, however, by Archie San Romani the Emporia, Kas. star who beat Glenn in Chicago recently. The others in the four-man closed event are Gene Venske, veteran Pennsylvanian and Luigi Beccali, of Italy.

1937 SPRINT THREAT

Sleepy Sammy Richardson of Toronto is fast becoming an outstanding threat for eastern Canadian supremacy as a sprinter. Last year Sammy couldn't convince himself that he would ever go anywhere on the track, so he stuck to the broad jump. Now the Toronto boy holds the United States indoor broad jumping record, but he is more interested in sprinting. At Hamilton, Ont., recently he romped off with the 60 yards event, beating a strong field of contenders. Richardson is also considered a formidable opponent for the far west's sprinting trio of Howard McPhee, Lee Orr and Bruce Humbly in 1937.

BRITAIN SEEKING CANADIAN RECRUITS FOR ROYAL AIR FORCE

Introducing Britain's highest peace time air estimates to the House of Commons in London, Sir Philip Sassoon, undersecretary for air in the Baldwin cabinet, issued an invitation to Canada to co-operate with the mother country to assure an adequate supply of well-trained pilots for the Royal Air Force. Sir Philip suggested that Canada adopt the policy of Australia and New Zealand, where budding airmen are first trained as cadets at home, then sent to England to complete their training as air force pilots. Canadian airmen believe that many young men in the Dominion, with flying aspirations, would be willing to participate. There are estimated 150 Canadian student fliers already in England, who have made their entry to the R.A.F. on their own finances. A group of fliers in training is shown here taking parachute exercises as part of the pilot training course in England. At the TOP one of Britain's speediest modern fighting aeroplanes is pictured. So many new machines have been or will be added to the fighting service that the need for more and more trained pilots is acute. This machine has retractable undercarriage and fully enclosed cockpit. Sir Philip Sassoon who enunciated the British hope for Canadian assistance in securing recruit fliers, is at the Right.

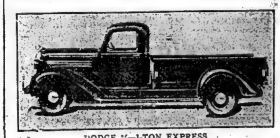
Dave Irwin, 26, member of the Explorers' Club and hero of a 2,000-mile dash across the Arctic ice cap, is planning a similar trip for 1939 but this time he expects to reach the North Pole. He will also verify Admiral Peary's accomplishments, at present the subject of considerable argument.



YOUNG ALBERTA MISS IS TYPING CHAMPION

Claimant of the world's crown for speed typing in her class, seven-year-old Reta Louis Elder, of Raymond, Alta., pictured here at her machine, has already won international fame through her ability to type 120 words a minute without effort. The young typist had her first typing training with a number of other children in a kindergarten experiment which included spelling and writing. The young Alberta miss recently made a tour of the United States where she was hailed as a marvel, but though she practises regularly at her typewriter, her general education is not being forgotten. Her general average is 91 per cent.

ALL RAILWAYMEN'S BALLOTS EXPECTED IN TODAY

'Close to 100 Per Cent' Ballots Marked for Strike Says Board Spokesman

117,000 Rail Workers' Ballots Not All Yet Received

WAGE DEMANDS

Men Stand by Minority Report of Cut Restoration

Montreal, Mar. 18 (CP) — First session of the General Conciliation Committee of Canadian Railway-men, meeting to consider the question of a coast-to-coast strike, ordered today without a vote on the strike proposal.

All strike ballots from the estimated 117,000 rail workers were not in the committee's hands at noon adjournment, but expected arrival of all the ballots by the end of the week was hoped by union leaders to bring the conference closer to a decision.

Pre-Strike Opinion Favored.

A strong pre-strike opinion, meanwhile, reflected the claim of union chiefs that ballots already in pointed strongly to pre-strike sentiment among the rank and file. In the event of strike refusal to vote was held to their wage demands.

The deadline for ballots are "very close to 100 per cent" for a strike if the report of the board spokesman is to be granted, the spokesman said after the noon adjournment.

The railways today agreed to gradual return of three per cent of the wage cut restorations, in line with the majority recommendation of a one-man conciliation board inquired into the dispute. But they have refused to follow out the board's minority report, which called for the full return of the reductions by the men's end.

KING'S PROCTOR SEEKS DIRECTIONS

LONDON March 18—(CP)—The King's proctor, in what was interpreted by legal authorities as a step to remove the last legal barrier to Mrs. Wallis Simpson's divorce decree, applied today for instructions on procedure to the President of the Divorce Court, Sir Boyd Merriman.

No details were disclosed.

Tomorrow's official court cause list contained the following entry: "Undefended divorce case: Simpson, W., vs Simpson, E. A., (Application by King's proctor for directions)."

The hearing is fixed for 10.30 a.m. (5.30 a.m. E.S.T.).

The step was considered unusual because the routine method of handling undefended cases, such as that of the Simpsons, is automatic announcement of a final decree six months after the judge's advocate's case is handed down.

In May, Simpson's case, this would be April 27. She received her decree nisi from Mr. Justice Aldrich Simpson at Ipswich, Sept. 27, 1936.

EXPLOSION FEARED UNDER FLEET STREET

Toronto, March 18.—(CP) Fleet Street, a principal Lakeshore thoroughfare was closed today for one mile because officials feared an explosion might be caused by cigarette smoke from persons believed to contain gasoline and oil fumes from nearby refineries.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen Science Service Meteorologist

Equable temperatures! Those who live in the temperate zone in yearly temperatures will find many reasons to realize their wish. Equable temperatures are found in general in more than the temperate zone. The Pacific coast, from California to Alaska, inclusive, the states bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, have excellent examples of relatively small yearly ranges in temperature. The mean temperature in Louisiana, for example, vary from a daily average of 62.1 degrees in February to 81.4 degrees in August. The variation is smallest on the Gulf coast and increases somewhat in northern sections. Also the extreme maximum summer temperatures there are not usually so high as to the interior of the country.

Telephone 99 For Hockey Scores

For the benefit of the readers The Ontario Intelligencer has completed arrangements to receive period scores of the Belleville-Kingston hockey game tonight.

Owing to the lateness of the hour at which the game commences the scores will be available until at about 8.15 p.m. It will be useless to call prior to that time and the readers are urged to co-operate in this matter.

Claude D. Vine, City Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer will be receiving the game personally and will relay the period scores over the telephone immediately at the completion of each 20 minutes.

The sports department of this paper will be on duty to relay the information and it is hoped the facility as it is received.

Telephone 99 for the results.

HALF DAY STRIKE CALLED IN PARIS

All Workers Warned to be Back on Jobs By Noon

Copyright, 1937,
Paris, March 18.—(CP)—Havas)—Two million workers who struck half a day in protest against the activities of the Fascist parties went back to work promptly at noon today, according to reports received by the Havas agency.

Peaceful demonstration of their strength, officials explained by the strike.

The strike began moving at 11 a.m. when the subways resumed. At noon the first crowds appeared on the streets and taxis began accepting passengers. Workers poured back into factories and shops throughout the city.

By The Havas News Agency

Paris, March 18.—(CP-Havas)—Nearly 2,000,000 workers went on strike today, immobilizing the capital in a mighty anti-Fascist demonstration from which all threat to the popular front government seemed removed.

Except for a few small processions, which were dispersed by gendarmes, the demonstration was orderly and confined almost entirely to the appearance of police, the strike leaders declared confident. Despite this distributing the Paris-Midi were arrested in a few cafes and other newspapers appeared as usual.

In a statement hailing the demonstration of solidarity, the Federation or Unions of the Paris district declared: "The strike is to be back at their jobs by noon and not to allow any provocations of those who, against the workers' interests, may demand prolongation of the strike."

The last-day general strike, called as a protest against the killing of five workers in riots at Clichy suburb last night, extended to transport facilities in the city and closed all factories and most shops and offices. Essential public utilities were started on by reduced staffs. Not even members of the Chamber of Deputies, due to meet this afternoon, could reach the Bourbon palace and the session there had to be called off.

TWO INJURED AS 200 WORKERS IN OSHAWA STRIKE

Employees of Coulter Company Request Higher Rate of Pay

PLANT PICKETED

President of Plant Says Strike Caused by "American Agitator"

Oshawa, Ont., Mar. 18 (CP) — Committee members representing striking workers of the Coulter Manufacturing Company here, announced today they would appeal to Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Labor, to investigate wages paid by the firm, manufacturers of parts for General Motors.

Oshawa, Ont., March 18.—(CP) — Workers of the Coulter Manufacturing Company, which employs more than 200 men and makes parts for the General Motors Plant here, struck over wage scales today. One man was knocked unconscious last night, and another injured, as pickets tried to keep strike-bound plant open. Police reported order was restored after violence.

Thirteen 50 and 100 workers were laid off last officials of the Oshawa branch of the United Automobile Workers of America who called the strike said almost every employee had signed union cards. Pickets will be removed today as 250 employees who voted to strike, union officials said.

Demands of strikers included:— Workers laid off more than 30 days, $1.20 cents an hour wages for 10 hours work; $1.40 cents an hour hourly rate of 50 cents for other workers; seniority rights in layoffs; right; and six-hour day and time-and-a-half for overtime.

Conciliation board to be named. In the plant have been 20 cents an hour for men and 14 cents for girls, union officials said.

Night Shift Laid Off

Albert E. Coulter, president of the plant, said in a statement the trouble was caused by an "American agitator". He said a night shift was laid off for two or three months each year during the peak period and that this year all the work was caught up the workers laid off.

As the rush was over the night shift was discontinued. The night at the plant had a monthly supply of stock ahead. The regular day shift, he said, would be kept busy and would be kept at full time.

Mr. Coulter said he could probably have to work some overtime.

The night shift started their overtime period last night the discharged employees picked the picket line, although no force workers from entering. Several were arrested when starting the picket. Mr. Coulter said.

Workers marched to local relief offices after the decision to stop work had been made and asked for relief. Mr. Coulter, in a statement, said some were given relief and others have been given work. He said he had been over but each case would have to be considered and investigated individually before final decisions were made.

Brantford Plans to Reforest Outside of Its Own Limits

Would Set-up Board to Preserve Water Supplies

'CLAUSE TOO WIDE'

Toronto, Mar. 18 (CP)—Plans of the city of Brantford to undertake reforestation efforts outside its own limits, were placed before the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature today.

A clause in the city of Brantford private bills provided for the municipal council to set up "the city of Brantford's reforestation committee" to have power to hold and control land necessary for the purpose of preserving water supplies and for establishing game sanctuaries, the commission to have three members, two of them to be professional engineers, a quorum of two to be necessary sponsoring the project.

The committee decided the clause was too wide and instructed its redrafting for consideration Tuesday.

"Everybody seems to help, but there must be some limitation," said Hon. David Croll, Minister of Municipal Affairs. "This bill would allow you to go anywhere in Ontario. It requires money."

H. L. Cummings, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, said the purpose of the Bill was commendable, but they were not ready to say what they propose to do in this bill are two entirely different things."

Captive Balloons Guard Against Bombing Fleet

Invisible Wall of Balloons Trailing Wire Streamers to Provide Protection to London And Coast Against Raids by Bombers—$3,000,000 to be Spent on This Type of Defence.

Oxford, March 18.—(AP)—New facts about Britain's first line of defence against death from the air by a virtually invisible wall of captive balloons trailing wire streamers—have been disclosed by Professor F. A. Lindeman, one of the Government's chief aviation advisers.

He drew a word picture of 10,000-foot balloons to each mile of guarded territory to bar the approach of an enemy bombing fleet that, would not know that there until they had struck the treacherous, twisting wires.

Even without casualties from bone-crushing airplanes and anti-aircraft batteries, the most determined enemy would find the cost too heavy, he believes.

Then far the government has thrown a cloak of secrecy around its plans. It has disclosed only that it will spend $3,000,000 on a balloon "barrage" over London, and this information was given only in the air estimates.

But, it is known that the trucks from which the balloons are to be controlled already have been built, and an authoritative source said Wednesday that the first units with sufficient lifting power to raise the cables and wire streamers hanging from the balloon, will be placed in the next few months.

Cost Not Prohibitive

It will not be necessary to throw up a balloon barrage around the entire 8,000-mile coastline, Lindeman said. Enemy planes coming from the continent probably will follow the most direct route because of the lesser load of fuel and bombs.

As during the great war, he asserts, the danger zone is the 400 miles from Southampton on the South Coast north to Newcastle.

"The cost," he says, "will not be prohibitive. Each balloon will cost five hundred pounds. The balloons probably will be raised only at night. If enemy planes come in the daytime they can shoot them down."

Lindeman said some technical problems remain to be solved. In addition is the "remote possibility that an enemy Squadron might fly around the barrage, a move likely eventually is that it would be able to be over it.

Pointing out that the "ceiling" of bombers has risen from the 10,000 to 12,000 feet limit during the war, he says, to 30,000 or 25,000 feet. Lindeman said "I should send the balloons as high as I could—if possible to the ceiling of the bombers."

How high the British balloons can carry their cables Lindeman declined to reveal, but he pointed out that the Prussians designed a balloon which can rise to 25,000 feet.

Pope Condemns Communism As 'Ruin of Family, Society'

Claims Only Catholic Church Can Effectively Oppose It

RIGHTS OF WORKERS

Vatican City, Mar. 18 (AP)—Pope Pius XI condemned communism as "the ruin of family and society" in a lengthy encyclical issued today.

The Holy Father, in his address attack on the forces he has fought even throughout his recent illness, declared only the Roman Catholic Church can effectively oppose the principles of anti-God campaign which shakes society to its very foundations".

He devoted several paragraphs to demonstrating how the Catholic Church in the family and the state was the best equipped agent to combat Communism, which he asserted will precipitate one and all to ruin and catastrophe.

His encyclical, starting "Divini redemptoris" accused the Communists of having plans to "upset the masterpiece of the working classes with principles of alienating future unrelentless attacks.

Christian Employers Besought.

The Holy Father called upon Christian employers to combat Communism by recognizing the inalienable rights of the working man".

He urged employers throughout the world to stand in the front lines of the battle against Communism and exhorted lukewarm Catholics everywhere to renew the active practice of their faith.

The Pontiff pleaded with all Christian states to prevent within their territories "the ravages of the anti-God campaign".

An official resume of the encyclical quoted the Pope as writing:

"The doctrine of Communism is founded on error and whoever accepts it rejects all spiritual values.

"Thus, man's liberty is destroyed. All rights of his human personality are denied.

"Man becomes as if he were a mere cog in a collectivist machinery which has exclusive and unlimited control over the lives of men.

"Hierarchy and authority are nullified. The dignity and indissolubility of marriage is set aside. The family is pauperized, woman torn from her home and from the care of her children.

"Religion is dubbed 'the opiate of the people' and is used as a weapon at hand.

"Every idea of God is rejected and condemned."

False Ideal of Justice.

The Holy Father's declaration said the possibility of "so obviously an erroneous doctrine" securing a widespread foothold was due to a "false ideal of justice and equality which the Communists has held out to the masses, promising alleviation of many inequalities (Continued on page two)

368 OFFICERS AND MEN TO REPRESENT CANADA

London, March 18—(CP-Havas)—Canada will be represented at King George VI's coronation ceremonies by 368 officers and men from its army, navy, air and Royal Canadian Mounted Police according to figures issued today.

The Canadian detachment will number 22,500 men drafted from home and overseas forces to participate in the "crown of the empire's forces."

On Tuesday, infantry will send 36 officers and 215 men. Four officers and 36 men will represent the Royal Canadian Navy, with eight officers and 32 men from the air force. Five officers and 36 men will represent the mounties. Their mounts also will be brought to London.

Royal Maundy To be Given At the Abbey

BY THOMAS T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

London, March 18 (CP)—As Westminster Abbey is closed in preparation for the coronation ceremony of distributing the Royal Maundy will take place a week from today at St. Paul's Cathedral. Last year the King and Queen attended the distribution in person.

Maundy money—specimens of both sexes corresponds to the number of the King's years. As the King is in his 42nd year, there will be 42 recipients this year.

The money is distributed are silver penny, two-penny, three-penny and four-penny pieces, all specially struck for the occasion. Recipients, who are all aged infirm, find it a handy aide for a set of Maundy money, which is much prized by collectors.

In addition the pensioners receive a gift of clothing, equivalent to the Sovereign's gown worn on the day of distribution," with other allowances in place of old-time gifts of clothing.

Trillium Grandiforum Planned for Ontario

Toronto, March 18 (CP)— The Trillium Grandiforum was unanimously approved by Ontario's floral emblem by the agricultural committee of the Ontario Legislature today.

W. J. Gradhouse (Lib., York West) who sponsored the bill for the choice in the legislature, said the Ontario Horticultural Society with 80,000 members urged the Trillium. There was little discussion and the bill will be reported to the House for third reading.

CHEESE PATRONS HOPE FOR PRICES PAID IN BRITAIN

Increased Returns to Restore Industry to Former Proportions

PRIVATE TRADE

Dr. Barton Speaks on Functions of Association

Kemptville, Ont., March 18—(CP) —The Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association heard a suggestion today to obtain for producers prices now being paid by consumers in Great Britain, a plan termed "simple" enough to ensure a "satisfactory" Oakland, Calif., flight.

The concluding sessions of the Association's Kemptville meeting yesterday approved the address of G. R. Green, Ontario Agricultural Representative for Oxford, who said "the consumer price for our cheese in Britain is ample to give our producers satisfactory prices. It is your job to get it."

Increased Returns

Increased returns, said Mr. Green, "is the solution to bring our cheese industry to its former proportions." Private trade, he declared, "will buy all the cheese we can send. They complain bitterly that they are not sending it over."

Prospects today were that the Association would continue its work of promoting the sale of cheese under the name of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. A proposal to change the name from "Patrons" was approved by President A. W. MacIntyre. He said he did not want to create misunderstanding.

Executive Named

The Association concluded its convention with re-election of the executive with the same slate as last years. The members are A. W. MacIntyre of Finch, R. H. Kennedy, Ingersoll; E. J. Pyear, Stirling; George Gerding, Keeley Mills; J. L. Bertrand, Hammond and S. L. Joss, Belleville. The executive will name the other 14 to make up the slate. Mr. MacIntyre has been president. Mr. MacIntyre has been president.

Dr. Barton, director of the Nutrition introduced by Cecil Mc-Allister, Pendleton, expressed the interest of the interest taken by federal and provincial governments in the work and their financial assistance. Resolution was passed commending the provincial directors of dairying take action enforcing steps to prevent the sale of cheese defective in fall cheese.

Speakers were Dr. R. Barton, Nutrition Division, Ottawa; Miss Culture; W. B. Somerset, Director of Dairy Products, Ottawa; and G. R. Green, Ontario Agricultural Representative for Oxford.

Foundation of Association

Dr. Barton dealt with functions of the association in relation to leadership and education and urged co-operation. Producers, he said: "You are not in a position to replace the trade. You have to deal with the trade probably on a somewhat different basis by the co-operative. Do this kind, and that is desirable, but you have to deal with the trade as much to be lost from unnecessary antagonisms of the trade."

Tobermory Men in Rowboat Dare 15 Mile Trip Through Ice

Fire Signals Indicate Party of Five on Ice Island in Danger

TUGBOAT FAILS

Tobermory, Ont., Mar. 18 (CP)— Fire signals on Yeo Island, about 15 miles off the Bruce Peninsula, indicated that four Tobermory men on a fishing expedition were marooned on the island, it was feared today.

Fire Signals Seen

Residents of the Bruce Peninsula town saw the fire signals last night. Early today efforts were made to reach the island.

Hoyesyt, it is hoped a sea-plane will be available shortly.

Men Cutting Timber.

Toronto, Mar. 18 (CP)—Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests, said today his department had received a telephone message from Tobermory asking a plane be sent

C. Davis, Tobermory town clerk, said the men in the rowboat hoped to reach Flowerpot Island where they would transfer to a gasoline launch for the rest of the trip to Yeo Island.

The town clerk said the men on Yeo Island spent the winter cutting timber and before leaving determined to use fire signals if anything went wrong.

Man May Be Hurt.

"It is possible one of the men is hurt," said Mr. Davis. "We couldn't use the tug because of the ice and the government didn't want to risk it equipped for landing near the island. It would have to be a sea plane as we don't think it's possible to land on the island."

Tousle-Haired Aviatrix With 'Flying Laboratory' Exceeds 150 Miles Hour

Plane is Fitted With Every Device For Safety

WEIGHS 8 TONS

Sixteen Hour Voyage Across Pacific is Without Incident

Honolulu, T.H., Mar. 18 (AP) — Amelia Earhart, 39-year-old globe-girdling "Flying Laboratory" at the Wheeler Field at 9:39 a.m. P.S.T. today (11:39 a.m. E.S.T.) completing her 2,400-mile over-water hop from Oakland, Calif., in less than sixteen hours.

The tousle aviatrix and her crew of three averaged better than 150 miles an hour on the flight which began at 5:42 p.m. P.S.T. yesterday.

Oakland, Calif., Mar. 18 (AP)— Racing smoothly on a 27,000 mile round-the-world flight, Amelia Earhart's "Flying Laboratory" soared completed its 2,400 mile Pacific hop to Hawaii.

The tousle-haired aviatrix is accompanied by three male aides.

Flying Laboratory.

Overtaken and left behind were two great trans-Pacific flying ships.

One is destined for Australia's to carve an air route to the Antipodes. The other hopped off for Manila already linked to the United States by a commercial air line.

In clear weather, 8,000 feet above the quiet evening, the streamlined "Flying Laboratory" sped along early today under Miss Earhart's pilotage.

"Everything okeh," she would radio Pan-American officials.

Then, her voice informed Pan-American Airways radio listeners that not "we cannot hear you" when the airways sought to contact her by radio. At other hours of transmitting her listeners, she quickly added:

"All is well."

At Wheeler Field, U.S. army air base near Honolulu, workmen rushed improvements to greet the aviatrix, who flew from Hawaii to Oakland in 1935.

A hundred soldiers were detailed to handle crowds at the field gate and wishing her success on the rest of her world flight which she made the data valuable to possible new commercial airlines.

The Pan-American clipper, commanded by the veteran trans-Pacific flier Capt. Edwin Musick, was overtaken about an hour after Miss Earhart left Oakland. The big ship was bound for Australia to pioneer a new route.

Capt. Harry Hopper, headed for Honolulu on a regular flight to Manila, was overtaken by the Earhart plane. The aviatrix. She was many miles north of the course of the two other airlines' radio beam.

Accompanying the aviatrix were Paul Mantz, technical adviser, who will leave the plane at Honolulu; Fred J. Noonan, former Pan-American pilot who will go as far as Manila; Capt. Harry Manning, also of Honolulu; and Capt. Harry Manning, who will act as navigator to Port Darwin, Australia. Miss Earhart will continue alone.

The trim, all-red, all-silver monoplane is fitted with every possible instrument for safe and efficient flying.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Denver, March 18 (CP)— Mrs. Marie Gedes Jagel who never had been outside the United States, was a German citizen for 15 years before she left Europe.

When she married in 1923 her husband was a German citizen. But he was naturalized several months later and Mrs. Jagel thought that made her a citizen again.

Applying for a passport recently, however, she learned a law had been passed in 1922 and that her husband was naturalized, wherefore wives were not affected by their husband's nationality.

But a U.S. citizen, Mrs. Jagel restored her citizenship quickly.

Cashmere, Wash., March 18 — (CP)—Glenn Rose, of Lewiston, Ore., won the veterans of foreign wars flying turkey shoot with a lucky tale.

He said he shipped six carcasses of watermelons to market last year one melon on each car. The melons burst, the bridge and juice from the broken melons caused a bridge washout.

"I salvaged the seeds, 89 feet long," he said. "I planted them in a field and sold the crop for $400," Mr. Rose said.

City and District News

20,000 ACRES TOMATO CROP CONTRACTED FOR

Tomato acreage in the Brighton district will reach a new high record this season, it is indicated by the fact that up to the present more than 2,000 acres have been contracted for by district canning companies. At a recent meeting of the Brighton Kiwanis Club held in Brighton, it was planned to hold a field crop competition for tomatoes if interest in the scheme warrants. It is probable that the competition will be held this coming fall at which only tomatoes will be exhibited. A. H. Martin, Brighton, agricultural representative, has been named secretary.

THE USE OF SNARES TO BE PROHIBITED

An amendment to the Fish and Game Act, now before the Ontario Legislature will have the effect of barring the use of snares for any purpose in the counties of Hastings, Peterborough, Lennox-Addington, Victoria, Prescott, Leeds, Grenville, Peel and Carleton.

THEATRE BUILDING TO START APRIL 1

Reports indicate that demolition of the old block on upper Front Street which will be replaced by a new and modern theatre being constructed by Mr. J. E. McCarthy of this city, will commence about April 1st. Plans which are now being prepared and are expected to be submitted to city council for final approval on Monday evening next call for the construction of an absolutely fireproof structure at an estimated cost of $30,000.

ADJOURNED INQUEST CALLED FOR TONIGHT

The adjourned inquest to enquire into the circumstances of the death of the late R.C.M.P. Officer, George E. Horne, will be resumed this evening, at 7.30 p.m. in the Police Court, before Coroner G. S. Orser. Acting Coroner Harney Ormond Butler will conduct the examination of the witnesses.

NAPANEE BAKERS LOWER PRICES

Following a meeting held by bakers of the town, the bread prices in Napanee were lowered to the former prices of eight cents a loaf. The nine cent rate had been in effect but a few weeks. The reduction in price, the bakers claimed was fair to the public now that the cost of flour and other materials required for the making of bread had advanced.

EGGS ON DECREASE ON CITY MARKET

Eggs took another decrease in price in the city market today with "A" selects being quoted at twenty cents the dozen. Ordinary and undergraded were offered in small quantities at eighteen cents. A few choice chickens were available and sold well at prices ranging from 60 up to 80 cents each.

Celery was offered at ten cents per bunch with hothouse rhubarb selling at the same price. Winter vegetables are in good supply and firm at staple prices. No maple syrup was in evidence at the market today.

ORIOLES HEARD ON BURTON STREET

"When the oriole is singing" may well be the theme song of residents of Burton street, for they had real musical effects to accompany them today.

Miss O. Gordon of that street was surprised this morning to hear the chirping of three of the yellow and black songsters.

Fluttering around in the Gordon garden, with their yellow bodies flashing in the morning sunlight, the small birds revelled in the warmth which made them the first birds of this kind to be seen in the city so far this year.

SNOW PARTIALLY BLOCKS ROADS

County And Concession Roads Suffer Most From Storm

Although no major motor accidents were reported in or around Belleville during the period of the two day snow storm that raged, county and concession roads were blocked at certain points, while the various improved highways were also affected, making travel rather difficult and dangerous. Provincial Policemen Sam Hinton reported early today.

For over twenty hours last night Traffic Officer Hinton was called upon to direct traffic in the vicinity of the bridge where the rear wheel of a large transport, driven by Frederick Dingeldey and broken off. The transport was stranded on the upper side of the highway, but the prevailing conditions rendered the towing of it, or speed in that immediate vicinity until the damage was repaired.

A slight accident happened early on at the intersection of James and Osborne Streets when Thomas Hall, two automobiles collided. Fender and bumper damage resulted and the matter was amicably settled between the parties concerned. Sergeant Arthur Hall investigated this. A motor car driven by H. W. Montgomery, Carrying Place, was proceeding south of James Street and accidentally collided with a car eastbound car, driven on Osborne Street by Wm. Sherma, 191 James Street. No personal injuries resulted.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours.

Snow Used to Get Out Winter Logs

One of the first real tastes of winter was experienced yesterday along the Bay front in Prince Edward County when a driving blizzard coming from the lake piled snowdrifts high in the roads. For the first time for the years farmers were forced to clear roads in order to get in the clear.

The majority of farmers rushed their woodcutting activities with the first snow of the winter affording opportunities to haul logs from swamps and woods to the high and dry spots. The snow however, is rapidly disappearing under the warm rays of today's sun.

The funeral took place at Montreal last Saturday.

POLICE TO PROBE A FUR ROBBERY

Chief Kidd, Constable Isard And Furrier In Toronto Today

Chief Alex Kidd, Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard and Gordon Delaney, of Delaney Furriers, Belleville, left hurriedly for Toronto today in the process of clearing up a fur robbery mystery that has baffled local police authorities for over a year. The break in the case came yesterday following the arrest of two men and a woman in Trenton, who are at present confined in the Hastings County jail on charges of theft.

January 13th, 1936, a man and a woman entered the Delaney store on Campbell St. and asked to be shown some seal coats. The salesman on the floor gladly accommodated and the potential customers, who ultimately left the store, stating they would shop elsewhere. Later, however, they returned, the man being in possession of a large Gladstone bag. The woman asked to see three particular coats, that she had been shown during their previous visit to the Delaney store. Again the salesman obliged and although the lady tried on the coats and found considerable fault with the lining, no purchase was made and the pair suddenly left, stating they would return and finish their purchase at a later date.

Later the man and woman had left the salesman in taking inventory found one of the fur coats missing. Police were immediately notified and description of the pair was broadcast province-wide, but they had completely disappeared. Police were thoroughly confused at the time of the robbery, that the coat had been packed in the bag carried by the man, while the woman was attracting the attention of the salesman on the floor. Following the arrest of the two men and the woman in Trenton, descriptions given out by Trenton police tallied exactly with those provided by Mr. Delaney. As the trio arrested in Trenton gave a Belleville address and the matter in question was wearing a dilapidated fur coat when questioned, Chief Kidd immediately notified Mr. Delaney. Delaney and the local police will present their clues in Toronto today and subsequently make a search of the address given by the woman now being held on a Trenton warrant, in addition to clearing up the local fur robbery.

SEED IS PRAISED AT DISTRICT FAIR

Judging of Exhibits at 11th Annual Exhibition

"Lovely exhibits—almost perfect, some of them—and considering how low the exhibitors were able to get seed and how poor the land was in unfavorable growing conditions", was the almost unanimous comment of all judges at the meeting held following the eleventh annual Quinte District Seed Fair now being held in the city hall.

Not only judges like those, this district ought to be assured of a good, heavy strain of seed next year, for the 11th annual exhibition after some 270 entries had been received.

Today judging of the exhibits was being completed by judges from the Dominion experts. Results of the judging are expected to be announced this evening at the annual banquet being held in the Moose Auditorium. Guest speaker will be Dr. G. P. McNeale, Prof. Field Husbandry, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

CHEMIST TESTS SOIL IN DISTRICT

R. J. Bryden, B.S.A., Uses Complicated Apparatus

Soil on farms in this central district is as varied as the nature and personalities of owners, it was indicated at the city hall this morning, where Mr. R. J. Bryden, B.S.A., of the chemistry department of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, is busy with complicated apparatus giving free analysis of samples submitted.

These tests and analysis are to reveal mineral deficiency, if any, and will reveal proper steps to restore it through fertilization or other means.

As yet we haven't received a sufficient number of representative samples to say whether or not a soil sale deficiency exists in the land in this province, Mr. Bryden reported Mr. Bryden, busy with the tests.

"This much we do know and that is anyhow due to the fact, that the natures of farmers, who own the land are very different. One man will use all the fertilizer he needs; another farmer will go from year to year without any. Then there are the in-between farmers."

On the whole, however, soil in this district is showing up very good. It is too early to state yet just how good or how bad it may be. We will know more after we have been able to test more samples."

Exhibitors who have submitted samples have been fascinated by the complicated process through which the soil is put in actual demonstration.

provement of the condition of poor working men.

He said workmen had followed prophets of the new order but were unable to perceive the most serious errors of Communism.

The Pontiff urged employers to Christian countries and wealthy persons to recognize the inalienable right of the working man to a living wage for himself and his family.

Wages Not Alms.

"The wage earner," the Pope wrote, "should not receive what is due to his due in justice.

"And let no one attempt with trifling charitable donations to exempt himself from the great duties imposed by justice. The very dignity of the working man makes him justly and strictly sensitive to these duties of others in this regard."

Pope Pius extended an expression of paternal sympathy to the Russian people whom he termed as "saddened and oppressed by Communism."

IRISH CONCERT AT ST. MICHAEL'S MUCH ENJOYED

Held Under The Auspices of The Children of Mary

COMEDY EXCELLENT

Lilting Irish airs greeted visitors to St Michael's Academy last evening, a musical prelude to Tommy Mason's orchestra to the annual St. Patrick's Day entertainment, which took the form of an Irish concert.

After the audience had assembled, community singing led by Mr. Mason was enthusiastically participated in by all present.

The concert which was given under the auspices of the Children of Mary included music, dancing, dramatics, and entertainment by the master magician, Flight Sergeant Symes and was thoroughly enjoyed.

Little Miss Ann Forster, talented young pianiste opened the program with a splendidly executed tap dance. Vocal solos last evening were the lovely songs of Ireland, old and new, and the audience was charmed by the soloists in their renditions. The soloists included Mr. J. Fahey, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen"; Miss Anna Lafferty, "Just Your Mother Came From Ireland"; Mr. Harold Barrett, "The Dear Little Shamrock"; Miss Katherine Bawden, "Believe Me if all Those Endearing Young Charms"; Mrs. O. Clapp, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling"; Mr. Ed. Brown, "Song of Tralee"; Miss James Grant and Mrs. Harold Barrett acted as accompanists.

Junior Band Praised

The Junior Band of St. Michael's Academy, whose members are among the initial idea in the school competently captivated the audience with their contributions to the program in their military capes and pill box hats they made a smart appearance. Their rendition of selections from a rhythm band to the use of instruments and to the marches of all their ability and training. At intervals the band has six trombones and three saxophones and five boys of the former instruments are on order. With Miss Agnes Marie O'Connor as leader the band played various selections to the delight of an ever-appreciative audience.

Master John Briand won great applause with his xylo-bells solo "In a Monastery Garden" and executed the difficult composition with perfection and harmony.

At this point in the program, Mr. Charles Dolan, chairman of the Separate School Board, introduced Mr. Fred Johnson, leader of Belleville Boy Scouts, referring in highest terms to his outstanding achievements in the line of his duties and the progress he has made with the local troop. The large audience warmly welcomed Mr. Johnson, who expressed his congratulations to the junior band, and commended to their instructor for the amazing performances given by these little musicians. He mentioned their appearance in the Grand Opera House too and the vivid impression, which they had left with their audience. The band moved, he said, was to be congratulated for fostering music in school from the smallest classes up. The importance of musical training is invaluable, and boys and girls, who are encouraged to take an interest in it are rarely found among those, who have acquired bad habits in their youth.

On behalf of the Municipal Band, Mr. Johnson made presentation of a handsome silver cup, and promised the co-operation of the older musicians demonstrating to them just why they use the various of the larger instruments. Some day, he prophesied, one of the members of this same little band might be taking his position as leader of a municipal band. The cup was then received by Master John Briand and in response to Mr. Johnson's address was made by Master Bobby Young in a very masterly style.

One Act Comedy Given

A one act comedy was an interesting item on the program, well received by the audience. Spleenwort Manor, played by Miss Catharine Smith, the play was well given by the talented cast, whose performance was of a high standard. The play concerned the married couple, Presumably firm friends. In the first part they discuss each other and reveal a trend in a very flattering manner. The second part reveals the two thoughts of all persons and the spirited remarks of the characters kept the audience in a uproar. The play was directed by Miss Catherine Smith assisting room setting. The characters included: Anonymous, Miss Jack Brown—Miss Alice Brown; Miss Peets; Mr. Brown—Mr. Jack Doyle; Mr. Peets—Mr. Gerald Gallagher; and Mr. Jones—Mr. Leo Flaherty.

Miss Catharine Smith was heard in a very amusing reading "Mixed Preserictions," a and telephone tangle, very realistically presented. Miss Anna Lafferty also contributed a reading, as an encore to her vocal selection.

As a special feature of the concert, those in charge were very fortunate in having as guest soloist Flight Sergeant Symes, magician, who amused and astonished his audience with his skill. Objects disappeared and reappeared in disconcerting places, cards and papers torn into ribbons became whole again. Rings apparently sold were interlocked at his touch. Aided by two small and suspicious volunteers, who took their task of watching the magician very seriously, Flight Sergeant Symes pleased young and old with his program.

At the conclusion of the concert those who took part in the program were entertained as a supper by the Sodality.

SALEM P.E.U.

Young People's Union was opened in the usual manner. The convener of the Missionary study, then took charge with hymn 384. The Scripture lesson was read by Ivan Sarles. Mrs. Delbert Sine gave the study entitled "Your actions speak louder than words", a piano was read by Evelyn Cook followed by a solo by Ruth Capell. Miss Ruth Reid read a flashlight on the Living Message, which were very interesting. Mrs. Irma Sine rendered the offer and vocal solo. The Misses Muriel and Doris Sine were then called to the front and each were presented with a Bible from the Y.P.U. before their departure for Alberta. Mrs. Annis Johnston read the following address:

Harold, Ont., March 11, 1937.
Dear Muriel and Doris:

We, the members of the Young People's Union, have gathered here this evening to speak a few words with you before you leave.

It is with regret that we learned of your departure for we realize that your going will not only be felled in this community. Especially, we the members of the Young People's Union will miss you and time given so freely by you.

We realize how hard it is to be faithful and able workers and your contributions shall never be forgotten.

Your fascinating and co-operation over a period of years makes us feel sad to part. We feel good to have worked in the same Young People's Union with you.

One when you're gone who'll miss you sadly
One we'll welcome you back again gladly
One who, though angered will not show it
That's what I call a friend.

One who is always willing to aid
One whose advice has always paid
One who's defended when other flayed you
That's what I call a friend.

One who's been fine when life seemed rotten
One who's aiding you have not forgotten
One who has given you more than she's gotten
That's what I call a friend.

Then we wish you to accept these Bibles as tokens of our esteem and may it ever remind you of the friendship which we've held in our hearts for you.

Signed on behalf of the Salem Young People's Union.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon.—The farmers holidaying with his parents, Mr. are delighted with the somewhat belated winter. Old timers say these recent snow storms are great for the land. The logs are piling up in the Emerson saw mill and this is the liveliest industry in town.

The Endeavourers Class held their monthly social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Tummon on Church St. on Saturday evening. The program was of an impromptu nature and consisted of the worship service of hymn singing, prayer by Mrs. Thomas Brady; scripture reading by Mrs. Sandy McCurdy; a reading by Mr. Clifford Elliott and two excellent recitations by Mr. Howard Ashley.

Roll call was answered by each member enumerating what they most cherished and was answered by a message and two values. Mrs. W. J. Fitchet gave a solo and there was also one by Mr. Clayton Tummon. Mr. Delbert Sine presided but Clifford Elliott closed the meeting with prayer. Interest in a contest was enjoyed also lunch. A vote of appreciation was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Tummon for the use of their home.

A GREAT STATESMAN PASSES

A statesman of the first rank, one of the high type and brilliantly-minded men who appear so often in British political history has gone to his rest, Sir Austen Chamberlain, K.G., than whom Britain and the Empire had no greater public man.

Son of the great Joseph Chamberlain, Sir Austen had been before the public from his earliest years. Among his greatest works was the Locarno pact of some twelve years ago.

The finest tribute of all naturally came from one who knew him well and long, Premier Stanley Baldwin, who applied to him the quotation "He reverenced his conscience as his king." Mr. Baldwin went on to summarize the character of Sir Austen: "He spoke no slander. He always regarded public service as the highest career. In that belief he lived. In that belief he died.

"He had infinite belief in the parliamentary system of this country. I think we can best keep his memory bright by confirming our own resolution that government of the people by the people shall not perish upon this earth."

Mr. Baldwin referred to his unfailing faith in democratic institutions and to his lifelong friendship for the man who introduced him to Parliament 29 years ago.

Such men as Chamberlain are a lamp to the feet of the young men of the Old Country and the Dominions as he showed how the way of the public man could be so loyal to the highest principles of life, loyalty, chivalry, honesty and courtesy and a severe code of honor.

He was not the type of man who played for office. He lost, it is said, the British premiership through his loyalty to Lloyd George. A friend said, "He was the victim of his own virtues."

To the world of today his recent remark that he wanted to be remembered not so much for his work in tariff reform but as the creator of Locarno is of great interest. What ever the future holds in store and when the story of universal peace is written, his achievement in the Locarno pact will probably be looked upon as one of the greatest forward steps in human history.

MARCH WIND AND SNOW

Mild winter.. though this has been for months, the approach of the vernal equinox has given a taste of what a March storm might have been had there been enough snow on the ground and more flakes in the air. The howling wind of Wednesday morning sounded ominously like those pre-equinoctial storms of other years, when the winds whistled and moaned and the snow drifted into every corner, and piled up on the roads in banks many feet deep. Winter was in the mood yesterday but did not have the precipitation required to create one of the old-time tie-ups.

The snow was very scarce, just the swirling flakes skimming along the ground seeking a place to rest. Neither was the weather severe, nothing of the stinging blast usual to such seasons was felt.

Time is up according to bear's prognostication. The bear saw his shadow for certain on February 2nd., and that foretold severe weather, which did not come. The six weeks are up. March came in like a lamb. Can it gather strength to look like a lion in the next two weeks?

It used to be taken as a sign of an early spring if the old time roads in Belleville used to be dry and dusty on St. Patrick's Day. The roads were not clear yesterday in one sense because there was some snow on the residential streets, but not on the business thoroughfares where traffic gave the little flakes no chance.

While farmers are glad to see snow as it is at this time of the year a real factor in the crops of the coming season, they do not wish the old style blizzards, for they like clear roads in this day of wheeled winter traffic. As for most other people, except children who want snow for sledding and tobogganing and skiers who need it in modest quantities for their Oak Hill ventures, they like spring to come in like a lamb and March behave in the same lambike manner at its exit, even if it does throw the traditions of the lion-lamb behaviour of weather out of gear.

Now thing is now certain—there is to be no flood in the Moira, for do what the last few days of March can do they cannot freeze up the river solidly enough to cause a blockade and an overflow.

Meekness is love at school, at the school of Christ. It is the disciple learning to know, and fear and distrust himself, and learning of Him who is meek and lowly in heart, and so finding rest to his soul.—J. Hamilton.

A WEE IRISH ROAD

The road to Limnalara was neither wide nor long,
Yet every time I took it, I sang a happy song,
For salty waves caressed it,
And "soggarths" voices blessed it,
And children's feet, they pressed it
As they went along.

The road to Limnalara was gentle to the feet,
Its hedgesheltered houses, with here and there a seat
For friends to sit and ponder
About the ones out yonder—
Poor souls—who had the wander
When scarce was the wheat.

The road to Limnalara: Was ever road more fair?
I'd like to smell its hawthorn, and breathe the spicy air,
And wander down the Fairy Glen,
And hear the children's brogue again,
And meet the women and the men
So far over there.

"GOD MAY STRIKE ME DEAD BEFORE I GET TO MY CELL, IF I AM GUILTY." He never got to his cell but died in the prison hospital four days after his conviction. Samuel Whitaker, accused of wife murder in California, uttered the above challenge after he was found guilty of murder, and committed to San Quentin on a life sentence... Whitaker was in such a poor physical condition when he reached the prison that the prison doctor ordered him taken to the hospital, where he grew steadily worse and died four days later. Aged 63, Whitaker was a Los Angeles theatre organist..... Mrs. Ethel Whitaker was slain in 1932 when her husband said was an attempted hold-up in their home the night of March 16, 1936. Police arrested a young Kentucky mountaineer named James Eagen Culver, observed fleeing from the Whitaker apartment. Culver swore that Whitaker paid him to stage a hold-up to thrill a woman friend..... Accordingly he concealed himself in the apartment and confronted the couple with a pistol when they returned. Whitaker then drew a revolver and began shooting, said the witness. Several bullets found lodgment in Mrs. Whitaker's body, and she fell fatally wounded. Silver was wounded but made a getaway. Evidence was produced by the State to prove that the bullets which entered Mrs. Whitaker's body came from the gun fired by her husband, and the fact that a double indemnity insurance policy on her life called for $18,000, supplied the motive. Whitaker was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment, while Culver drew five years. The case recalled a similar one in Chicago some years ago when Carl Wanderer was convicted of murder and hanged after a trial in which the State claimed he hired a "ragged stranger" to take a hold-up, and then shot and killed his wife in the hotel and his own wife in the vestibule of their apartment. The hobo used one of Wanderer's own pistols and the number on it clinched the case for the prosecution and led to conviction.

"WHO'S AFRAID OF THE BIG BAD WOLF?" Quite a tempest in a teapot has been stirred up internationally by statements made by the diminutive but fiery mayor of New York Fiorello Henry LaGuardia, in referring in uncomplimentary terms to Der Fuehrer Hitler, strong man of Germany. The German press retaliated with strong language levelled at Mayor LaGuardia, and certain other prominent New York residents of both sexes. Washington first apologized for New York's Mayor and explained that the government could not control his utterances. Then the storm of words grew so dense over Germany that Washington demanded a caste apology from Germany—and the tornado of words continues with angry blasts from New York answered by angrier blasts from Berlin. Mass meetings are being held in Manhattan and the storm of words continues unabated. All that this comic opera duel of words lacks now is for a German submarine to emerge in New York harbor and scatter a few live shells or stink bombs in and around City Hall.

FRAYERS BEING SUCCESSE TO GEISHA GIRLS

The sit-down strike of Japan's geisha girls having been settled amicably, the 62 entertainers have gone back to work. The girls demanded union recognition and opposed exploitation. The ABOVE photograph shows the geisha girls praying for success at a temple on the mountain near Osaka to which they retired for their strike.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 18TH, 1917

Major M. F. Ketcheson is in Toronto today on business.

Some of our city streets are in a horrible condition. Hillcrest Avenue, as an example, is in a wretched condition. When frozen it is practically impassable; when thawed it is covered with slush, sidewalks as well. Other city streets will also bear looking after. Will the authorities please get busy?

Women with the necessary qualifications were given the right to vote at municipal elections at the meeting of the Municipal Committee at the Parliament Buildings yesterday, March 18th. The bill of Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P. P., Belleville, to that effect was reported to the House. Hitherto widows and unmarried women only have had the municipal vote. The bill provides that the husband may be deputed by his wife to vote in her stead when proper notice thereof is given to the assessor.

30 YEARS AGO

MARCH 18TH, 1907

Mrs. W. H. Cunnington left yesterday for New York and will sail for England on the 20th.

Mr. Walter Taylor is spending a few days at Montreal.

Mr. Ed Cochrane is home from Toronto to spend a few days.

Mr. W. J. Logue will leave tomorrow to attend a meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers at Montreal.

Messrs Jacob Finkle and Abel Finkle of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, were in the city yesterday.

Messrs John C. Huffman and Perry Huffman of Napanee were in the city yesterday.

40 YEARS AGO

MARCH 18TH, 1897

Skipping ropes and marbles have made their appearance. Sure signs of spring.

The "Bovery Girl" will be the attraction at the opera house this evening.

Belleville market prices today were: Butter 18 cents to 20 cents; eggs 10 cents to 11 cents; chickens and ae high as 60 cents per pair.

Mr. W. S. Miller of Glen Miller was in the city today.

Mr. E. D. O'Flynn of Madoc was here on business today.

County Crown Attorney P. J. M. Anderson was in Trenton today on legal business.

Miss Carrie Read has returned home from Utica, N.Y.

Mr. George Pay of this city sang at a concert at Picton last evening.

50 YEARS AGO

MARCH 18TH, 1887

The crew of No. 1 fire engine was out for practice yesterday afternoon. The steamer has not been in practical use since Christmas.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, who lectured at Kingston yesterday, will be unable to accept an invitation to preach at one of the services during the series of sermons in connection with the opening of the new Bridge Street Methodist Church.

Dr. Yoakor of this city has been appointed an associate coroner for the County of Hastings.

Joseph Stoneburg of Madoc has been appointed as provincial police force to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Officer John Newton to the position of Chief.

The Art of Hog Calling

Most dogs will cock their ears at the sound of a whistle, and cows usually come home at the cry of "Booboss", but what is the recognized call for pigs? In addressing a porker the average city man would naturally say "Piggy, Piggy," but this is not the correct salutation. And "Hoggie, hoggie" would be bad form. Just what is the regulation call for Mr. Pig in Ontario we do not know but there appears to be a variety of pig calls in the United States. A writer in American Farm Youth states that he has heard farmers call "Pig-o-o-ee!" but he declares the call is "pig-o-o-ey!"

He says that the effectiveness of this call really depends upon those prolonged "o's". "An extended succession of 'o-o-o-e-i' makes wonderful vocalization," he says. "And it seems the hog never fails to know it when he hears it, at least in western Kentucky and Indiana. How he learned it, I can not say; but he knows it from his sucking days up to his premature end in the stockyard pen."

There are variations, however, and in one part of the Middle West (is it Wapo-nee?) in another "Po-o-o-o-e-i-ei" and yet another "Soo-o-o-e-i", and the farmers of East Texas call a pig a pig and just about, "Oh Pig! Pig O! Pig O! Pig O!"

We are informed that "there is a science in hog-calling that limits the field to only individuals possessed of genuine talent, and hog-calling contests are very popular in some parts of the U.S. The winners are judged by pitch and expression, which count for a possible thirty points; romance and "pig-appeal and friendliness" divide the rest of the points. We are further informed that most successful pig-calling voice is one that has the "flavor of the cracking of corn-husks, and a suggestion of the exhilaration of evening zephyrs in the fodder. Vocal apparatus of that order makes champions."—Stratford Beacon Herald.

HIGH NOON

RUBY M. AYRES

"Oh well, it's no use arguing. I shall marry him, even if I regret it by ever after. Never mind me! . . . I always talk through my hat, and after all I've done it myself . . . Not that I'm sorry—I wanted him and I still want him. And I mean to keep him," she added slowly. "But all the same I expect you stand a far better chance of happiness with Henry than I do with Bruce. You'll be an old man's darling, but the trouble is that I shall never be a young man's slave, and Henry can't have both."

They retraced their steps in silence till Violette said, "If I could only make him jealous! . . . but he doesn't seem to care. I thought—that day I went to Paris with Paddy, he might at least be angry—or . . . but he wasn't. He just said that it pleased me to go riding any like with a stranger if it was my affair . . . Even when I told him that Paddy was in love with me it didn't seem to move him, and yet when he asked me to marry him once it seemed real enough then. He held me in his arms and kissed me, and I was happy, though all the time I expect you'll laugh at this—that it wasn't me he was kissing—that it wasn't me he wanted to kiss, but someone else who wasn't there, but I was, and so— I can't explain."

"You've got too much imagination, Violette," Heather said brutally.

"Or not enough," Violette answered. "Anyway, I'm not going to break my heart for him. If he doesn't kiss me, other people do," she added defiantly.

"Don't talk like that."

"Well, it's true."

She said no more until they were in sight of the house and then she remarked airily, "By the way, Paddy doesn't coming down for the week-end. I asked him." And then after a moment, "Heather, just tell me this once, and I'll never ask you again as long as I live—on your solemn word of honor, is Bruce still in love with you? And is that why—"

Heather looked at Violette and was so shocked by the tragic intensity of her eyes that almost unconsciously her lips framed a reply.

"No—he is not in love with me. Oh, Violette, why will you torture yourself?"

Violette drew a deep breath. "Well, if you say so," she said slowly, "I always believe what you say, even when I pretend not to."

Heather's heart felt like a stone in her breast. She had told the first deliberate lie of her life, and the shame of it almost overwhelmed her.

o-o-o

To every one's amusement, the following morning Henry Mathews announced that Heather was immediately returning to London.

"Take care of yourself, my dear," he said as he bade Heather good-by (the family for once, all having tactfully disappeared), but he only took her hand without any show of demonstration, though as he turned away Heather caught his arm and shyly raised her face to kiss him.

He got very red as her soft lips touched her cheek.

"And thank you a thousand times for everything," she said.

"And you a million times," he answered.

Heather was conscious of a sense of loss as she watched his big car drive away. She and the family were going to miss Henry, she knew. He was always so kind and cheery—so ready to enter into everything, so happy in giving happiness to others.

Later in the day a wire arrived from Paddy, saying that he was flying down and would land at Plymouth aerodrome the following afternoon.

"We must go and meet him," Bruce said at once.

Violette frowned. If she had hoped Bruce would be annoyed by Paddy's arrival, she could see that she was to be disappointed.

Bruce's car arrived at the aerodrome before Paddy could possibly be there. When Paddy's machine did appear Violette, Bobbie and Ritty hurried toward it. Bruce glanced over his shoulder as he sat at the driving wheel.

"Won't you go too?" he said to Heather.

She hesitated. "I don't know . . . I—do you think I ought to go?"

"I thought you would prefer not to stay with me," he answered. She flushed painfully at her lip. "That's not very kind, Bruce," she said.

"Kind!" he said with a shrug, and then suddenly he flung open the door without another word, and followed the two girls and Bobbie across the wide landing ground.

Heather was thrilled in spite of herself now that it was on the ground, the machine looked to be so small and inadequate, although Bobbie explained volubly that it was a four seater — a new type of machine which Paddy was "trying out."

In spite of Henry's absence, supper was a joyous, noisy meal. It had been a happy evening Heather thought when she went to bed at last, later on, looking back, it seemed as if from the moment that little aeroplane dived out of the sky everything began to go wrong.

On the first place Violette flirted shamefully with Paddy — even slightly embarrassing him; she put him first place in her attention, driven by the insane idea that if only she could prove to Bruce how cozy all would be well.

But Bruce seemed imperturbable. His was very friendly with Paddy, even going to the length of allowing him to drive his car. Saying he wanted a long walk, Bruce went off soon after breakfast. Violette waved him good-bye quite gaily, and, in less than two minutes she had gone drive away. She and the family were going to miss Henry, she knew. He was always so kind and cheery—so ready to enter into everything, so happy in giving happiness to others.

Later in the day a wire arrived from Paddy, saying that he was flying down and would land at Plymouth aerodrome the following afternoon.

"We must go and meet him," Bruce said at once.

Violette frowned. If she had hoped Bruce would be annoyed by Paddy's arrival, she could see that she was to be disappointed.

Bruce's car arrived at the aerodrome before Paddy could possibly be there. When Paddy's machine did appear Violette, Bobbie and Ritty hurried toward it. Bruce glanced over his shoulder as he sat at the driving wheel.

"Won't you go too?" he said to Heather.

Instalment 22

"I had no idea you were here!" Heather said breathlessly. "How long have you been following me?"

"For some time—I saw you leave the house," Bruce replied.

"It must be nearly five o'clock—but it was such a lovely afternoon I felt I must stay out. Shall we go back? And what is everyone?"

"They are not hiding in my coat pockets," Bruce answered with faint sarcasm. "Although from your point of view I suppose they should be."

She tried to laugh. "You are nonsense! . . . I only thought—meant . . ."

"Meant that you hoped that you were not to be forced into a tête-à-tête with me, eh, comme, Well, I am afraid that this time there is no escape."

She had nothing to say, and he asked after a moment, "Well, are you satisfied now that you have got your own way, and have successfully ruined my life and your own? Not to mention Violette and that poor devil Mathews. He laughed. "It should be interesting to see what happens in the future."

She said miserably, "You are cruelly unfair to me. I have only tried to do my best, but I've seem to help me—"

"Help you? What do you want me to do? To pretend an overwhelming love for Violette?" His voice rose a little, in contempt. "Have you ever tried to force affection which does not exist? Violette, poor child, must know by instinct that the whole thing is a farce and that I don't love her."

Heather broke in eagerly, "But you will, when you get to know her better. She can be so sweet and dear—"

"Why she told me that herself—at home—on the boat . . ."

He interrupted. "Oh, the boat! I treated her as I treated any other woman—I never pretended to care for her—"

"But you let her bring you home to—to—"

"Because I had discovered that she was your sister."

They walked some way in silence, and Heather noticed that already the sunshine had clouded over, and that she was looked grey.

Then, with sudden humility, "And do you expect to love Mathews—in time?" His voice was bitterly ironical, his manner cynical as his face. "Perhaps you will," he answered, "if you have the luck to lose your self. And then the silence fell again.

It was Heather who spoke next, intuitive although she was not, that Violette will not be happy, Bruce... and yet, I know she loves you—I know she does. You are the only one to hinder — more understanding ....."

"Perhaps," he said, "but I expect you to show affection to a man who was nothing to you? Could you go up to anyone, for example, and put your arms around his neck ..... as you used to with me, Heather?" "I and ... and ... "

She said wholesomely, "You are very cruel."

He caught her up very quickly. "When you have in mind—is that what you would like to say?" And then, "If in the afternoon, Heather, I suppose it would all be easy — as sightseeing, but it would marry me in order to put the family's comfort for the rest of their lives; you would—"

She looked up at him, her eyes dark with pain. "Bruce, I can't get thing you have ever said to me," she whispered.

"I didn't know how well she loved him? Had she been so much more clever than she had believed? She said with a last effort, "I think you will find misunderstand me, Bruce, and perhaps it's only natural that you should. It's so long since we—since you—and I've had a feeling that I think you've forgotten all the difficulties and—and all the difficulties I've had to meet for so long that they've become part of my life. It's too late to go back now —even if I wanted to. Perhaps I'm wrong—I don't know—but somehow I think—it seems to me that I'm doing the right thing—and I think that even if I loved you (her voice was quite steady now) I couldn't stand in Violette's way. I do believe I give me happiness if I did. You may think that's silly . . . perhaps it is . . . but they are all so much a part of me, almost as if they were my own children, that I couldn't do anything that would hurt them—not anything."

She smiled wistfully.

"Even when they were quite small I could never bring myself to punish them—John always did it for me, or Cassie—and it's still the same—I would far rather be unhappy myself than know the boys were, any of them, and that's the simple truth," she added slowly.

Bruce did not speak till they were at the house, then he said, "I'm sorry . . . I'm forgiven me."

She just touched his hand. "There's nothing to forgive."

On Monday there was a violent thunderstorm. When Violette said that of course it would be wet on Paddy's last day.

"My last day, too," Bruce said.

She raised startled eyes, her color fading. "But you're not going," she said blankly.

He smiled at her. "I'm afraid so. I shall leave the car for you, as Jepson has very kindly offered to fly me back to London. My leave isn't intended to be all holiday, you know."

Violette made no reply, but presently she left the room, shutting the door with a little slam.

Jepson fidgeted. He had not had too happy a time at The Haven. He was very sincerely in love with Violette and he had hated the three-cornered position. He had no thought of criticizing Violette and her conduct seemed natural to him feel awkward and ashamed. On the whole he was glad to be going back, even though Violette had extracted a promise from him to come again as soon as possible.

His genuine liking and admired Bruce and would very much rather have disliked him.

Violette made up to her room and banged that door too, turning the key behind her.

What a muddle she had made of everything! . . . she had flirted with Paddy Jepson very much as a gambler who had lost, will fly to drink and she realized, even as the gambler realizes afterwards, that it had done no good.

She sat down at the dressing table and began to make up her face. It was purely a mechanical action, but it was what she always did when in trouble, and used to have got beyond her control.

She powdered her lips and thought that Jepson was a fool; she powdered her nose and told herself that she hated Bruce and was glad he was going away; then she went into the room, found paper and a pencil and was writing to him—to Bruce—a humble note of apology for her behavior, and an appeal for forgiveness.

Bruce had found many such notes on the table when he came to The Haven. Violette would marvel with his herself, and then would humble herself to the dust, and always it was he who felt guilty.

"My darling—" her pencil flew—"I can't go. I can't be miserable without you. I know I haven't been kind, but I didn't mean it. I love you so much—I shall never love any one else. I shall die without you."

The old, theatrical tone always crept in and robbed her words of their sincerity.

"Please stay another day or two. And I will show you that it's not just an empty sentiment when I say that if I lost you, I should not care to live. I know I've been so kind to me, Bruce—"

The flying pencil was still and Violette's troubled eyes wandered to the window. Wasn't he kind? She new that he was never unkind! But the knowledge did not help her.

She remembered and hated the memory, that last night when they had been out together, she asked him to kiss her. Bruce had put his arm round her and kissed her on the cheek, but the kiss hurt her almost as if it had been refused. He had held his arm around her! Yes, and he might have put his arm round Ritty in just the same kind, brotherly way, or round Heather! Violette's pencil was motionless her dry lips, and asked herself for the hundredth time if Heather had ever given a single half-hearted lover seventeen years ago.

She tore up what she had written and started afresh. During two whole pages with passionate words of love and remorse and even with a few lines with tears on them as the supper gong boomed, she slipped across the landing to Bruce's room and laid her letter on the dressing table.

He never answered her notes, never wrote to her in reply, never even mentioned them unless she asked, "Did you find my letter?" Then he would say very kindly, "Yes—thank you, and of course it's all right. Don't be unhappy."

But it was not all right, and she was unhappy all the same. Tomorrow he would be gone.

It was Caesar who struck the first—discordant note at supper, "Violette," he said, "I've been thinking—"

"Our party will be considerably smaller. There will be two vacant chairs, two absent friends."

"Bruce may not go after all," Violette said quickly. She could never really understand when she was beaten, for by her own rules of the game of love, Bruce upon reading her poor little letter should have at once capitulated and seen to it that she lived happily ever after.

He looked at her questionningly. "I am afraid I shall have to go," he said. "I have some rather urgent business to attend to."

"Are you going to see about putting the banns up?" Ritty enquired interestedly.

He smiled at her across the table. "Who's banns? My own, or Heather's?"

Master Bruce Moore, 9 Grove Street, who has been a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, returned to his home today.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ketchabaw have returned to the city after enjoying a Caribbean cruise.

The members of Christ Church Parish Guild were guests at the regular meeting of St. George's Guild on Tuesday afternoon. After the regular business, Rev. G. D. Wright gave a short address. Miss Dorothy Burton gave two recitations which were greatly enjoyed. Tea was served by members of the Guild.

On a card from Miami, Florida, Mr. W. G. Deacon, who with Mrs. Deacon is enjoying a trip to the South, speaks of "lovely weather here as in June or July. City full of hotels and they are full of tourists. Have had a splendid trip along. Enjoyed the scenery, oranges grapes, etc. Both well."

After Quintena Rebekah meeting on Tuesday evening the members entertained at cards. Several tables were in progress and the evening spent an enjoyable evening. Those winning prizes were, Mrs. Fred Adam Palmer; second, George Conover; third, Mrs. Ernest Orser, who won the special door prize; ladies' first, Mrs. Noble Wannamaker; second, Mrs. Mary Phillips. After cards, delicious refreshments were served.

A successful card party and dance was held at the Moose Auditorium last night in connection with euchre were Mrs. Mossman, ladies' first; Miss Irene Graham, second; Mrs. Caruthel, third; Miss Sarok, lone hands; Mrs. Hanlin, men's first; Mr. Geo. Hemmett, second; and Mr. Don Orr, third, and Mr. Hanlin, lone hands. Mrs. Charles Allen's Orchestra played for dancing.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church sponsored another successful event last evening, the annual St. Patrick's supper. A capable crowd attended and the hall where supper was served was artistically decorated with the traditional colors. Tapers in brass holders, flags, with Irish Colleens to add variety, made the tables most attractive. A very appetizing menu was served by the members of the Aid.

BRIDGE ST. CHURCH W. F. S. On Thursday evening at the regular meeting of the Young People's Society of Bridge Street Church was held in the form of a banquet with the president, Mr. Taylor Franklin, in the chair. To open the meeting selections from the book, "The Upper Room" were read, followed by prayer, Mr. Douglas Burr discussed current events in general. Mrs. Herb McCabe was in charge of the meeting which took the form of a St. Patrick's social. Miss Annie Le Rue gave a humorous reading, "Zaida." Miss Clarke Bowen sang a solo, "When I Have Sung My Song" accompanied at the piano by Mr. Franklin. Games, arranged by Mr. Douglas Worden, were then played and refreshments were served. The meeting was brought to a close with the singing of "God Save the King."

Tabernacle Ch. Mission Circle Holds Meeting

Last evening the Mission Circle of Tabernacle Church held their meeting in the church parlors in conjunction with the mid-week Lenten service. Lou Dougherty was in charge. The Scripture lesson was read by Leona Bailey. Roll call was responded to by a question containing the word "Lite". Misses Jean and Betty Shorey favoured with a piano duet. "St. Patrick's Day" a fantasy of Irish airs.

Emma Dafoe gave a Welsh Tow-to or reading about the life of Mrs. Hogwen. Helen Salisbury sang very beautifully a solo, "Then Didst Leave Thy Throne."

The story of Joseph Abbottee, the Man of Ars of the Philippines, whose life and influence are a direct result of the work of Christian Missions was given by Rachel Fox.

Phyllis May sang a very inspiring solo, "Leading On Yon."

Mrs. Geo. Wright was accompanist for the vocal numbers.

Jean Shorey gave a reading, "My Favourite Angel."

Rev. Naylor gave a talk centred on the theme, "Who Shall Roll Away the Stone." He said that if people had sufficient faith their difficulties would disappear in the same manner as those of the women who came to the tomb of Christ, wondering who would roll away the stone, only to find on arrival that it had already been rolled away.

Addresses Argyll Chapter on Work Done by I. O. D. E.

Yesterday afternoon members of Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. met in the Officers' Mess at the Armouries. Mrs. Maund of North Bay, formerly Miss Ethel Walton of this city, was guest speaker.

Council then adjourned to meet on the second Friday in April.

Little Benny's Note Book

In school today Miss Kitty was explaining to us about consistency, saying it is everybody's motto in the world obeyed, the dictates of their own consciences instead of the call of greed and ambition there would be peace and happiness for all, and would be a thing of the peased. No doubt such a condition would exist some day, and many men in all countries have already refused to listen to anything but the dictates of their own consciences, and some of them have died for their cause science sake and are known as martyrs, although generally, it is perfectly safe and safe thing to have, a clear conscience. Now who can give me an example of a person acting according to the dictates of conscience? In the corner sat Bobby, as she said.

With pretty soon Paula Simkins waved his hand, saying, One time a boy was standing on a corner talking, standing there with a clear conscience and a cop told him to move on, and the boy refused, did anything wrong so he just stayed there and all of a sudden a brick fell on his head and knocked him unconscious for life, because then why the cop tried to chase him, but the boy didn't know it and he died a martyr.

Well that's a rather strained example, to say the least I'll call for another one, Miss Kitty said, and I waved my hand, saying, if the conscience is clear you can go ahead, other things being equal And now we'll go on to arithmetick, she said.

Wich we did feeling against it.

STOP TORTURING YOURSELF!
Millions now use famous medicated cream to relieve skin irritations — to reduce enlarged pores — and as an aid to healing weary types of ugly skin flaws!
MY SKIN IS AWFUL! BOB NOTICED IT! THE GIRLS LAUGHED! WHAT SHALL I DO?
Yes — skin marred by ugly skin flaws can steal away much of a woman's charm! But don't be discouraged! This famous medicated cream may help you, even as it has thousands of others.
Over 12,000,000 jars of Noxzema Medicated Skin Cream are used yearly! Noxzema was first prescribed by doctors for the relief of burns, itching eczema, etc. Nurses discovered how wonderful it is for Chapped Hands and for many cases of poor complexion.
If you want to reduce Large Pores, clear away Blackheads, soften your skin — if you want to relieve itching, smarting skin irritations, apply Noxzema and see for yourself how wonderful it is. If you suffer from Pimples that are caused by dust, wind or any other external cause, use Noxzema — it's so soothing and it helps to promote rapid healing of these disfiguring flaws.

PREMIER BALDWIN PURCHASES HOME

Action Believed in Anticipation of His Retirement After Coronation

London, March 18—(CP)— The Hayna News Agency said last night it was learned that Prime Minister Baldwin had purchased a home in London's Belgrave Square in anticipation of his retirement from public life following the coronation.

According to close friends, says the Hayna Agency, the Prime Minister will submit his resignation on May 22, 14 years to the day after he succeeded the late Andrew Bonar Law to become Prime Minister for the first time. Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain will immediately take over the office, Hayna understood.

Baldwin lived in the Eaton Square sector before moving into 10 Downing Street.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Sylvia Sidney in "The Woman Alone"

A tense and gripping melodrama entitled "The Woman Alone", starring Sylvia Sidney and Oscar Homolka, is the production presented at the Capitol Theatre, today and Friday only. The story is a grand double feature bill. Here is another outstanding film directed by Alfred Hitchcock, whose very name is synonymous with different and absorbing entertainment. Included in the cast is Desmond Tester, whose performance as the boy king in "Nine Days a Queen" was hailed as one of the best of the year.

The story of "The Woman Alone" tells in broad, swift, dramatic strokes of a band of terrorists who have made London their stamping ground, plotting a reign of death and destruction. In their band is one Verloc, who ostensibly is the owner of a neighborhood motion picture theatre, and whose wife, Sylvia, is the cashier. A young Scotland Yard man who is shadowing Sylvia and her little brother and learns of the many mysterious comings and goings of her husband.

Using the boy as a catspaw to deliver a dangerous bomb to blow up part of the subway, the missile explodes prematurely, killing the boy and several others. The wife then learns that her husband was the cause of her brother's death, and in a rage she stabs him to death. The Scotland Yard man realizes the cause of the act, but before the law can take its course, the home in which lies the body of the murdered Verloc is blown to bits by another bomb. Concerning all traces of the murder, Sylvia then is free to turn to her handsome Scotland Yard man.

From the stars, Sylvia Sidney, and Oscar Homolka, to the other members of the cast, including Desmond Tester and John Loder, the portrayals are of the highest quality, with Director Hitchcock again demonstrating his consummate command in bringing to the screen entertainment of the highest quality.

"The Bold Caballero"

On a thrilling romance-spiced adventure, soldiers in resplendent uniforms, gay Spanish music, plaintive Indian love songs, bull-fighting — against the background of the romantic early colonization of California by the Spaniards.

This is the pattern upon which Republic's first color picture, "The Bold Caballero", is woven. The story co-featuring handsome Robert Livingston and the blonde English actress, Heather Angel shown as Jill No. 2.

Livingston playing a dual role, that of the masked and mysterious Zorro and foppish young dandy of the era, reveals new and startling versatility in the acting field. It is by far the best part of his long career.

When Heather Angel's father, the governor of California, young lady takes over the governorship and immediately becomes the centre of plots and romance. Here Miss Angel she carries off with high screen honors.

Auction Nite

Don't forget ladies and gentlemen that Auction Nite will be held as usual on Friday Nite at 8.45 at the Capitol Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

Edna Ferber's "Come and Get It".

"Satan Met a Lady"

Samuel Goldwyn's magnificent film version of Edna Ferber's colorful novel, "Come and Get It", is the feature attraction at the Belle tonight, and Friday, matinee and evening.

An inspired cast, headed by Edward Arnold in the role of Barney Glascow, the chore boy who became a lumber baron, brings Miss Ferber's vivid characters to life with uncanny accuracy and the film catches all the color, the thrills, the danger, the romance and the drama of the days.

Arnold gives what is unquestionably his best performance as Barney. Joel McCrea is perfect as his pal Richard who wins the girl and father loves. Lovely blonde Frances Farmer give a fine understanding characterization in the difficult role of Lotta, the colorful cabaret singer whom the bower-mad young Barney loves but leaves to marry the love pure, light-lipped daughter; and Lotta's beautiful daughter with whom he falls hopelessly in love years later but loser to his own son.

Walter Brennan, the "one piece band" artist of "Banjo on My Knee" turns in another grand performance as Swan, the Swede lumberman who Lotta marries; Mady Christians, the lovely Viennese actress, has the rest opportunity to show what she can do as the Swedish aunt, Karle, the brilliant stage star, is superb as Barney's wife.

Magnificent Entertainment

Others who shine in the perfect cast are Andrea Leeds, beautiful, dark-eyed Goldwyn discovery and Frank Shields, the handsome tennis star. Andrea proves she can act as well as look lovely in the role of Evvie, Barney's daughter who accusing her father's unhappiness in a loveless marriage, spoils her own child's proper choice and marries the wrong, but promising Tony Schwerke, splendidly played by Shields, who looks in this writer's estimation an important new heart throb for the feminine fans.

Here is magnificent entertainment for anybody's money .... "Come and Get It!"

New Mystery Film

Bette Davis and Warren William are featured in the companion feature on the same program in their new co-starring Warner Bros. production "Satan Met a Lady". Warren William plays opposite Miss Davis, while others in the cast include Allen Jenkins, Porter Hall, Arthur Treacher, Marie Wilson, Winnifred Shaw and Olin Howland.

The picture is based on a novel by the famous writer of fiction, Dashiell Hammett, which is one of the best and the popular author of "After Thin Man" has ever turned out. It is written in his usual style, with mystery and thrills combined with sophisticated humor, love and intrigue. An interesting sports review will be presented on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00, the last complete show at 8.30. "Come and Get It" starts at 2.30 and 7.00 p.m. "Satan" at 2.30, 7.00 and 10.00 p.m.

RELIEF RULES ARE EXPLAINED

Hon. D. Croll Sends Communication to Local Officials

In a communication received this week by officials of the local Welfare department from the Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, advice is given the new regulations have been provided whereby a closer check may be made on municipal relief frauds. In his letter to the local committee, Mr. Croll points out:

"In combating frauds, municipal relief officers have been under a handicap because no machinery is provided wherebry they can obtain a complete list of men and women in receipt of wages. Amendments to the relief regulations has now been approved and we believe it will solve the difficulty. This amendment provides that all employers of labor must furnish, in returns to local relief officers, lists of their employees, whether permanent or occasional. This material will enable the relief administrator to check up earnings of heads of families and dependencies.

"The new amendments are a distinct help, but we have never been bothered with the trouble of evasions by employees in this city", stated Alderman Laurie Lewis, chairman of the Welfare Committee.

Leafs by Winning Over Canadiens Can Name Where Playoffs Start

(By The Canadian Press)

There are two games in the National Hockey League tonight and just one thing at stake—where Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers will start their third-place Stanley Cup playoff series.

The Leafs meet Canadiens in Montreal and if they win will be able to dictate that the first game be staged in New York and the second and, if necessary, third in Toronto. The matter is decided by the team having the greater number of points.

For Canadiens the game means nothing. They have won the Canadian section and it is doubtful if they will take many chances tonight. The contest will give Montreal fans the opportunity of congratulating Babe Siebert on making the Canadian Press All-Star team again and adding a cheer for Toronto's Harvey Jackson, another member.

Anything may happen in New York when Chicago Black Hawks and Americans meet. The boys will be out to fatten their scoring totals and it promises a wide-open game.

National Hockey League All-Star Squad Features Four Detroit Red Wing Players

The National Hockey League's All-Star team for 1937, compiled by The Canadian Press from a poll of sport writers in N.H.L. cities, carries with it to date the mythical "top" of hockey's ladder, a distinctly Detroit line. Of the six players and coach who go to make up the first string selections, four players wear Red Wing uniforms; and smiling Jack Adams, coach of the Stanley Cup-holders, gets the call as chief strategist. Albert "Babe" Siebert, husky Montreal Canadien defenceman, wins selection to the mythical squad for the second straight year. Last year, playing for Boston Bruins, he also won selection as a running mate for Eddie—Shore. From Goal out, without an exception, the squad packs experience and scoring punch. The front line shown at Top, from left to right, has Larry Aurie (Detroit Red Wings) at right wing; Marty Barry, also of the Wings, at centre, and Harvey 'Busher' Jackson, Toronto Maple Leaf ace, on left wing. Red Wings send Goalie Norm Smith (Lower left) to guard the nets and place big hard-rushing 'Ebbie' Goodfellow centre ice at one defence post. Siebert (lower right) of the Flying Frenchmen gets the other defence post. Jack Adams, coach for the 'wonder' team also is pictured.

NELSON LEAFS ELIMINATED BY EDMONTON TEAM

Successors to Kimberley Dynamiters Put Out in First Round

FORT WILLIAM IN

Perth Juniors To Enter Ottawa District Finals

(By The Canadian Press)

British Columbia, producer of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's 1935-36 senior champions, today was the first one to round its representatives among the current season's aborans. Nelson Maple Leafs, successors to Kimberley Dynamiters in the coast province, were knocked from playdowns last night by Edmonton Dominions.

The Kimberley team that won the Allan Cup last year is on an extended European tour. In its place the West Kootenay League pair Nelson and held high hopes as the Club won the provincial title.

Leafs went down fighting in their first interprovincial series. The opener in Nelson went 90 minutes to a draw and the second and third games at Edmonton went to Dominions by 3-1 and 5-4. Behind three goals in the third period last night, Maple Leafs battled to close the gap but could score only twice. The result put Edmonton in Western semi-finals with North Battleford Beavers, who conquered Regina Aces on the way to the Saskatchewan title. The series will open Saturday in Calgary, where Allan Cup finals will be played next month.

Wanderers Tie Series

Fort William Wanderers, Thunder Bay titlists tied the other Western semi-final round with Winnipeg Packers. Manitoba's delegates, by winning 8-1 last night to offset Packers' 5-3 victory Monday, took the total-goals round 8-1.

Wanderers were led to last night's win by Stan Robertson, who scored twice.

St. Jerome qualified to meet Quebec Aces in Cup playdowns last night by winning the Quebec intermediate title over Victoriaville, St. Jerome lost the second game 1-0 but took the total-goals round 8-1.

St. Jerome and Aces are two of eight eastern teams still in the running. Another will pass out tonight, when Port Colborne Sailors are at home to Sudbury Tigers in the second meeting of their total-goals round. The opener in Sudbury ended in a 1-1 tie.

Amherst Juniors In

Only other game along the playdown trail scheduled for tonight is a junior affair in which Portage La Prairie and Winnipeg Monarchs will clash. Monarchs evened the round last night with a 3-2 victory and tonight's result means sudden-death or the loser. The winning team will play St. Boniface in Manitoba finals.

Far and away the class of their section Amherst St. Pats won the Maritime Junior Championship for the second successive year when they beat Charlottetown Rangers 8-3, taking the finals 19-7. Amherst made an impressive showing against Pembroke Little Lumber Kings in 1936 and were being boomed for the memorial Cup today by followers.

Perth defeated Renfrew 4-2 to capture the Ottawa District title with a 9-3 margin on the rounds. Perth meets Ottawa Rideaus for the Ottawa and District Championship in a total-goals series that opens at Perth Friday. The winning team will be sent against Amherst.

Belleville Softball Association Replaces Governing Bodies In This Immediate District

William Todd, Manager of Percival Stores Teams, Elected President

EXPECT JUNIOR ENTRY

Committee To Interview Council on Playing Grounds

An association to govern the activities of softball in Belleville and its environs came into being at the Y.M.C.A. last evening when the Belleville Softball Association replaced all and sundry previous leagues and groups previously connected with and controlling the summer softball set-up in this immediate district.

Representatives from previously functioning City Leagues, Industrial Leagues and O.A.S.A. groups were on hand to stamp their approval upon the new organization and pledge their efforts of its future success. William Todd, who guided the destinies of the Belleville Percival Store to an intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. championship, the first ever brought to Belleville since the inception of softball, was the unanimous choice of the meeting as President of the new organization. Other new and enthusiastic officers were also elected to office and delegates appointed to officially attend the annual meeting of the O.A.S.A. at Simcoe on Good Friday and there present the needs and necessities of softball before the provincial heads.

Softball clubs representing many various classifications were represented at the meeting held in the "Y" last night. For the first time in its history a junior O.A.S.A. softball team requested affiliation in Belleville, when C. Bowler and Homer Townsend officially entered the Aajmaa softball team in the Junior O.A.S.A. entry for 1937. The Belleville-Sargent, winners of the local Industrial League title season, were represented and asked for a class "C" grouping, while the Canada Cement team from Point Anne, semi-finalists in the "B" category in 1936, were back into the fold in this same grouping along with the Percival Store club, intermediate "A" champions of the O.A.S.A. in 1936. Two other clubs are expected to affiliate with the association in the CIACO club of Corbyville and the Corbin Locks of last year's industrial set-up, however.

Officers Elected

The election of officers for the Belleville Softball Association saw a rather heated casting of ballots with the following finally being elected to office, with the exception of the Hon. President, who was unanimously chosen as His Worship, R. D. Arnott. The others elected were:

President: Wm. Todd.

1st Vice-President: Harry Rollins.

Secretary: Harry Knott.

Treasurer: Chas. Tebworth.

The clubs represented were — Aajmaa Club, C. Bowler, H. Townsend, Percival Store, W. Todd, Mac Mornan, Dr. Daniels, Cement, H. Bawden, Belleville-Sargent, Chas. Barnett, J. Partridge. Two other interested persons were also present and intimated other clubs would subsequently affiliate with the newly formed association. The Aajmaa Club entered as a junior club in the Chas. Tebworth, representing the Young Canada Club, was granting a year's leave of absence with power to vote at the annual meeting. In the matter of general business Clem Bowler addressed the meeting relative to the acquisition of a new playing grounds, the present site on Coleman Plaza being inadequate, he thought. Mr. Bowler was of the opinion , that a splendid diamond and complete softball field could be laid out directly north of the present Coleman Flat site and proposed that a committee composed of President Todd, Clem Bowler, Chas. Tebworth and Harry Rollins be named as a committee to interview the city council regarding the matter in the near future. The council assists other athletic and sporting ventures in the city od it is felt, that the softball clubs are entitled to some consideration in the matter of providing adequate playing facilities," stated Mr. Bowler in his comments.

The delegates to the O.A.S.A. will be Chas. Tebworth, Harry Knott, Harry Rollins and Homer Townsend.

RAMBLERS CINCH EASTERN TITLE

Philadelphia Favored to Take Syracuse Stars For Pennant

(By The Canadian Press)

There will be no coasting for Philadelphia Ramblers even though they have clinched the International-American Hockey League's Eastern Section title. Several youngsters on the team have dreams of Major League tryouts next fall and are not taking any chances.

Considered one of the strongest Minor League Clubs ever assembled, Ramblers are favorites to take the title. Farm-hands of New York Rangers, some of the players have been given short terms in the National League this season and with several veterans expected to step aside shortly, their turns as regulars are in the offing.

They played as though the championship was at stake before a home crowd last night to spill New Haven Eagles 4-2. Clint Smith and Bryan Hextall, forwards, rated good chances of stepping up to the big-time with Rangers, both figured prominently, adding two scoring points each.

The most exciting incident in the night's other tussle was a fight between Pittsburgh's Johnny Sherf and Paul Raymond of Springfield Indians. There was no decision given in the battle but Indians won the game 1-0. Alex Smith, veteran defenceman, tired the lone goal in the first period.

Four Members of Red Wings With Jack Adams as Coach Placed on N. H. L. All-Stars

Smith, Goodfellow, Barry And Aurie Players Chosen

"BUSHER" MAKES IT

Jackson at Left Wing Earns $1,000 From Manager Smythe of Leafs

(By Elmer Dolmage)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 18—(CP)—Leading Jack Adams, stout maestro from Niagara, Ontario, gathered around him today the trio of players of his Detroit Red Wings to dominate the seventh annual Canadian Press All-Star teams of the National Hockey League, Busher Jackson of Toronto Maple Leafs made the selections.

Four members of the 1936 world championship team found himself in the driver's seat, that belonged for the years to New York Rangers. Lester Patrick, were placed on the first team. Five each of them the lasts of All-Stardom was new.

Only Siebert, Rangers' all-time last winger, who has come a long way up since he started to slip as a forward, was missing from the 1936 All-Stars. Traded to Montreal Canadiens by the Rangers, he has become the mainspring of the Montreal Club which won the championship in the N.H.L. championship series.

Siebert on Par Second Year

A year ago the All-Star defence was Siebert, Goodfellow, Conacher and Thay Thompson, goal—a all-Scotian barrikade. Only Siebert survived the warfare of anoth: season. That was against Thompson ran third in the voting of Normie Smith of Detroit, amassed in his six seasons in the net Will Dole of Canadians.

Eddie Goodfellow, around whom Adams constructed his Red Wing machine, replaced his ailing Shore as right defence. Marty Barry went to centre, vacated by Hooley Smith, now a Montreal Maroon forum. Larry Aurie took over right wing which Dillon filled for years before hold last year. An injured wrist kept the former on the bench until recently.

Back in stride after a deplorable 1935-36 season, Busher Jackson won the left wing post and a $1,000 bonus offered by Manager Smythe for gaining first-team recognition. The flying Torontonian again annexed the Langley's top scorers, forced Sweeney Schriner of New York Americans back on the second team.

The newspaper critics were almost unanimous in picking Eddie Shore and Aurie. They were not as well agreed as to right defenceman, dividing the ballots between Goodfellow and Earl Seibert of Chicago Black Hawks. The big Detroit Blonde, once as good a centre as he now is a defence player, finished decisively, however.

At left defence on the second team was Lionel Conacher, 35-year-old big train of Montreal Maroons. Nearing the end of a long and famous competitive career, Conacher was adjudged a first-team choice this season than a half-dozen newspaper men at the All-Star assignments ago he talked of retiring. But first he hopes to lead Maroons to a Stanley Cup triumph.

Jackson Was Easily

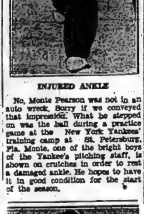
The Jackson-Schriner contest for left wing was one-sided. The Toronto Maple Leaf star outpolled Schriner's right to the second-team berth unanimously. Other members, who voted for Herbie Lewis of Detroit or Aurel Joliat of Montreal Canadiens, Schriner's winning margin wasn't big.

Nor did Cecil Dillon of New York Rangers retain his second-team post as right wing against opposition. Jimmy Ward of Maroons, Dit Clapper of Canadiens ran close behind the backhand artist from Thornbury, Ont., Dillon was named on the second team last year.

Montreal Maroons of Americans had no serious rival for the alternate roster. Chicago Black Hawks netted a great rookie, Sylvanus Apps, ran a good third behind Barry and Chapman. Bill Cook, New Toronto, who beat out Barry for the second team last year was credited with only one vote.

Selection by trustees created no goal and coach. It was unanimous for Tiny Thompson in 1936, when the Boston goalie had the best season and when blond Normie Smith, finishing his first season with the Red Wings, was regarded as the one best bet to succeed Mr. Dumart's armour. That was a year ago.

Goalie Smith Best



The chunky Smith was a hero of the playoffs as the Detroit Wings won the N.H.L. title with three straight wins over Maroons—two of them by shutouts—and then defeated Toronto three times in four starts for the Stanley Cup. He picked up last fall where he left off.

Today he is listed as No. 1 goalie in the league, by a narrow margin over the boyish Cubs of Chicago.

INJURED ANKLE

No. Montie Pearson was not in all solo wreck. Injury, as conveyed that impression. What he displayed was the first half during a practice game at the New York Yankees baseball camp at St. Petersburg, Fla. Montie, one of the bright boys of the Yankee's pitching staff, is due to go on the retired list, Breadon and Frankie Frisch haven't heard of it!....Only Jake Ruppert swears he'll play first baseball before he'll give up their cop. 100 iron men for Lou Gehrig. Perry Smith, Detroit Tigers' pilot, is trying to teach the Brooklyn outfielders how to play on their cops. "Learning baseball" by the Dodgers....Fate of the Cardinal rookies is being decided at nightly conclabs between Branch Rickey, Frisch and coaches Buzz Wars and Mike Gonzales.

Poll of New York writers with the Dodgers picked them to finish fourth this season. That would satisfy Grimes all right....Joe Gordon, rookie infielder, is the talk of the Yankee camp. He is expected to burn up the International League with Newark this season and will certainly step into the shoes of Tony Lazzeri with the Yankees....Cub outfielder has Don Heffner a bit low. Frenchy Bordagaray is learning to play the fiddle so he can take a more active part than pushing the fiddle stick for the Pepper Martin imitators.

Paul Dean is a sucker for hot rod jalopies. Dizzy's little curio is breaking better than ever, but it is having trouble getting it, eh?....Joe DiMaggio wanted to fly to Cuba. Pete Jun Rickey Ruppert and Ed Barrow wired "no."....Pictures of the Colonel arriving in Florida show him with his hands in his pockets....The Colonel says he doesn't keep 'em there, too....Some of the National League managers think of Fred Fitzsimmons, the Mike Rube last year the Cardinals might have on their staff....Gabby claims he bit the homer, that sent Mike to Columbia.

CUBS' HOLDOUT SIGNS

The Chicago Cub's only holdout today was Charley Root, veteran pitcher, capitulated on his arrival at their Catalina Island training camp. He is due as he signed his contract for 1937.

and the Black-haired Thompson of Boston.

Of several fine team-building performances this season, experts picked that of Adams as the best. Manager Jack didn't do it in a day or in a year. He spent several years gathering the stars now in the Motor City and he has the outstanding team in hockey, favorites in many quarters to repeat their double playoff victory of 1936.

Rookies With Veterans

He bought Rec Kilrea from Toronto, Scotty Bowman and Hec Kilrea from the old St. Louis club —those were deals of two years ago. He promoted Smith from Detroit's farm club, Detroit Olympics of the International League. From the same source he got Wally Kilrea, Gordon Pettinger and others.

Adams let three these players in with his trio of established stars, Aurie, Lewis and Goodfellow. His first Barry from Boston, in a trade for Cooney Weiland—one of the best deals Adams ever made. And strong was the Detroit team this year that an early-season injury to captain Doug Young, one of the best defencemen in the sport, made no difference.

Now Aurie is through, injured so bad he can't work in the plants. How well Adams has built will get its greatest test soon.

Cecil Hart, leader of Canadiens' Flying Frenchmen, got days of Morenz and Joliat, came back to score another great success with the Habitants and earn second-team recognition. Away from the N.H.L. three years, he put Canadiens at the top of the Canadian section at the start and kept them there. The death of Morenz was a blow to Hart's team but the Canucks remain a threat.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Those who've seen them say the Giants look okay. At the Training Camps . . . .

(By The Associated Press)

Winter Haven, Fla.: The Phillies open their spring training exhibition season today against Detroit Bees with four rookies Corbett, first baseman; Young, catcher; Schoendienst, short, and Martin, centre field, slated for starting assignments.

Mexico City: Wally Moses joined Lou Finney and Bob Johnson, Philadelphia Athletics' first string outfielders as team two's fly-chasers this trip in today's intra-camp game. Moses reported and signed his 1937 contract.

Daytona Beach, Fla.: With their "batting eyes" sharpened by long practice in the cages yesterday, the Cardinals meet New York Giants today for the third time in three hit.

CARRYING CLACE TROPHY WINNER

Courier-Advocate Cup Won in Defeat of Hinde And Dauch Squad

Trenton, March 18 (Special)—Returning to early season form a smooth passing Trenton Place hockey squad swept to a 6-1 victory over Hinde and Dauch's representatives last night to win the Trenton and District Hockey League crown for the coming year, and an opportunity to meet Picton for the Prince Edward County championship. The Courier Advocate trophy goes to Carrying Place for the first time since the Trenton League commenced operating. High School captured it one season and Hinde and Dauch displayed the jug in 1936 and part of 1937.

By gaining the triumph the Latourneau clicked up their 22nd win of the winter. They drew a tie on two occasions to display the remarkable record of 24 contests without a loss. Getting the first match one sees a group of loyal supporters applauding Johnson's fine score on their good smooth pass, after fifteen minutes of the opening frame. Carrying Place maintained the edge until the first three minutes of the third session, when Carman Ruttan tied the game on a solo attempt. Billet put the Latour outfit in the lead again, when Davis laid down a neat pass and Johnson added to the count one minute later. Miller netted his second shot of the night to illuminate the signal light behind the Hinde and Dauch pipes for the fourth time. Davis was credited with assists on the two latter scores. Hinde scored once and Vandervoort registered on a pass from Davis for the second. Carrying Place fifth and sixth goals.

Five Forwards Used

In a last desperate stand the Papernen sent five men forward, but Hall way through the closing chapter. The leaders' wingmen drew a number of times and only the wonderful performance of goalie Sternburg held them at bay to score sheet. The end came quickly and Carrying Place was still plugging away as he rifled the puck into the bell sounded. Only three penalties were called during the game, the winners and the other to the losers.

The rest proved to be a great asset to the Latourneau's win and the signs of staleness, which were apparent in the two previous final tilts, failed to disclose last night. The line of Johnson, Miller and Davis was a treat to watch, while Drake, Anderson and Vandervoort also gave a marvellous exhibition for the winners. Lott and Carman Ruttan were the pick of the losing team but were coming up the only point for his organization. Teams:

Carrying Place: Goal W. Bowen; defence, B. York and Lennox; centre, Davis; wings, Miller and Johnson; alternates Drake, Vandervoort and Anderson.

Hinde and Dauch: Goal Sternburg; defence, Claude Ruttan and O. Bowen; centre, Lott; wings, Derry and Carman Ruttan; alternates Pinnington, Orange, Wells, Hood and Waldron.

Referee: L. Lecompte R.C.A.F.

OLD and NEW

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"

An Australian freighter battered by wind and wave, fought its way through the mine-lossed waters of the North Irish Sea. . . . Ploughing, through the spume-crested waves of the entrance to the North Channel, she reached the inland waters near Malin Head. . . . But the wind howled about her superstructure and waves still broke over her decks. . . . A boyish figure crashed into the door of the bridge . . . "Save him, mister, he's breaking away", cried the youth to the captain . . . "See what's wrong", the captain ordered his first officer . . . On the boxing decks, a temporary stall housed the imported horse . . . With each list of the vessel the animal continually was thrown against the terrific pounding the ship had received by the seas, the ship in imminent danger of being washed overboard . . . Then it was decided to shoot the horse because of lack of space in the holds of the ship . . .

A shriek of terror rent the air as the ship's officer and the boy hurried down the bridge companionway . . . "He's gone", the boy shrieked . . . Below the decks of the ship, a creaking of snapping that rent the air and horse plunged over the side . . . The boy, looking for that is what the youth was, saw the struggle between man and the horse's trainer had brought the horse's head above water . . . Champion all the way from the start of the world to compete in the Grand National horse . . . Now their hopes were dashed forever.

Two Irish fishermen sat in the warm sunlight of the morning, on the beach near St. Malins Head. . . . Both members still . . . Both over the shale of the beach. . . . A long rag out on grey waters bespoke the aftermath of the storm of the night previous . . . "Mary O' Mary" gagged one, clutching his companion by the arm and pointing to the beach. . . . "What is that?" . . . His companion's eyes widened somewhat. . . . "Why it looks like a horse", he exclaimed . . . They knew the beach to where the horse, for that is what it was, suddenly stumbled; fell and lay still.

* * *

The news of the horse had come out of the sea flashed through Erin land like wildfire . . . Newspapers, people and radio stations had pooh-poohed what they called, the fantastic story . . . Then, the story of Moifaa's loss in a storm at sea. . . . Wild conjectures were made. . . . Some of the wildest, but the creation of someone's imagination. . . . Then came the starting news that Moifaa's master had journeyed to Ireland and had positively identified the "sea-horse" as Moifaa.

* * *

But he relented when influential friends brought pressure to bear . . . So the new horse was put, then reluctantly gave his consent to enter Moifaa in the greatest steeplechase in the world.

* * *

The great day arrived . . . The cream of the world's thoroughbreds paraded before the throng at the starting post . . . 250,000 people filled about the famous Aintree course . . . Royalty was there, the cream of society, the turf world, and many others . . . "Moifaa is crazy. They're off", rang out in the morning air as the field of the greatest horses in the world dashed away from the starting . . . Each jump however took its toll . . . Eight horses rose perfectly at the famous Becher's brook only to crash to the ground never to rise again . . . Moifaa's trainer twisted nervous hands in agony . . . But a cheer arose when sleek Irish Confirmation topped the final jump and went into the lead . . . In the final dash down the stretch to the finish Victory . . . Two horses, distanced neutrals, and breaking from the sleek Irish bred Moifaa, staggered and almost fell as they made a perfect landing . . . A whip from the hand of the boy, the little jockey muttered a prayer as he rode his mount and Moifaa him responded to his pleadings.

Now Moifaa's mumie was at the flank of the second horse . . . Moifaa's trainer was there . . . A rainplan on the green turf as twelve horses and still the staining rhythm . . . Now Moifaa was in second place . . . Over the last jump the gallant horse drew to the flying leader. . . . Nose to nose swept from the beach and went into the run . . . A wildly acclaiming trackside throng cheered the horse on . . . The black head was at the leader's shoulders with a quarter mile to go . . . Again the whip rose and fell . . . Another supreme effort and Moifaa, the Australian steeplechaser, the horse which came from the sea, won by a length . . . The 1904 running of the Grand National steeplechase BELIEVE IT OR NOT.

Sir Malcolm Campbell, holder of the world's automobile speed record is casting his eyes longingly for the high fields of speed in competitive motor boating. He and Miss Campbell have been watching the progress of Miss Britain III, which he reached the 300 m.p.h. which he hopes to attain in 1938. He would make no further attempts on land speed records. The great urge for speed has been satisfied and he is forced Sir Malcolm to start experimenting with motor boats.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Up in the Niagara Peninsula the hockey magnates are anything but satisfied with the Maple Leaf Gardens dominion of O.H.A. and in an undercurrent spreading that the O.A.A.A. champion Peterboro Argonauts have the inside connections with the O.H.A. and setting up an association entered hockey among themselves. Niagara Falls, St. Catharines, Welland, Port Colborne and Thorold, even as far down as Grimsby are the centres where the whispers and rumblings are increasing yearly. We're in the out-lying districts don't ever get much hockey news up there in Toronto. Nearly we attend a big league game. Not that we don't but the same gang are repeatedly returned in office. We not know who make that annual pilgrimage to Toronto every first Saturday in December, who pay the shot, it's the stay-at-homes, who never have the wherewithal to go but somehow are sore and plenty red in the face," when the O.H.A. Maple Leaf Gardens hockey official informed us recently.

X X X

What holds good in the Niagara Peninsula goes doubly as in Eastern Ontario, where the O.H.A. Senior hockey fare for several years back. Up in Oshawa, Bill Hancock, a sports enthusiast from stuffed with their lot and are now looking around for a possible grouping of some kind of a set-up for 1938. Brockville has long since passed the point of no in the O.H.A. while only Junior ranks Ottawa, overcrowded with Kingston, the cradle of the O.H.A. for three years has been hockey mad. Whether or not the hockey club from Oshawa to Brockville or Kingston to Ottawa is ready for strong enough to conduct an association of their own is one we cannot say at this time, but if the Peterboro Hockey Association can decree and organize an association of their own, there's nothing to prevent the others from doing likewise. Whether or not the hockey club from Oshawa to Brockville or Kingston to Ottawa is ready for strong enough to conduct an association of their own is one we cannot say at this time, but if the Peterboro Hockey Association can decree and organize an association of their own, there's nothing to prevent the others from doing likewise. A general deserting of the O.H.A. all over the province. It seems that Frederick Ahearn and the association is not what it should be in the administration of the game among the miners.

X X X

While in Oshawa some time ago we were approached by hockeyists, the executive of the local Intermediate "B" O.H.A. grouping and to see a game between the two. We were not afforded the opportunity for several reasons at the season and went to get into a group but the executive of the "Motor" city Motor City official. Maybe they are disappointed in Oshawa because they have not produced a world beater or a trainer twisted nervous hands in agony . . . But a cheer arose when sleek Irish Confirmation topped the final jump and went into the lead . . . In the final dash down the stretch to the finish Victory . . . Two horses, distanced neutrals, and breaking from the sleek Irish bred Moifaa, staggered and almost fell as they made a perfect landing . . . The local softball moguls gathered around the annual spring fire and elected officers last night at the "Y", John Hall, who was at the helm of the 1936 intermediate O.A.S.A. championship Peterboro Argonauts have the inside connections with the big league intimated it would be very cautious as to who and what clubs they accepted. "We've conducted a successful softball league for the past season and that's what we intend to carry on in the future," commented the high official last night, the reply being "Hear, hear". And let the clubs fall where they may. The only serious problem that confronts the local "mushballers" for the forthcoming season is an adequate diamond or field upon which to play their games. This trouble will be overcome by the new park and undoubtedly straightened out to the mutual benefit of all. The authorities made one move towards the achievement of the game last night to control all softball in the community with an association and it would be the variety of clubs and leagues will be afforded better O.A.S.A. supervision.

There are just as many enthusiastic youthful and potential hockey players in Belleville today as there were back in the early thirty years ago. The layman on the street says so, anyway. Yes we we ran into an isolated case yesterday that thoroughly convinced us that we are right and all that is needed is some young prompter element is a little encouragement and some adequate coaching. Yesterday afternoon we met a Men's Juvenile hockey team that has been entered by the local K-I-Y League but were still perplexed as to their future. They arrange a friendly game with a team in Deseronto. Upon the arrival at the rink they found that the Deseronto rink, however, they have the Belleville team greeted with snow. The kids being a rather inadequate number of the game among the miners.

KING AND QUEEN SEE RUNNING OF GRAND NATIONAL

(By Gayle Talbot)

Liverpool, March 18.—(AP)—A king and queen of England witnessed Liverpool today for the opening ceremonies of the 91st and 100th anniversary of the Grand National tomorrow.

Motorcades with two-way radio communication few overhead directed the route of the mounted policemen and motor patrols directed the route of the mounted police toward the races.

George and Queen Elizabeth, to avoid the crush, arrived early at a little suburban station and motored to Aintree, the Lancashire home of the Earl of Sefton, where they lunched in the 1001 Club, the royal Grand National ten years ago.

Heavy Going For Race

Heavy going over the famous all England within the last few days threatened to bog down horses in this vicinity, assuring heavy going for the big race.

Just what effect the excess moisture would have on the steeplechase course was a question which experts agreed it wouldn't be much help to the heavy-laden Derby. Golden Miller, Carrying 170 pounds over 4 1-2 miles of jumpty takeoffs and landings appeared a whole lot to ask of any horse. Reynoldstown, another heralded outsider pulling out a victory tomorrow would be another stupendingly brighter.

Golden Miller Jumps

Golden Miller jumps" filled the air as the vanguard of the world's greatest handicap sidled toward Liverpool hotels and parks. Names most frequently heard—barring of course the name of Don Bradman. Epo Assessed Support.

Epo, a good second to Reynoldstown last year, was assured of strong support while the chances of Delaware, Lord Stalbridge's entry ridden by Owen Tudor, were considered as one in addition to the field of 37, improved hourly as the prospect of a muddy track became almost a certainty.

The King and Queen witnessed the Grand National for the first time...In years, are due to arrive in Liverpool they will be among of the Earl of Derby at his nearby Knowsley estate. Yesterday the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk and Prince Edward among Lord Derby's guests.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Attention is turning again to liquor shares as the end of Prohibition buying from abroad and from investors is on the basis that the high yields make the issues attractive on a list of industrials. Wall Street is not entirely sold on the long-pull prospects for this industry, and the narrowing of profit margins seems to be its trend. However, many conservative traders believe dividends appear reasonably safe. All the companies are still building up inventories and borrowing heavily for the purpose, except National Distillers which has a boom completed its program and is therefore considered by those who favor the group as the most attractive around current levels.

Sceptical at the Session, Trustine at the Top

Fred C. Kelly, writing in Barron's states that in earlier stages of an important market move the public sees no reason to believe that the move is phoney about a certain stock is dependable. But when later events prove it to have been true, then the average speculator says:

"Oh, if I'd only acted on that inside tip, I'd have made a killing. The next time I get a tip I'll profit from that same source.... Killing."

As this attitude of information repeatedly makes good a time arrives when the public gains all its general timidness and particulars in the averages. This happens after the stock has gone through three-months as high as it is schedule to do. The public buys and has paper profits a-plenty at the top, but does not let them lie each, because the information still continues to be good.

The stock takes a downward turn, but the public hears this is only temporary and buys more of what it now regards as real bargains.

Brazilian Traction

Standard Statistics state that prospective further expansion in revenues of Brazilian Traction warrant retention of its common stock. Better domestic business conditions, with a 20 percent increase in milreis exchange increased last week's gross revenues, (before the final unit) 6 percent. Earnings last year probably were equivalent to $1.50 a share as against 74 cents in 1935. No radical fluctuations in exchange situation are expected. Satisfactory demand for power is probable, with resultant benefits to earnings over the secular period.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Ben's Gift from the Sea

By CLARRISSA MACKIE

"I'm sorry, Ben. Mother and I are ashamed of the way Daisy has behaved—expecting to marry you in the winter and now running away with that traveling salesman from Boston—yes, the minister at Tulloa married them that afternoon, and now as long's they're married and he is her husband, why we've got to make the best of it. But we'd a said night pother Daisy had married you—what can I say to comfort you, Ben?" said Daisy's father.

"Don't worry, about me, Mr. Brewer," he said, extending a big brown hand to the aged bereaved Daisy had only told me she did not love me I would have freed her of once, but don't you and Mrs. Brewer fret about it—it will come out all right."

Ben paused with his hand on the painter of the lighthouse motorboat. The smile had faded and there was only the grimness left on his face. The boat was laden with supplies for the lighthouse, Ben was assistant keeper there to his uncle.

Days, weeks and months went by and Ben Raymond found that time was a little solace.

It was a wild autumn, with raging seas and furious winds that shook the building to its foundation. Folks ashore arose in the night and looked off toward Pancie Reefs to see if some giant sea had not swept it away, but nothing happened until a week later, when a blinding snowstorm held the country in thrall and the friendly beams of Sand Light could scarcely be seen. Through the smothering thickness the big foghorn blared warningly, while a bell buoy nearby tolled with dreary insistence. Ben had not slept for several days and his uncle urged him to rest. "You will be no use to me if sickness overcomes you, lad."

"I'm all right, Uncle Pete," assured Ben. "We've got to see this old nor'easter through without a wreck on the shoal."

"What's that?" bellowed keeper above the noise of the horn.

"Sea gulls—poor critters," muttered Ben.

"Sounds like a cry—" The two men rushed to a window. At first nothing could be seen but the smothering cloud of snowflakes. There was no sign of an unfortunate vessel heading toward the shoal or the signal fires of the life saving station—but there were the fires much nearer at Kitkeel Beach—and the life savers were out tonight. Off Kitkeel Beach were the Bass rocks where another light was placed. But still came that insistent cry that sounded whenever the foghorn paused.

"It's on the shoal below—maybe someone from the wreck of Kitkeat," shouted Ben, and he pulled on his clothes. Morning was breaking big hail there was much piled in the blinding storm. Ben shot a powerful searchlight down at the shoal and glimpsed a mass of something.

"You'll be drowned!" warned his aunt. "But you've got to go, Benny."

For the first time since his broken engagement Ben laughed outright. He kissed his aunt and made for the lower floor. Half an hour afterward he brought up one by one four persons—three women and one man, survivors from the wreck of the ship at Kitkeel, who had been put into a small boat and had drifted to the friendly shelter of Sand Shoal. They were all warmly dressed, and after the keeper and his family had worked over them for hours and put them to bed they slept all through the next day and in more or less degrees of stiffness came down to supper, where a steaming fish chowder awaited them.

Two of the women were silent and drooped at the table, but the third was a young girl, a slender, dainty, with eyes like brown pansies wet with dew and the most appealing smile Ben had ever seen. She was evidently in moderate circumstances, and it developed that she was on her way from Boston to another city to find work. The only mail from the wrecked boat was a cook who could speak little English, but gave a lusty aid in helping Ben reach the life saving station.

The two women and the cook went away the following day, but the girl who had lost all her belongings in the wreck, stayed on at Aunt Hannah's suggestion. "I need a light hand to help me with the work," said the aristo old lady. "All this worry and flurry has upset me; it may take me all winter to feel right smart again."

So Marjorie Lee stayed on and helped and they all grew so fond of her that they would not let her go. She was an orphan and she had grown to love the sturdy keeper, and his sweet wife and as for Ben, he was a hero in her shy eyes.

"You are my gift from the sea, Marjorie," he told her one night when they watched the stars together from a window on the narrow staircase. This was in June and the stars were soft and the breeze was very tender with these lovers.

"No, dear, I give myself to you, but the sea did help us a lot, didn't it?" and she blew a kiss out to the calm waters in memory of that stormy night six months before. That is the way Ben was a bride and brought her to his isolated home, and their happiness is a lesson for all mariners that threatens to outshine Sand Shoal light itself.

TARZAN'S QUEST (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

MAYORS OF CANADIAN CITIES MEET AT OTTAWA TO DISCUSS MUNICIPAL PROBLEMS

Gathered at Ottawa to prepare a united policy on problems effecting Canadian municipalities which they intend presenting to the federal government, 180 mayors of Canadian cities and towns are studying the difficulties of relief and other problems. It is hoped by Mayor Lewis of Ottawa that the Dominion conference of mayors will amalgamate with the Union of Canadian Municipalities and the Association of Town Planning and Housing Officers of Canada, which are also meeting in Ottawa. Mayor Lewis is chairman of the Dominion conference. ABOVE is a group photograph of some of the chief magistrates as they met at the capital: Front, left to right, are: Ont., president of the Ontario Mayor's Association; Alderman W. H. Biggar, Montreal, president of the Union of Canadian Municipalities; Mayor Raynault, Montreal, ex-Mayor C. C. McCrae, Vancouver, and Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa.

CHINA'S RULER WEEPS

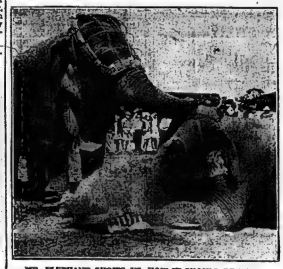
One would hardly expect to find the military commander of a huge land in tears. Yet our alert photographer caught this picture of General Chiang Kai-shek, China's war leader who is also president of the executive Yuan. In tears as he attended the funeral of General Chu Pei-Teh, at Nanking, China. General Chu who had been in charge of the National Military Affairs Commission, was a revolutionary comrade of Chiang.

NAZI YOUTH GETS ITS WAR TRAINING EARLY

At the age of six, German boys well prepared for military service have to join the Nazi youth organizations. Equipped with uniforms and flags, they receive strenuous physical training which leaves them well prepared when they become of age to serve their two years in the army. Here is an impressive view of the Nazi youngsters at a flag display in an open air camp near Berlin.

CHAMBERLAIN DEAD

Sir Austen Chamberlin, former foreign secretary in the second government of Stanley Baldwin and one of Britain's greatest Imperialists and statesmen, died suddenly in London from a heart attack. Sir Austen was the son of Joseph Chamberlain, founder of the modern conception of the British Empire, and was a brother of Neville Chamberlain. He was 73 years of age and had been elected to parliament when only 26. He held many important posts during his long parliamentary career but never achieved his ambition to become Prime Minister.



THESE MAROONS WILL HEAD THE BIG RED TEAM'S PLAYOFF DRIVE

Raised by hockey experts as the dark horse of the N.H.L. playoffs, Tommy Gorman's powerful Montreal Maroon machine rides into the post-season schedule with plenty of backing for their attempt to dethrone Detroit Red Wings as holders of Lord Stanley's coveted cup. Successful in a stiff pull to nose out Toronto Maple Leafs for second place in the Canadian section, Maroons are considered rated dangerous when the checks are down by reason of their power and experience. Big Lionel Conacher (right) will be on the defence and the Big Train is still a second goal-keeper behind the blue line. Not that Bill Beveridge (centre) is needing any twine-tending help. The pudgy ex-Ottawan is playing the finest hockey of his career right when Maroons need it most. Up from Lawrence "Baldy" Northcott (left) will lead the sniping troops. The flashy forward can be depended upon to head the drive for Maroon tallies.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles is on the inside?

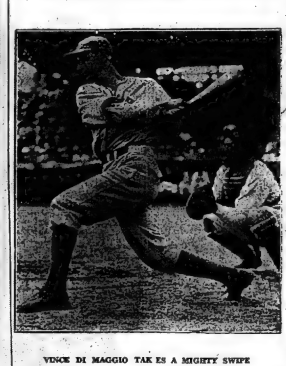
Do you know they can be cleansed from the inside?

Do you know you must get at and remove the cause of Piles, to get rid of them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation—a congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel. This makes the veins flabby, full of impure congestion and add weakens the rectal membranes.

So if you would have relief from piles you should use an internal medicine like HEM-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Leonhardt. HEM-ROID banishes piles by relieving the cause. Relieves congestion, eases the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to tone and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that if, after two or any other good package is not entirely satisfied with the results from one bottle, you may have your money back.



Only 60c at druggists.

Owosso, Mich. March 18 (CP)—When his hired man failed to return from chore duties, a Shiawassee County farmer found his staging a "sit-down" strike to collect $3 back pay. Arguments failed so the farmer walked to a stall and released a bull. The hired man "surrendered." The strike was over.

"HEY! WHERE'S THAT MONEY WE WON"

No sooner had they been presented the cup than Henry Picard (left) and Johnny Revolta, crack pro golfers, began looking for the $2,000 cheque they earned by defeating Lawson Little and Tony Manero, 4 and 3, in the finals of the International four-ball tournament at Miami, Fla. They had to play an extra 18 holes to decide the winner.

VINCE DI MAGGIO TAKES A MIGHTY SWIPE

Vince Di Maggio, brother of Joe, of the Yankees, is shown at bat for the Boston Bees during the exhibition game against the New York Yankees in Florida. The Bees manager McKechnie, believes that Vince will turn out to be as good a slugger as brother Joe, one of the Yankees' brightest stars. Jenna is catching here. Yankees won 13-4.

SAVED FROM ARMS SHIP

Juan Roo, the only sailor to be rescued from the freighter, Mar Cantabrico, is shown waving to the cameraman, from aboard the S.S. Henri Cannegiere, which took him into port at Arcachon, France. The Mar Cantabrico, carrying millions of dollars in aeroplanes and other war materials, was captured by the insurgent Spanish vessel Canarias in the bay of Biscay. The materials were meant for the Spanish Loyalist government to aid in the defence of Madrid. Soo told reporters of a mutiny aboard the Mar Cantabrico, shortly after the vessel left Vera Cruz, Mexico.

Let's go to town —at home!

NO TELLING what tomorrow's weather may be... It fools the best forecasters. But we do want that chintz for the windows. We do need a carpet sweeper, a new percolator, and a new end-table in the living-room... And we DON'T want to slosh around rainy streets to hunt them.

Problem: How to thwart the weather man.

Simple enough!

Let's sit down by the fireplace and read the advertisements. Here it's comfortable and snug. We'll take the newspaper page by page, compare prices, qualities, brand-names. Tomorrow, rain or shine, we'll head for the store that has what we want, and be home again in a jiffy.

"Buying at home"—through the advertising columns — gives you wide selection, more time to decide, and satisfaction when you decide. Make it one of your pleasant habits!

AN AIR NET TO HARASS BOMBING PLANES

The much-publicized balloon-barrage which Lord Swinton, the British Air Minister, recently announced was being designed to guard the defense of London against air raids in the next war will look like this. It consists of "aprons" of wire hanging from a cable supported by balloons anchored to the ground. As built in 1917-18, an "apron" was about 2,000 yards long and 1,000 feet deep, with wires spaced 50 to 100 feet apart. It was supported by balloons floating at a height of 4,000 to 6,000 feet. The Major Edward C. Fleming, from (Wide World.)

BILL PASSES TO CURB ELEMENT

Designed to Strike at 'Very Base' of Communism in Quebec.

Quebec, March 18 (CP)—Designed to strike at "the very base" of Communism in Quebec, a government bill to curb Red propaganda, needed only Royal assent today to become law in this province.

And with the bill's passage, Premier Maurice Duplessis' government was committed to a fight "to the last ditch" against Communism, described by the Union National government leader as "public enemy no 1" of Quebec.

The Premier promised the finish fight as the legislature gave his anti-Communism bill final readings yesterday, placing in the government's hands the right to padlock Communistic meeting houses, to ban printing and distributing of Red literature and destroy such literature.

While the bill was under debate also, the Premier declared his government likely would bring in a resolution asking the Federal parliament to pass "whatever law is necessary" to bar Communism from Quebec. He appealed at the same time to other provincial governments to take similar measures, and said his government stood ready to complement any Federal legislation with necessary provincial enactments.

ESPOSITOR'S FATE IN JURY'S HANDS

Judge Refused Request to Have Part of Evidence Reviewed

New Castle, Pa., March 18.—(CP)—Pella of Rocco Esposito, resident of Kirkland Lake, Ont., charged with the 31-year-old slaying of Francesco Ronzo, rested today with a jury that had deliberated until early this morning without reaching a verdict.

The jury received the case yesterday afternoon and worked until 1 o'clock this morning before retiring. Once the jurors came out to ask for a review of testimony of one witness but Judge Walter W. Graham refused, asserting it would put undue emphasis on a portion of the evidence.

Esposito yesterday denied he had killed Ronzo. He asserted he left New Castle a day before the shooting.

The 56-year-old Italian said he had worked in several mines and had been to Belgium since 1906. For years, he said, he worked in Northern Ontario. He was arrested Jan. 1 at Kirkland Lake and, waiving extradition, was brought here to face trial.

Speak Plain English British Peer's Plea

London, March 18. — Lord Ponsonby has joined A. P. Herbert's campaign for plainer English, by planting his attack right in the House of Lords against no less personages than the Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Strabolgi.

Lord Strabolgi, he said, had declared that 15 per cent of the Labour Party's income was collected. Lord Ponsonby wondered how many Tory MPs it cost. Henry what colective security meant.

It was rarely because of the type so popular with modernists. Vague phrases and metaphors were really misleading, he contended. The Most Reverend Primate had used one when he said, "Christians are ever called to draw the sword in a righteous cause".

The Archbishop of Canterbury: "It may be true, but I am not aware of having said it."

Lord Ponsonby:" I think I am right in saying that the Most Reverend Primate used the expression 'sword'."

The Archbishop of Canterbury: "I quoted St. Paul."

Lord Ponsonby said he thought the Archbishop might have brought St. Paul up to date, and instead of saying "a sword", he should have said "chlorine, phosgene, mustard gas, Lewisite, and thermite".

ROPE TO REMAIN FOR MURDERERS

Gas Execution Plan is Rejected by Special Committee

Ottawa, March 18.—Lethal gas will not be substituted for hanging as the death penalty in Canada if the report of the special committee tabled in the House of Commons is accepted by Parliament.

The report recommended that no change be made in the present method of execution, and said the rope is as swift as the lethal chamber and as much a deterrent to crime.

The committee also considered medical phases of execution, should it be established in each province. It said there had been several grave errors in judgment in carrying out of executions, and "these errors created a revulsion of public feeling and no doubt are largely responsible for the present investigation." It was then recommended the Attorney-General of each province take steps to prevent recurrence of "such, regrettable incidents."

Geo. W. McRae (Lib., Yorkton), committee chairman, tabled the report. The committee was established following introduction of a bill by Dr. J. H. Blair (Lib., Wellington North) to substitute the lethal chamber for the rope.

After questioning prison authorities of five States of the American Union where lethal gas is used for executions, the committee decided there was nothing in the evidence to show the lethal chamber has an advantage over hanging in regard to the length of time it takes to bring death. The States questioned were: Nevada, Arizona, Colorado, Wyoming and North Carolina.

It was also concluded from questions asked United States and Canadian authorities that lethal chamber executions were not a greater crime deterrent than hanging. Canadian experts testified that hanging is a strong deterrent.

Evidence of M. F. Gallagher, of the Remission Service at Ottawa, was quoted at length in the report.

Mr. Gallagher stated there were many reasons for the comparatively low murder rate in Canada and listed among them the attitude of the press.

"I think we should be thankful for the general attitude of the people of this country, which is definitely opposed to crime," Mr. Gallagher had testified.

"It might also be conceded our press, as a rule, have adopted an attitude which has been very helpful in the repression of crime in this country. For instance, we find no hero worship of gunmen in this country. I believe it is generally accepted that the death penalty is one of deterred effect, which is still essential to safeguard the majesty of human life.

"There is a tradition attached to the press method. It is well known in the criminal world, and it is known as something absolutely to be avoided, if possible. There is not only the conception they have of what actual hanging may be, and probably is, but there is the stigma attached to it. It is part of a very long and thorough education.

"If there is a decrease in crime in the United States, where the population is so many times greater than ours, if conditions are becoming decidedly unpleasant for the criminals over there, it may enter their minds to disregard posters and come to operate over here.

"At this particular time, would it be wise to teach in any degree the punishment for crime? I doubt it."

RIGHT REFUSED TO QUESTION WALTERS ON BOOK-KEEPING METHOD

Toronto, March 18—(CP)—The Ontario Legislature, becoming weary of talk, is expected to reach the end of the budget speech debate tonight.

Yesterday William Baird (Cons. Thorncliffe Park) refused to go on with his speech after complaining to the Speaker the members were too paying any attention.

Last important piece of government legislation was introduced by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, in his Farm Products Marketing Act. The bill resulted from the Privy Council decision ruling the Provincial Natural Products Marketing Act ultra-vires insofar as it concerned intra-provincial trade.

Tobacco Marketing Associations and the Cheese Patrons' Association suffered from the ruling, being left without power to levy assessments for organization, said the Minister. The Provincial legislation will restore this power.

The budget debate was sidetracked for an hour yesterday at the House opening when Conservatives sought authority for extension of the scope of the inquiry being made by public accounts committee.

The Conservatives sought the right to examine Chester Walters, controller of finance, on the book-keeping by which the estimated budget surplus for the present fiscal year was arrived at and also on forecast for the next fiscal year, Premier Hepburn declared "the Tories want to transfer the budget debate to the public accounts committee."

House Defends Motion

The Premier called on his colleagues to defeat the motion and this they did by a 64 to 14 vote. Sam Lawrence (CCF., Hamilton East) voted with the government after complaining about the way business is speeded up as the session nears its end.

Dr. A. Duncan Roberts, Sault Ste. Marie member, recently placed on the opposition side of the House by Premier Hepburn, walked out when roll-call division was forced.

Ontario stands in danger of depletion of farm lands of topsoil unless more vigorous reforestation policy is adopted, Angus Dickson (Lib., Perth) warned the House in inspiration and encouragement for reforestation. Every farm should store woodlots and swamps should come from the Provincial Government, Mr. Dickson needed now to control the flood menace in many areas.

Mr. Dickson estimated Hepburn government policies were saving the County of Perth, City of Stratford and town of St. Marys more than $180,000 a year. He cited the tax-rate subsidy, assumption of old age pensions and unemployment allowances costs by the Province, relief of the highway costs and other actions as putting money in the pockets of the municipal taxpayers.

FIND NO GROUNDS TO PREVENT SIMPSON DIVORCE

King's Proctor Finds No Bar to Final Decree; Treated as Any Case

Francis Stephenson, Elderly Solicitor, Withdraws Intervention Which He Laid Last December, and Gives Approval to Wiping Out of Charge

CHARGE STRUCK FROM RECORDS

President of Divorce Court Points Out Further Objections Could be Filed up to Last Moment Before Mrs. Simpson is Granted Absolute Divorce

TODAY'S PROCEEDINGS IN PUBLIC

London, March 19—(AP)—The last apparent barrier to Mrs. Wallis Simpson's absolute divorce and her marriage to the Duke of Windsor was cleared today when a charge of "collusion" was dismissed by the President of the divorce court.

Sir Boyd Merriman, President of the Court, directed the charge stricken from the record after the King's Proctor informed the court that, treating the case "as any other," he had made a careful investigation and had failed to find any grounds to prevent the absolute divorce of Mrs. Simpson and Ernest Aldrich Simpson.

PROCTOR'S SURPRISE MOVE

His action, following the Proctor's surprise move in asking "for instructions" in the case, removed all legal obstacles except the technical granting of the final decree April 27. That action will free Mrs. Simpson to wed the man who abdicated the throne because of his love for her.

INTIMATE DIARY OF WOMAN SEALED

Reveals "Unforgetable Hour of Love" With "Great Italian Statesman"

Paris, March 19 (AP)—Intimate diary of dark-eyed Madeline La Perriere, with its revelations of an "unforgetable hour of love" with a "great Italian statesman" was sealed by police today as they widened their investigation of the shooting of Count Charles De Chambrun.

De Chambrun, descendant of the Marquis De Lafayette and former Ambassador to Italy, was shot to death by a Magistrate for his version of the shooting of Count Leonard Mine. La Perriere said she and De Chambrun had been "about to be caused by to kiss the "great statesman's" lips."

The diplomat reported recovering from a wound in the thigh, told authorities he met his assailant at an interview with Premier Mussolini of Italy and that she later visited the Embassy in Rome several times.

The Magistrate, because of the injured man's critical condition, did not press for De Chambrun's explanation of the bitterness the 30-year-old woman had sold for him after he "betrayed my love" for a man "too famous to let me speak his name." De Chambrun was shot Wednesday as he boarded the Brussels Express at the Gare du Nord.

Extracts from the diary, read in Mme. La Perriere's apartment by investigating Magistrate Pelle de Grand in the presence of her attorney, told of secret meetings with the "great statesman" in a famous Roman palace.

50 MILES HOUR IN OPEN COUNTRY SEEN AS LIKELY

Municipal Law Committee Will Recommend This Rate

AVERAGE DRIVER CASE

Hon. G. S. Henry Favors 50 Mile Limit on Highways

Toronto, Mar. 19 (CP) — New motor vehicle speed limits for Ontario seemed likely today after the Municipal Law Committee of the Ontario Legislature voted to report for third reading a bill to raise them.

The bill would empower cities to make by-laws setting speed limits of 30 miles an hour in open country, 20 miles an hour in cities, towns and villages, municipal councils have power to limit speed to 15 miles an hour in parks.

The committee struck out of the bill the no-speed-limit clause, providing for a 30-mile limit at hills and curves where the view was not clear, and also providing for a 15-mile limit past schools.

McQuesten's View.

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, said he was not in favor dangerous to drive past children at 50 miles an hour near schools as any other place. "To pass the clause would be to invite drivers to do this."

Toronto, Mar. 19 (CP)—A speed limit of 50 miles an hour in open country will be recommended to the Ontario Legislature by Municipal Law Committee. The legislature is it was believed today, almost certain to approve the increase.

The committee's 24-hr recommendation when the bill of James Henry, K.C., Minister of Highways, to abolish the speed limit and substitute a safe driving clause came before it.

R. S. Colter (Lib., Haldimand-Cayuga) declared the bill would make the highways safe for speed kinds and nobody and served in sufficient quantities."

"There seems to be only one answer to an explanation for Premier Maguire's conduct and that is he did not know what he was doing."

"Conditions in the Lunatic asylums are not reformative. They are the reverse—a 'club' and a 'school of crime'."

AUCTION MARKS SEED FAIR CLOSE

Exhibits Are Unanimously Declared to be High in Standard

This afternoon at the City Hall on the last day of the two-day eleventh annual convention and seed fair of the City of Quinte District Seed Growers' Association prize seed grains were variously including potatoes, the pride of growers of this Central Ontario district, were awarded for sale at public auction.

The exhibits this year were unanimously declared by provincial and federal experts judging to be some of the best ever exhibited at any Canadian Fair. This in spite of the unfavorable weather reported by growers last summer.

Brought under control only after a Peterborough fire department truck had made a fast 30-mile run eastward to the scene, the blaze trapped a tenant, William Aitin, on the third floor and threatened for a time to destroy the entire building.

Firemen were unable to grope through dense smoke to reach Aitin and finally a ladder was thrown up to the window and Postmaster J. Perris rescued him. He brought the man down safely.

Over Five Hundred are Killed in Texas School Disaster

Rigidly Plain Reformatory, Abolition of Dormitories Advised by Judge Madden

No Conspiracy to Riot Found—Two Officials Recommended For Retirement—Compulsory Classes For Illiterates and Definite Sentences Favored

Toronto, Mar. 19 (CP)—Withdrawal by officers — Sergeant William Mahaday, the Ontario government was expected today to act upon recommendations by Judge James Madden for turning the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph from a "show-place" into a fence-enclosed prison guarded by armed officers.

Report of the Japanese judge, appointed to investigate causes of a riot in the reformatory Jan. 17 when $25,000 damage was caused to reformatory buildings and 22 convicts escaped, was tabled by Ontario Legislature last night by Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon.

Conclusion and Inefficiency by two

Toronto, March 19—(CP)—In his report to the Ontario Government Judge James Madden set out what he found were causes of the Jan. 17 riot at the Guelph Reformatory and made recommendations for the conduct of the prison. Following are sentences from the report:

"The evidence clearly establishes that there was no organized plan to riot, but there was a conspiracy a plan among 25 or 30 inmates to organize a hunger strike."

"Inequality of sentences for practically similar offences given by different Magistrates and Judges, and long indeterminate sentences imposed upon repeaters who had no regard for anything parallel.....caused hatred towards the institution."

"Inmates now are receiving good wholesome food, purchased in a competitive market, and it is well-prepared and cooked and served in

"There is something radically wrong with the administration of the institution when Superintendent, Dr. J. D. Hodgins, a very dominant type of man for the head of this institution."

$2,000 FIRE LOSS IN BANK BUILDING

Tenant on Third Floor of Campbellford Building Saved by Firemen

Campbellford, Ont., March 19—(CP)—Citizens of this Northumberland County town today surveyed the gutted basement premises of the Bank of Montreal and the two floors above it, after a spectacular fire last night caused damage of several thousand dollars.

Brought under control only after a Peterborough fire department truck had made a fast 30-mile run eastward to the scene, the blaze trapped a tenant, William Aitin, on the third floor and threatened for a time to destroy the entire building.

Firemen were unable to grope through dense smoke to reach Aitin and finally a ladder was thrown up to the window and Postmaster J. Perris rescued him. He brought the man down safely.

HUNT FOR SLAYERS TURNS TO GUELPH

Lawrence Hewitt, Slain Near Kitchener Played Lacrosse in Guelph

Guelph, Ont., March —(CP)— Hunt for the slayer of Lawrence Hewitt, Kitchener taxi cab proprietor, was turned to Guelph. Provincial Inspector Albert Boyd, with Inspector H. C. Jordan and Chief Constable Hodgins of Kitchener conferred with Chief Constable Harold Nash here and left for an unannounced destination. Police would not comment on the nature of the enquiries made here. Hewitt played lacrosse in Guelph for about ten years and was well known here.

ROYAL MAIL WINS, TAKES EARLY LEAD IS NEVER HEADED

ODDS 100 TO 6

Six Only Complete Race Over Rain-Soaked Coarse

Aintree, Mar. 19 (CP) — Lloyd Thomas' Royal Mail, consisting a beautiful race over Aintree's 4½ miles, today won the Liverpool Grand National Steeplechase before the king and queen and a crowd of 70,000.

Jimmy Rank's nine-year-old mare by Sunstar finished three lengths in Bailey's Pucka Belle took third money.

Royal Mail took the lead soon after passing the grandstand the first time and never lost it. Lurching crazily enough to uncover more victims in the blast-shattered ruins of the lumbers "school that oil built".

It was the worst schoolhouse disaster in United States history. Some estimates of the ultimate death toll ranged above 600.

Cause of the blast was sought as one official ordered the removal of debris accumulating in the building from the nearby East Texas oil field. Oil derricks are on the campus.

740 in Building at Time.

There were 700 students and 40 teachers in the two-story London Consolidated School, unit of a $1,000,000 block of educational structures, when an explosion yesterday near dismissal time showered brick and steel and timbers on the campus.

The school, located on a promontory between New London and Gordon, serves an area of 30 square miles.

Eight hours after the blast, a junior high school boy and girl were rescued alive from the ruins as more than 1,000 men from the rich East Texas oil fields attacked the wreckage. The two, sobbing hysterically, were dragged in safe with others and under a protecting arch formed by falling debris.

Rescues After Six Hours.

A woman teacher was removed alive but injured after being buried for several hours.

Frantic mothers and fathers spent the night searching by motor car from town to town attempting to find their children in more than a dozen improvised morgues.

"Gas Fumes" Accumulation From Oil Fields Thought Cause

SCHOLARS CRUSHED

Consolidated School Served Thirty Square Miles

Austin, Tex., Mar. 19 (AP)—Walter Elliott, Texas Highway Patrol captain, notified authorities here today that 500 bodies, 17 those of teachers, had been recovered from the ruins of the London Consolidated School at New London, wrecked by an explosion late yesterday.

New London, Tex., Mar. 19 (AP)—Torn bodies of more than 350 high school students and teachers were counted as known dead today while rescuers toiled through ragged crags sought to uncover more victims in the blast-shattered ruins of the lumbers "school that oil built".

Irony of Fate Seen in Scrawl Upon Blackboard

New London, Tex., Mar. 19 (AP)—As workmen pulled debris from the London Consolidated School today a blackboard was exposed showing this in a scrawl:

"Oil and natural gas are East Texas greatest source of blessing. Without them this school would not be here and none of us would be here hearing our lessons."

An accumulation of natural gas was blamed for the explosion, which took hundreds of lives.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

London March 19 (CP)—A solicitor at Bromley County Court the other day was questioning a witness about the best solution.

"Was it as far as from there to the reporter?" he asked.

"Yes, to the reporter" said the witness.

The solicitor pointed to the press box. The woman exclaimed: "Oh, is that the reporter? I thought they always wore their hats."

Ottawa, March 19 (CP)—Senator A. C. Hardy and Mrs. Hardy of Deseronto, have refused the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Red Cross Humane Association $5,000 reward raising for information leading to completion of the west wing of Ben High Hall at Queen's, it was announced last night.

Windsor, Ont., March 19 (CP) —Because of the terrific explosion in a New London, Texas, schoolhouse from a boiler explosion which killed hundreds of children Windsor Separate School Board last night expressed unanimous approval of the practice of examining school buildery month and also having inspection once a year by an insurance firm specializing in the work.

Frankfort, Germany, March 19 (AP)—This city's Lord Mayor was "delighted" to hear he was estimated $1,000,000 was coming to Frankfort when he left with a United States convict.

The convict, Alphonse J. Sieghard, left his whole estate to the city he visited in the 1890's when he died in the Frankfort Insane State Hospital for the criminal insane in 1933. He said the funds should be used to establish municipal vineyards.

Yesterday the Apostate Divine Church Albany, N.Y., held the will valid.

Brighton, Ont., March 19 (CP) —Tornado damage in this Northumberland county area will reach a total this season it was indicated today with more than a dozen convicted for by canning companies.

TWO MILL REDUCTION

Kingston, Ont., March 19—(CP) —The Finance Committee will recommend to the City Council that the tax rate for 1937 be struck at 45 mills on the dollar on ordinary assessment and at rates of three quarters of a mill on the dollar for the collection of garbage.

The rate on the ordinary assessment for 1937 shows a reduction of 2 mills.

No Conspiracy to Riot Found—Two Officials Recommended For Retirement—Compulsory Classes For Illiterates and Definite Sentences Favored

Toronto, Mar. 19 (CP)—Withdrawal by officers — Sergeant William Mahaday, the Ontario government was expected today to act upon recommendations by Judge James Madden for turning the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph from a "show-place" into a fence-enclosed prison guarded by armed officers.

Report of the Japanese judge, appointed to investigate causes of a riot in the reformatory Jan. 17 when $25,000 damage was caused to reformatory buildings and 22 convicts escaped, was tabled by Ontario Legislature last night by Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon.

Conclusion and Inefficiency by two

Reformatory Recommendations

Toronto, March 19—(CP)—In his report to the Ontario Government Judge James Madden set out what he found were causes of the Jan. 17 riot at the Guelph Reformatory and made recommendations for the conduct of the prison. Following are sentences from the report:

"The evidence clearly establishes that there was no organized plan to riot, but there was a conspiracy a plan among 25 or 30 inmates to organize a hunger strike."

"Inequality of sentences for practically similar offences given by different Magistrates and Judges, and long indeterminate sentences imposed upon repeaters who had no regard for anything parallel.....caused hatred towards the institution."

"Inmates now are receiving good wholesome food, purchased in a competitive market, and it is well-prepared and cooked and served in sufficient quantities."

"There seems to be only one answer to an explanation for Premier Maguire's conduct and that is he did not know what he was doing."

"Conditions in the Lunatic asylums are not reformative. They are the reverse—a 'club' and a 'school of crime'."

ROWBOAT AND TUG REACH YEO ISLE

'Rescued' Woodchoppers Are Found Safe on Island

Tobermory, Ont., March 19—(CP) —All's well with the inhabitants of Yeo Island and they don't need to be rescued, Dunlop, tug owner, Capt. John Amsbury and the doughty crew of the steam tug Parker's Dunlop and other heroes of sorts today in this little Lake Huron fishing town.

For Captain John and his men struggled for 18 hours yesterday to reach Yeo, 12 miles out in the rolled Lake Huron. Four other men had gone in a row boat to air five timber cutters thought to be in need of help on the island came in a share of the acclaim, too.

Flashing fire signals from the island brought the rescuers to within one thing to the fishing folk here: Yeo Island woodchoppers, Percy Spears, Bill Robbins, Jack Robertson, Bert Hartley and Bill Lowery, were in no danger. "Rescue" efforts, accordingly, were unneeded.

But when the lugboat crew reached the island last night, they found the four would-be rescuers who had preceded them grouped around the campfire with the "rescued." Supplies had run out, Spears, the captain and his men cleaned up what food there was and returned to Tobermory, towing the rowboat.

Says Robbins Seen In Back Yard

"They were robbin!" affirmed Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Odell, 220 John Street this morning. "They were right here in our back yard. Saw 'em with our own eyes. Took crumbs we threw out."

"You are sure they were robbins?" "Positively."

Compulsory Education Urged For Reformatory Prisoners

300 Out of 700 Have Not Passed Entrance

JUDGE'S VIEWPOINT

Toronto, Mar. 19 (CP)—Compulsory education for reformatory and penitentiary inmates who have not passed their entrance examinations?

That proposal relating to attend classes would lose customary privileges and be compelled to perform the most disagreeable and hardest kind of work.

One full-time teacher now is employed at the reformatory. Judge Madden suggested a more experienced teacher, preferably one with a university record certificate, and an additional paid teacher to teach elementary subjects would work a great improvement.

Judge Madden said: "The educational problem should receive greater attention and all illiterates and near-illiterates should be compelled to attend classes. Likewise the penitentiary inmates who have not passed their entrance examinations."

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Spring Sunday! If you have just set out some tender plants, you must remember to protect them against sudden frosts. Remember that frost may occur with air temperatures as high as 38 degrees. The point is that the tender leaves and shoots cool off by radiation faster than the air. When the ground is 32 degrees or below, a deposit of feathery ice crystals results. But plants may be frosted without the deposit of ice crystals. Frosts are most likely to occur on clear, calm nights. Protection is attended by placing sheets of paper or cloth over the plants.

TREE-TAPPING ... WILL SPEED UP

"If we can't punchin' 'em next week," stated a Prince Edward County farmer last morning, in answer to a query as to when tree-tapping operations would start. "This weather should bring the sap along, but a lack of snow in the woods will make the work a lot harder. We will be well under way a week from now," he prophesied.

MANY LISTEN TO RACING RESULTS

With interest apparently heightened by the fact that a race in the neighborhood held a ticket on one of the horles, citizens of the crowded bottle radius this morning to hear the running of the famous Grand National Steeplechase, run at Aintree course in England. Pedestrians stopped outside radio stores and any other available place where the broadcasting was received. The question on everyone's lips was "Where did Field Master finish?" His habit at the race on which Mr. Thomas Irwin, of Sidney Township, held a ticket, was not known, however, did not finish in the first four horses and therefore once more assumed its peaceful attitude.

BOARD HEARS 18 APPLICATIONS

Eighteen applications for allowances granted the Board of the local Board of the Mothers' Allowances Act, Province of Ontario, when that body met in the office of the County Clerk of Hastings yesterday. Following a probe of the applications the Board recommended that ten be accepted. Of the remaining eight, two were rejected and the rest held over for further investigation. Mr. Alex Moore is the Chairman of the local Board.

MOTOR SHOW

The lilting tunes of old time dances played by young and old fiddlers; the antics of amateur actors, musicians and vocalists; the eloquence of a battery of speakers brought to the platform to highlight the Motor Show being held by members of the Kiwanis Club, of Belleville next month.

Tuesday night now being laid down under the capable eye of Jeff Marvell call for one of the most elaborate programmes of this nature ever held in the city. Members of the Club are confident that Chairman Marvell and the combined efforts will result in one of the most colorful attractions it has been the privilege of residents of the city and district to witness.

An added attraction, which if it materializes will be of great importance to hockey-lovers, and especially to the local supporters of the Maple Leafs of Toronto, is the announcement that Conn Smythe, Clancy, dynamic ex-defenseman of the team, Charlie Conacher, famous Bowmanville boy, and Hap Day, old of Canadian fame, and other stars of the Toronto hockey aggregation will be under way to bring the galaxy of stars to the Motor Show.

Rod Haines and his Commodore Orchestra will dispense dance rhythms during the show, and dancers will be able to enjoy their favorite recreation on a specially constructed floor. All in all it looks like a gala occasion for the residents of this city and district.

SYDENHAM F. HAGERMAN

A well - known and highly esteemed resident of Belleville for 66 years, the late Sydenham F. Hagerman passed away at the family residence, 117 Bridge Street, on Thursday evening, March 18th, after an illness of about six months' duration, due to many friends and acquaintances whose lives he brought sincere feelings of regret.

The late Sydenham Fred Hagerman was born 84 years ago in Rawdon Township, his parents being the late Joseph Hagerman and his wife Armanda Parry. He was educated at the Rawdon Township school, the Belleville high school and at Queen's College in Belleville. After spending some years farming in Rawdon township he came to reside in Belleville where was engaged for some years in the canning business with the late firm of Messrs. Carson, Mowden & Gerling, which firm has for long been living retired. Mr. Hagerman was a great lover of horses and was an expert driver, for many years he owned in his time, horses of high class which he drove in competition at the fairs. He was interested in all class sports.

The affairs of the city of his adoption were also of interest to him and during the years 1908 and 1918 Mr. Hagerman served as city councillor for Belleville in city council. He was a good citizen and by all who knew him he was held in high esteem. In religion he was a member of the Bridge Street United Church.

Surviving to mourn his loss and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended are his widow, who was Miss Sarah Shibley; two sons, Mr. Sidney Hagerman, Belleville, and Mr. Ernest F. Hagerman, Rochester, N. Y.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

SQUATTER FOUND GUILTY OF THEFT

George English, Trenditnagh transient squatter, was found guilty of the theft of a quantity of honey, the property of J. Cook, Trenditnagh, by Magistrate R. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court and sentenced to serve one month in the common jail.

On a second charge of petty trespassing, however, English, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve ten days, the latter sentence to run concurrently with the former.

English did not plead guilty to the theft charge, Archie Little and Eldon Little, Trenditnagh neighbors of Cook's both testifying as to seeing English on Cook's property, while the former said the squatter had treated English in the freshly fallen snow to his abode. Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien, who investigated, testified he had found a quantity of comb honey in the house in which English squatted. "It's wonderful the man hasn't been delay of these properties," added the officer.

English refused to testify in defence. Upon the evidence submitted I have no alternate than to find you guilty as charged, and sentence you to serve one month in the common jail, dating from the time of your arrest," concluded Police Magistrate Butler.

Many thousands of persons pleaded guilty to the theft of two radiators, the property of the Johnson Construction Company, when charged. Prices were valued at $80.00 and the sentence was fixed at $50.00 each, or $4.00." interrupted Acting Crown Attorney Howell.

W. H. Snyder, superintendent of the construction company, stated his firm was relying to recover the radiators. If the costs were repaired.

"This is a serious charge, perhaps I had better reserve judgment until the 26th of this month in order to give the accused an opportunity to repair the damaged radiators and make restitution," commented His Worship.

The radiators were removed from donkey engines' left near O'Brien's Bridge by the Johnson Construction Company, Constable F. Smith, who investigated, stated.

Three others appeared charged with intoxication, two stating they would plead guilty, namely Ida Young, for breaking and had a leather collar about his person, stated Mr. Thorne. The dog will be held for the usual time and if not claimed, will be destroyed.

BOSTON BULL PUP HELD IN POUND

Found wandering at large a valuable Boston bull pup was picked up by Tina Thorne, custodian of the dog pound yesterday. The dog seems to be of pure breeding and had a leather collar about his person, stated Mr. Thorne. The dog will be held for the usual time and if not claimed, will be destroyed.

Lights Not Dimmed on Truck Jury Finds at Horan Inquest

Also States Necessary Reflectors For Width of Truck Not Carried

KILLED INSTANTLY

That George E. Horan, R.O.M.P. constable, carried out all the requirements of inquiries received when the automobile which he was driving struck a Cities Service oil truck on Highway No. 2 four miles east of Belleville, on March 6th, the said truck not being equipped with the necessary reflectors as required by law, the truck being 87 inches wide, and also that the driver of the truck did not dim his lights upon approach," was the verdict submitted by the coroner's jury to the adjourned inquest looking into the death of the late Constable George E. Horan, at the police court rooms before Coroner Dr. O. Orok, last evening.

Dr. R. A. Flynn was the first witness called and told of arriving at the scene of the accident and the cause of death. Upon arriving he found the deceased lying on the bottom of the road by the car. He died instantly as the result of a compound fracture of the skull, Dr. Flynn stated.

William Hopping, Belleville, and driver of the oil truck which was in the collision with the Horan-driven car, stated he had left Toronto at 4.30 p.m. yesterday westerly about 4.30 p.m. while parked along the side of the road, about 2 miles Frankford. "What do you remember seeing just prior to the accident?" asked Acting Crown Attorney Ormond Butler who conducted the examination last night. "I was coming along westerly, on my own side of the road, when I noticed approaching and in the centre of the highway, after going over the bridge west of the Point Anne turn. I noticed as far as possible to the right and suddenly there was a loud crash," replied the witness.

"How far west of the bridge do you estimate the point of impact was?" asked Mr. Butler.

"About 40 feet, I should judge," was the reply, following which Mr. Hopping stated the truck had swerved after the impact and turned to come to a stop in the ditch.

"Where was the car?"

"When I first saw it, it was turned over and lying in the centre of the highway, opposite the front of my truck and ran to the assistance of those in the car. I noticed a man pinned underneath it, but I could not release him. Later a car driven by Mr. Macfarlane B. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court and sentenced to serve one month in the common jail.

On a second charge of petty trespassing, however, English, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve ten days, the latter sentence to run concurrently with the former.

Mary Hamilton, Belleville, pleaded guilty to the theft of two radiators, the property of the Johnson Construction Company, when charged. Prices were valued at $80.00 and the sentence was fixed at $50.00 each, or $4.00." interrupted Acting Crown Attorney Howell.

INTEREST GROWS IN CHEESE SHOW

High Praise For Belleville District Cheese is Given

Interest in the Dominion-wide cheese exhibition which will be held in this city in connection with the annual convention of the Central Cheese Cheesemakers' Association of Eastern Ontario, has already risen throughout Ontario and other sections of the country, it is indicated by the fact that even now donations for the Dominion Prize Fund and the exhibit are being received at the local office of the Dominion Dairy Branch.

In communication received today from Canada Packer Ltd. Toronto one of the largest buyers of cheese in Canada, hope for the success of the convention and exhibit was expressed.

"Belleville holds a very high reputation for the production of finest quality cheddars," they claim, and no doubt this reputation is worth many dollars to the producers of that territory. It is logical, therefore that the producers do endeavour to emphasize their reputation by exhibiting as much attention as possible to their products.

"We will be buyers in the Belleville district and will be pleased to pay the top price to secure the good product, and in this way we feel we are giving full support to the good work which you are doing."

Aqua Vitae

MOTHERS, HOUSEWIVES, DIETITIANS and ANYONE whose dietary it is to attend to the preparation of nourishing, well-balanced meals will find something of vital importance in the announcement.

You know that Doctors and Dentists are continually stressing the need of milk, fruit and vegetables in our meals — why? The need of salts, found in abundance in these foods, has been proved in our Universities and Agricultural Colleges, and we have learned that it is being removed from our soils and depleting stocks of these vitalizing minerals. You may ask "how are we to obtain them?" Fortunately right here in Belleville we have found a product that contains these essential minerals in Nature's own state — AQUA VITAE.

For months past experiments have been conducted using AQUA VITAE in cooking various foods. For instance, instead of using ordinary water in making porridge you AQUA VITAE. It is the ordinary water in making porridge you AQUA VITAE. It is the ordinary water in making porridge you AQUA VITAE. It is the King's Proctor Finds No Bar to Final Decree;

"The result of the King's Proctor's inquiries," the Attorney General, Sir Donald Somerveil, informed the court, "on all aspects of the case was that there was no evidence to justify him in directing intervention."

Francis Stephenson, an elderly solicitor whose mysterious intervention last December—just one day before Edward abdicated—caused today's almost final scene in the drama, rose to his feet and gave his approval to the action wiping out his charge of "collusion."

COURT ROOM PACKED

Every inch of standing room was packed in the court. Hundreds of persons were turned away and stood in long lines outside the doors.

After the proceedings, Stephenson rushed from the room. The white-mustached, gold-spectacled little man seemed painfully embarrassed by his role during the hour's legal airing of the world's most celebrated divorce action.

"I've otiier fish to fry," he exclaimed as he brushed his way through the throngs of curious.

The spot light was focussed on the elderly man when the President called for him to stand after Sir Donald finished his application on behalf of the Proctor.

STEPHENSON CENTRAL FIGURE

"I'd like to say just this, My Lord, he said, rising slowly from the seat where he had heard himself referred to throughout the hearing as "Mr. Stephenson."

"The facts as put before Your Lordship by the learned Attorney General are substantially correct and that applies to any steps taken by me and anything that may have been said by me since."

Before he issued the order wiping out Stephenson's intervention, the President said he had exercised his own power because "of the importance there should be no legitimate grounds for suspicion in the public mind that this case is being treated differently from any other case."

OPEN COURT

Pointing out further objections could be filed up to the last moment before the divorce was made absolute, the President directed any further proceedings be held in open court.

Stephenson, the Attorney General informed the court emphatically, had withdrawn his intervention without "pressure of any kind or from any source."

Norman Birkett, K.C., who appeared for Mrs. Simpson at Ipswich, and Walter Frampton were present in her interests.

Sir Donald announced to the court Stephenson had withdrawn his intervention on the collusion charge through regard "to the events which happened in December, 1936, and which are now matters of history."

EVIDENCE THOROUGHLY SIFTED

But notwithstanding the withdrawal of the charge, the Attorney General said the Proctor had thoroughly sifted the evidence for "there were circumstances connected with this case which made it in my opinion a proper case for investigation."

The King's Proctor, the Attorney General continued, "had three matters in mind:

"1. Whether the case was an arranged or collusive one.

"2. Whether petitioner (Mrs. Simpson) was an accessory to or connived at adultery.

"3. Whether there had been any conduct on the part of the petitioner which made her not entitled to relief."

NO AFFIDAVITS

Stephenson, it was disclosed, had failed to comply with the law by backing up his intervention last December with affidavits.

"Mr. Stephenson", the Attorney General said, "told the King's Proctor he was not possessed of any evidence to support his allegations and they were based on rumour which he had heard from friends and news which he had seen in the press."

The Attorney General said the Proctor, Sir Thomas Barnes, had received a vast number of letters, "based for the most part upon merest gossip and rumor."

Many of them, he said, emphasized the fact, however, "that a case which might ordinarily have been expected to come up in London in fact came up in Ipswich."

WHY IPSWICH WAS CHOSEN

The same question was raised by Sir Boyd, who questioned Birkett on the basis for placing the original application in the ancient Sufolk town.

"It was a matter that troubled the learned judge 'who tried the case," Sir Boyd said. "I want to know something about it too."

Birkett paused for a moment, then declared the responsibility rested with him as Mrs. Simpson "in all matters of procedure acted on advice."

PLACE OF RESIDENCE

He added she was "then suffering and was now suffering great nerve strain," and in the circumstances he thought best to deal with the case as quickly as possible.

He referred, he said, to the crowded condition of the London court lists and emphasized Mrs. Simpson had intended to establish Felixstowe—in the Ipswich jurisdiction—for a considerable time.

"Certain conditions" arose, however, he declared, which made it impossible for her to maintain that residence.

Referring to "rumors and gossip," he added "the petitioner can not expect to be free from these things."

FAILURE TO COMPLY

The application, Sir Donald said, was made because he understood that as long as the intervention remained on file the divorce could not be made absolute.

He wanted it cleared up, he told the court, because of a letter which the King's Proctor had received from this senior registrar pointing out Stephenson had failed to comply with the law by not filing affidavits "setting forth the facts upon which he relies within four days after entering an appearance."

MEMORIAL CUP RACE NARROWS

Eastern And Western Contenders All Knotted up, Sudbury Strong

(By The Canadian Press)

Southern Manitoba hockey addicts agreed today if their annual Memorial Cup championship classic should be halfway toward crowning the mystical Dog, unbeaten mate of Dominion hockey supremacy, Fitzowers of other contenders might utter forced laughter but the fact remains Southern Manitoba has been producing a flock of youngsters for professional ranks of late years.

The bitter fight Winnipeg Monarchs and Portage la Junior Champions is waging for district honors has worked up the combatants. Looking-for all the world like minor editions of the New York Rangers, that train in all the winter each autumn, the two rivals have put on a classic final series.

The opener was one-sided—a 6-1 victory for Portage—but Winnipeg took the second game 3-2 and last night they played a 5-5 overtime tie in the rubber match. A fourth contest, to be played Saturday, was made necessary.

There was no scoring until the final period last night. Then Johnny McCreedy of Monarchs and Jim Rowan, Portage Terriers goal, that forced extra time. There was no further tallying before a halt was called.

An eastern series that has rivalled the Winnipeg-Portage affair in intensity will be concluded tomorrow at Toronto, when St. Michael's College will be at home to Sirasbert Midgets. Both traditional producers of great junior machines, St. Mike's and Stratford have broken even in four games for last week in Ontario Hockey Association title.

Ottawa Rideaus and Perth will begin a total-goals round for the Ottawa and District championship tonight. The winner will play Amherst St. Pats, victors in the Maritimes.

Last night Sudbury Tigers, successors to Sudbury Falcons, who won the Eastern Ontario flenior Crown in 1936, eliminated Port Colborne Sailors from Allan Cup playdowns. The teams tied 1-1 in the opener of the total-goals series and Tigers won the second game 3-0. Port Colborne 2-4. Jim Dewey, former Moose Jaw luminary, led Sudbury with four goals.

Sudbury will play the Toronto and York municipal champions. Goodyears or Dominions, in the next round of playdowns.

PICTON

Picton—Kiwanis Theatre Nights, Monday and Tuesday, were well patronized and very enjoyable events all the local theatre. The stage was beautifully decorated with cerise and dark blue bunting, brightly shaded lights, and baskets of lovely spring flowers and ferns lining plants. Seated there were the fifteen members of Picton Male Choir with their conductor, M. V. Knapp, and pianist, Mrs. Doris Knapp, and the guest soloists of the evening, Mrs. A. G. Richmond and Miss Florence Barker who were accompanied by Mrs. H. U. Tobey. The opening numbers given by Doc. Featherstone's orchestra, the choir's second programme of songs and guest singers was varied and greatly appreciated. Three piano solos by Mrs. Tobey also drew rounds of applause. Mr George Hollowell was in charge of his sound system in the theatre. A picture showing the new Canadian star, Deanna Durbin, and giving scores for her marvellous voice was on the screen. At the intermission members of the Kiwanis sold grab bags, the proceeds to further funds for their work. Some of them contained coupons calling for various prizes. Winners were announced and were: Wm. Norton and Miss Betty Welsh —one dollar bills; Mrs. Ron Chantry —1-2 doz. bottles Canada Dry; lamps—Ben Leavens, Bob College and John Blakely; cushion—Dayton Wark.

Scout Troop No. 4, held their annual Father and Son banquet in the Masonic Temple on Wednesday evening with about fifty "dads and sons" present. A banquet dinner was served at long tables by Mrs. Bail Reg. N. assisted by Mrs. Jack Vesterveld and Mrs. Jim Branscomb. The blessing was asked by Rev. Darrell Winters. Head table were S. M. Bruce Yarwood, Don Walters and Ted Thue. Turpin Fellowes was toastmaster and after the dinner was concluded by Rev. G. Smith and Thomas Turpin had charge of the ceremony. There were the usual committee reports and an address by Assistant Scout Master Lea. Awards for Height of hand tricks were done by Mr. Clair Newman. Proficiency certificates: Malakti "Oscar" was given by scouts Don Fournia, Billy Shane and Gerald Hollowell, assisted by Jack Hall. Scouts Rex Cross, Geo. Richardson, Joe Gunns and Carter Rawling, Indian Club swinging was done by Jack Rawling. The evening proved most enjoyable by all present.

Mr. Hugh McWilliams is visiting his son, Dr. Jack McWilliams, in the New York State.

In spite of youth stormy weather, large numbers of ladies turned out for the Fashion Show in the Parish Hall on Wednesday afternoon under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. Very attractive Spring models from a local store were displayed by three professional models and Mrs. Everett Scott and Mrs. Mac Kelsey and the Misses Barbara Sharp, Audra Clow, Tina Henderson, Dorothy VanDusen, and Madelon Ward. Tea was served by the Regent Mrs. Gerald Allison and members of the Order of the Case of the Rose.

ROBERTS PROBE IS POSTPONED

Roberts And Conservatives Oppose Delay, Liberals Vote Coldly

Toronto, March 19.—(CP)— Inquiry by a Legislature Committee into charges involving the sanity of Dr. A. Duncan Roberts, member of Sault Ste. Marie, was postponed indefinitely today over the strenuous objections of Dr. Roberts and Conservative members of the Committee in Privileges and Elections.

Hon. Leavid Croll, Minister of municipal affairs, said the government wanted the inquiry postponed until Sir James Dunn returned from England. Liberal members of the committee voted solidly to do so and Conservatives and Dr. Roberts voted no.

Dr. Roberts was accused in the Legislature by Premier Mitchell Hepburn of "blackmail" of the Algoma Steel Corporation in connection with an Iron Ore Bounty Bill before the Legislature and of conduct "unbecoming a member" in relation to a contract for a lumber camp.

Extension of Scope

Dr. Roberts moved for the inquiry. Yesterday Premier Hepburn moved the extension of the committee's scope of any charges that might affect Dr. Roberts as a member. The committee has been empowered to sit after the House recesses and to submit its report next session.

William F. Nickle, Kingston (Lib., Hamilton Centre) was named committee chairman.

"I am the aggrieved party here," Dr. Roberts told the committee as it opened. "I want to be protected against undue delay. I have been accused of blackmail. I want to be free lost in clearing my name."

"We must delay to hear the whole case at once, said Mr. Croll. It is the public interest that it be cleared up. You were in the House when the Prime Minister said he had a $7,000,000 surplus and we want to spend some of it and spread prosperity among the members of the legislature."

GEHRIG SIGNS CONTRACT FOR MERE $36,000

One Year Agreement, Yankees All in Fold Except Ruffing

New York, March 19 (AP)—Lou Gehrig quit his holdout hangout in New Rochelle, N. Y., yesterday and left in the rain for St. Petersburg, Fla., to join New York Yankees.

"Joe McCarthy called me from Florida this morning and convinced me there wasn't a chance of getting more than $36,000, so I agreed to sign for that and come with it," said Gehrig.

Weighing 215 pounds and full of the spirit of compromise, the sagging first baseman claims he "would be ready in bed" rather, than play for $31,000, his 1938 salary.

"Until two weeks ago, Colonel Ruppert insisted he would not pay me a cent more than he did last year. I thought that was unfair in view of the record last year, and I'd have stayed right here in Rochelle until doomsday if he hadn't offered more," said Lou.

The $36,000 agreement amounted to a compromise all around. When Gehrig refused the $31,000 offer, he immediately demanded a $40,000guarantee and that he be allowed to played 100 games. Colonel Jacob Ruppert, Yankee owner, considered this so exorbitant a price that he took a couple of weeks to calm down before finally offering Gehrig $36,000.

Encouraged by his progress, Gehrig refused again and did nothing until today.

Gehrig's $5,000 raise was the second highest boost handed out by the Yankees this year. Sophomore Outfielder Joe Di Maggio signed for $15,000, which is $6,500 better.

The only player now out of the New York club is Pitcher Charley "Red" Ruffing, who has been offered $15,000, and wants $16,000.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, 186 Front Street, Belleville.

W. R. MORTON, PUBLISHER

MAINTAIN STREET RECORD

Belleville's good highway record is one that has been set only with the courtesy and the carefulness of thousands of drivers and of many thousands of pedestrians, and the regulation of traffic by the police.

The proud record of entire lack of fatal accidents for years on the city streets is one which must be preserved. Drivers, pedestrians, police must be so proud of this that they will see to it that there be no break in the chain of safety which has been forged here, out of the co-operation of so many factors.

Children and their parents are deserving of the highest commendation for the way in which they have seen that children use care in crossing roads.

In this respect the Department of Highways is not to be forgotten. It has at all times stressed the ideal of courtesy in driving as a means of promoting safety and no doubt a considerable share in this fine result has been due to the influence of the campaigns this department has put forward.

Belleville of course, does not stand in the class of the large cities where motor traffic is very heavy but it is on the crossroads of highways and notwithstanding this fact has a record of some years without a fatality on the roads.

This means not only that lives have been permitted to carry on normally without being ended under the wheels of traffic, but it also means that this is not the result of mere chance. It shows what can be accomplished in reduction of road mishaps.

In establishing this satisfactory condition, the manifest duty of all for the future is to do the very best to maintain it.

A POETIC SATIRE

Montreal Gazette has discovered a cleverly hidden acrostic in four verses published in the Social Credit organ recently and addressed to William Aberhart, Premier of Alberta. The acrostic is very critical and the Gazette wonders how the organ ever published it. Here is the verse together with the comments of the Gazette:

"Silver-tongued preacher,
Our premier and guide,
Christian and teacher,
In you we confide.

"A new day is waking,
Light fills the sky,
Clouds now are breaking,
Real hope is nigh.

"Even the knockers
Don't shout so loud,
It seems, like the mockers,
They're lost in the crowd.

"If every Albertan
Stands steadfast and true,
Proves loyal and certain,
I know we'll win through.

"Fear not your berators,
Foes or false friends,
Like all who are traitors,
Each meets his just ends!"

"On closer inspection, the initial letters of the different lines spell out the sentence "Social Credit is piffle." Apparently, J. W. T put something over on the Premier's personal newspaper."

PENSIONS FOR BLIND

Canadians everywhere cannot but feel satisfied that the privileges of old age pension are to be extended to blind persons over forty years of age. Income of the blind is necessarily restricted and under the amendment at Ottawa the pension will go to those over forty who may draw $240 a year provided their income does not exceed $400 if married and $200 if single. The pension would be reduced by whatever the pensioner is able to earn by his own effort. This assures for married men $640 maximum from earnings and pension and for single men $440. No one will call this too generous a treatment of these people.

AT DAWNING

Night's darkest mantle dissipated by the dawn,
A soft breeze blows the slumbering leaves upon;
A whip-poor-will, from out his leafy bower,
Pours liquid melody across the twilight hour.

A dove's soft cooing in the early morn,
A blackbird's call from out the budding corn;
A lark's blithe carol on the morning air,
Lend to the dawning its first throbbing stir.

A swallow twittering through the twilight shade
Skims o'er the dew-kissed field and o'er the glade,
Rises full high above the shadowed grove
To meet the sunlight in the blue above.

A thousand robins sing their morning song
E'er yet the darkness bides the grass along;
Their mellow symphonies their matins fill
Day's dawning moments with melodious thrill.

Across a pasture, on its grey winding way,
Red cattle through the early mist of day,
Along the margin of a dark mirrored mere,
Plod, drowsy on against the milking hour.

Cresting a hill the first pink shades of dawn,
Resting the spire of the village church upon.
Shroud it in mellowness and from the height
Herald retreat of a departing night.

HOLLYWOOD CELEBRITIES WERE SAT UPON IN DETROIT where hotel help practically stopped service in some of the big hotels by a sit-down strike. Young Tyrone Power, star of "Lloyds of England," was there, following his bright and shining star Sonja Henie, ice skater and screen actress. Lily Pons, opera and cinema singer, was also a guest in a serviceless hotel, and threatened laughingly to walk out on her concert. Osa Johnson, widow of Martin Johnson, explorer and big game camera hunter, was also a victim of the hotel strike and remarked that she would be glad to get back to Africa where the civilization was more orderly and less dangerous. Elevators in the hotels ceased running and Tyrone Power walked thirty-four stories to get Sonja Henie a sandwich. Ain't love wonderful? The strike which was settled before any great damage was done, concerned elevator operators, chambermaids, bellboys, porters, firemen and engineers in charge of heat and hot water, cooks, chefs, bartenders, and waiters in the hotel restaurants and bars. Service, the big asset of the modern hotel, changed rapidly to Self-Service when the help sat down.

RADIO PROGRAMS ARE GETTING PUNK AND PUNKER, according to the office Radio Fan, who says that one of the first "to get Hindulu" and for years has been an authority on air entertainment. Perhaps he is fed up with the monotony of sameness, but it is a fact that many people are complaining of the radio bill-of-fare and wishing a year or so ago radios were left running practically all the waking time of the household, now they are seldom turned on except for some particular program, something extra. Amos and Andy have perhaps weathered the storm as well or better than most radio entertainers, and their amusing fifteen-minute chatter is not hard to listen to, and clever when it is considered that these boys change their program every night and have done so for years, playing two-a-day, West and East. Other programs which started strong have been weakening, especially those of the humorous type ,evidencing that humor is the hardest thing there is to produce a steady flow of. The future of radio entertainment? Who knows? One thing the new Canadian Government radio set-up should get busy on right away is United States and Mexico interference with Canadian stations. Surely Canada is entitled to a place on the air away from possible interference for at least two key stations.

THE OUTSIDER

Shortly before the French forbade the departure of volunteers for Spain a train was about to leave the Austerlitz station in Paris for the Pyrenean frontier. The hitrd-class carriages were crammed with excited volunteers, and in the firsts were numerous young men off to join France's army. Standing aloof on the platform was a dark-complexioned youth with black side-whiskers surveying the scene.

"Interesting sight, isn't it?" a bystander remarked to him. "And you? You aren't going along with them?"

"Oh, no," was the reply..... "I'm a Spaniard."

Stray Bits

CITY SCENES—

A sturdy, big-footed coal wagon horse casting a stone on Front Street at seven-thirty o'clock in the morning. The sudden stop of the vehicle by the muffling up driver. The resurrection of a complete farmer's kit from the load behind under the seat. The command of "Whoa! steady boy" as the off hind foot of the patient beast is lifted and held in place in his lap while the leaf shoe is fitted thereon with steady tap-tap of the sheer's hammer. The few bright new horse shoe nails left behind as horse and wagon move on again....The terrorist resident with heavy mitts and muffler about neck, blowdowntown section. City hall pigeons preening on the gables of the tavern....Sap buckets tied securely to the front bumper of a car while over the shoulder of the sturdy woodsman in high boots, corduroy breeches and plaid mackinaw.... A terrier head protruding from the window of an upstairs flat.... The cold eye of the Lent-stacked fish in Hudson's store window.... Tires and tube, skates and skis contrary to law—cheek by jowl in a turn of skipping ropes and old-fashioned marbles in the counters of department stores....Lawyers burrying for morning police court with brief cases under arms.... The before-noon informal gathering of aldermen at city hall.... The harness shop where horse collars are still made to measure and worn equipment repaired..... Exsetter lilies in the window of the ice pops smoking collegians.

INDUSTRIAL NOTE—

A young lady recently visited a locomotive works and then later told some of her friends how a locomotive is made.

"You pour a lot of sand into a lot of boxes," she explained, "and then you stand stove lids and things into a furnace, and then you empty the molten stream into a hole in the sand, and everybody yells and swears. Then you pour it out and let it cool and pound it, and then you put it in a thing that bores holes in it. Then you screw it together and paint it and put steam in it, and they take it to a drafting-room and make a blue print of it. But one thing I forgot—they have to make a boiler. One man gets inside and one remains outside, and they pound frightfully and they tie it to the other thing, and you ought to see it go!"

DICTATED, BUT—

Of course, the boss never makes a mistake! But he always gets a smile from stenographic and typing slips made by even the best of secretaries. Compilation of them would make a book to rival Allanson "howlers."

There is the one made by a White House stenographer who apparently was familiar with the term "faux pas." But a vigilant eye detected this fact before the letter went out, and "foreign" And it was a farm girl who became a city stenographer and wrote "milk of cream."

A literary man was surprised to find in a manuscript which had just been typed a reference to "Anna Doone. There was nothing, however, about Lorna Dio.

"I have been investigating in the philosophy of a newspaper columnist recently," said a visitor, "and who wrote here? 'I am a stenographer. Can you advise me to study to improve myself?'

"Stenography," was the reply.—Science Service Monitor.

NOT A WORD—

It was a small and ramshackle local theatre, and the manager of the touring show being more depressed as he was receiving no part of it by the resident proprietor, who was also the local Gaiety's part-time, "is the dressing-room. Fine room—eh?"

"Fine, eh?" and where are the others?"

"Others? There ain't any."

"What? Do you expect the ladies and gentlemen of the company to dress in the one room together?"

"They not?" asked the local manager, "Don't they speak?"

THE HARDIER SEX—

If you want to keep warm, attend a game of the fraternity around town in the winter months, where the men get out in the chilly winter zephyrs, etc., and the ladies turned out garbed in air cuddle that hasn't changed in it to make a pair of leggings for a meadow lark.—Durham Chronicle.

Red Tape at Washington

Washington—The annual purchase of the government's supply of red tape brings a day of fame to the procurement division of the treasury.

Unheralded go its daily purchases for the government to quail eggs and bed sheets, wooden legs and tractors, coffins and navy shoes, weather vanes and canned apples, silk flags and movie films.

Last year the agency for centralized procurement buying stocked only 200 rolls of red tape, but it picked up 150,000 miles of typewriter ribbon, fifty carloads of paper towels, some pounds of white maggots and a road roller.

The red tape was cut to tie around old documents, the quail eggs for the biological survey, the maggots for public utility research, medical experiments, the road ripper for an emergency road project.

Aside from constructing the nation's postoffices and government buildings, it has another story altogether, the agency buys supplies for all offices and departments in Washington except the Army and Navy.

It contracts for domestic and recreational articles for Federal prisons, hospitals, soldiers' homes and such institutions. Its officials cannot participate either in transactions, the tremendous amount of buying is handled because anyone of it is done by a sort of mail order system all the government's own.

Supply Commodities Listed

The division compiles a catalogue —called the general schedule of supplies—of some 60,000 commodities commonly used by Uncle Sam. Samples of these articles—from instruments for the blind to windspeeds rubber composition home plates to fill the cracks—are kept in one of the division's warehouse bays.

Each article is covered by a procurement division contract for the period of months during which the government will buy its supply of that article from a specific manufacturer.

The division enters into a garden hose monie contract with the K. Y. Jones Company, for example. Perhaps the government won't buy a garden hose monie all year, but if any department does need one it must buy from the K. Y. Jones Company.

All agencies get copies of the general schedule to keep them abreast of the contracts. Normally they send their orders directly to the manufacturer, so that no paperwork up until this year, had no record of the volume of purchases under the contracts.

In the 1935-36 fiscal year procurement men found 8,042 such contracts, some of them covering scores of articles. This job done, drafting specifications, inviting manufacturers to bid, selecting the best bargains.

Warehouse Full of Supplies

Furthermore procurement buys outright and stores in its warehouse here a vast tonnage of staple office and domestic supplies for use in the capital.

When procurement hasn't the article in stock or under contract, it knows who has, even to the laboratory that developed which was the only source of anti-toxin for a rare disease that has cut down among horses in the West a few months ago.

It does a colossal amount of miscellaneous buying as four current examples of invitations to bid, picked at random, show: one for white enameled bucket, ten quart capacity; one for 1,000 pounds of Cut Burr-ess of Internal Revenue; a walnut desk, with matched center veneers and one for 1,000 barrels of Portland Cement for a government project in South Carolina; 4 dozen squeegees for window cleaning.

From this sort of buying, where the articles are not covered by procurement contracts, the departments have their own individual purchasing officers.

Procurement also has a scavenger section which disposes of war and surplus property turned over to it by the other departments. Usually it is by the order of other agency that can use the stuff. It has everything from confiscated stills to abandoned CCC camps.

It transfers much material to the Bureau of Indian Affairs, with the result that there are Indians on reservations turning condemned parachutes into dresses, blankets into children's suits, copper stills into lamp shades.

Confidential liquor goes to various agencies for use as medicine or radiator alcohol according to its quality.

Centralized government buying began in 1910 with establishment of the General Supply Committee. In 1921 the committee was combined with the procurement division, then the purchasing office for the Treasury.

Out of it has grown the biggest buying organization on earth. —New York Times.

SECOND THURLOW

Second Thurlow—A miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Dorothy Taylor, bride-to-be, was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Taylor on Thursday night. A large crowd of friends and neighbors was present and many lovely presents were received by Miss Taylor. An address was read by Miss Alma Snider to which Dorothy and Mr. Jack Sargent gave suitable replies. All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows." Lunch was served about 12 o'clock and everyone departed wishing them a happy wedded life.

The address follows:

Belleville, Ont., Mar. 11

Miss Dorothy Taylor:

Dear Dorothy:—We, your friends and neighbors have gathered here this evening to extend to you our hearty congratulations upon the end of life which you are about to take.

You came to us as a stranger only a few years ago but we have found you a real friend and neighbor. We feel sure that your friends in your new home will find you likewise.

Many of us have not known Jack very long but we have heard very good of him. Being your choice for a life-long partner we welcome him among us as a friend.

As a small token of our good wishes we ask you to accept these gifts and we trust that God may bless and prosper you abundantly and that the golden sun of happiness may shine upon you always.

We read in the Belleville paper of a short time ago

The Mr. Taylor's had promised To let Dorothy go,

We didn't ask the reason Why she had decided to leave, Nor in our minds we thought Jack Sargent was the cause of it.

And so we let the matter drop Until from out the sky One day we heard The fatal day was drawing nigh.

Then we scurried here and there, Searched for money, high and low Asked the neighbors all around us If they would like to go.

Look around, you'll see the answer, To the problem we had to solve, So on through life we wish you luck in things you strive to do. ..

We leave these gifts' to you dear friend

As a reminder of this time.

We hope long may bring sweet memories back to you

Signed on behalf of your Second Line friends,

Mrs. J. Lynch,
Laura Snider,
Alma Snider.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Valencia, March 19 (AP) — There are 700,000 fighting men on Spain's civil war fronts, government sources estimated today, counseling. Insurgent General Francisco Franco a numerical advantage of 100,000 soldiers — 600,000 against 500,000.

Berlin, March 19 (AP)— Farm workers, as well as social and construction workers, were under official orders today to stay put in their jobs during Germany's fight for economic independence. Changing from one job to another, merely for higher wages, was forbidden.

Mrs. J. A. Faulkner Named on All-America Contract Bridge Team

Selected With Mrs. Anderson as First Canadian to Make Team

New York, March 18.—Two Canadian women, Mrs. J. A. Faulkner, of Belleville, Ont., and Mrs. W. C. Anderson of Toronto, first Dominion representatives ever to achieve a place on the All-America contract bridge team, comprising the "ten men" players in the championship tournaments of the past year, according to an announcement today by Shepard Barclay, bridge editor of Collier's. The selections are based on a point analysis of the year's championship tournament play and the leaders, including Mrs. W. M. Anderson of Toronto and Mrs. J. A. Faulkner of Belleville, Ontario, are listed in Collier's as follows:

1. Oswald Jacoby, New York.
2. Waldemar von Zedtwitz, New York.
3-4. (Tied) Louis J. Hadded, Chicago and David Burnstein, New York.
5. Frederick D. Kaplan, New York.
6. S. Jay Becker, Philadelphia.
7. Edward Symonds, New York.
8-10. (Tied) Miss Alyree Paris, M. S. Reilly and Walter Jacobs, Chicago; Mrs. W. M. Anderson, Toronto; Mrs. J. A. Faulkner, Belleville, Ontario; Mrs. Ralph C. Young, Philadelphia; Miss Barbara Collyer, Mrs. H. Pulis, Irving Epstein, Bernard Fry, Jr., and Howard Schenken, New York.

This year's winners and runners-up indicate that New York's domination of contract bridge championships had been broken at last. Of the 45 players who have won the winning of the 18 national title events, on the schedule of the season just closed, only 20 claim the metropolis of their home. Haddad, in third place, is the first player from west of the Alleghenies ever to make it in the first five.

Another unusual feature of this year's All-America team is that six women are represented in the 11 players just for this, 9th and 10th places.

Mr. Barclay reports that Jacoby after having now performed the unprecedented feat of winning three times running the other player has ever repeated even once in the first position is going to do a Gene Tunney and abandon serious tournament play. He has moved from New York to Dallas, and is not planning to make the swing of the big contests this year.

The current All-America team is definitely a cosmopolitan affair. Of the 18 names appearing on the list, 10 have made the roll for the first time, a majority.

ALERT BIBLE CLASS MEETS

A very pleasant afternoon was spent at the home of Mrs. Redner, Moira Street, on Tuesday when the Alert Bible Class assembled for their regular meeting which took the form of a re-union of former members. The president, Miss Sherry, welcomed the guests, over thirty former members and friends, with an appropriate poem on new and old friendships. The devotional part of the meeting followed with a hymn, prayer by Mr. Knox and Scripture reading by Mrs. Lawrence.

The president referred to the members who had passed away and two minutes silence was observed followed by silent prayer and a hymn in their memory. The interesting program continued with a duet by Mrs. Moynes and Mrs. Denton, a talk on friendship by Rev. Mr. Knox, solo by Mrs. Redner, all of these numbers being greatly enjoyed.

A vote of appreciation, moved by the president and seconded by Mrs. Lawrence was extended Mrs. Redner and all those who had assisted in making the afternoon such a happy occasion. The meeting then closed with a hymn after which the guests spent a pleasant half hour looking over Bible Class pictures taken a number of years ago. A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Redner, assisted by Mrs. Sherry, Mrs. Lakeford and Mrs. Sherry.

STEALING MEN'S THUNDER

Upholding the feminine claim to equality with men, these ladies are in the athletic spotlight. At top is Miss Elizabeth "Babe" Lascoit, 16-year-old Massachusetts high school girl who plays a brand of baseball good enough to earn her a place on the high school nine—in the opinion of Babe and her schoolmates. But the principal says "NO" so Babe can't play on the boys' team. Miss Susanna Lenoir, winner of the sprinting St. Cloud cross-country run, annual French harrier's classic is the lady below.

SIDNEY CROSSING

Sidney Crossing—The Alkins Y. P. U. held their weekly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hamilton on Tuesday evening. There was not large crowd owing to the weather, but all who were present enjoyed the program. The President, Miss Helen Card took charge of a very helpful discussion period on the Need for Consecrated Youth, along with other program.

A goodly number attended the "Smithville Shelter Party," at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Stickle on Friday evening of last week.

Mrs. T. Howard spent a few days last week at the home of her sister Mrs. Perry Hamilton.

At the close of the Sunday School session in Alkins Church on Sunday morning, Mrs. Earl Bush favored with a solo entitled, "Have You a Friend Like That." The church service followed, conducted by Rev. H. B. Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. May and Garnet of Belleville spent the tea hour on Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hogle and family. Miss Loreen returned home with them after spending a few days at the home of her grandparents.

SCENE OF HAVOC

Oil field workers dug with bloodied hands for their own children.

Tons of debris remained to be removed on ground and basement floors, feared the tomb of scores of bodies.

Buildings Filled With Bodies.

Dance halls, roller skating rinks, churches, hotels, hospitals and morgues in six nearby towns were filled with dead.

Workers wearied as they bored into an almost impregnable mass of ruins. Calls for replacements echoed over the vicinity from a powerful public address system. Some fell exhausted, others dripped to the waist stumbled out of dust clouds for fresh air and plunged back for more digging.

Born of oil, many authorities theorized the $150,000 structure, show spot of the derricked oil belt, met destruction in the same manner.

Superintendent W. C. Shaw who stood outside on the grounds, and barely escaped death from debris that hurled 200 yards in all directions, said it was "quite possible" unknown gas from the nearby field had accumulated in basement crannies and hollow tile and finally gave way to spontaneous combustion.

Sorry Gas Odor Scented.

The odor of gas had been strong for weeks, he commented, and several survivors of the tragedy said they had bothered them recently.

Forty-five minutes proved the difference between life and death for the students.

Plans had been made originally to dismiss the entire student body that early for a track and field meet. Later it was decided to release only the participants early. They were among the few survivors.

J. Mahaffey, of Selma City, said, "I felt the rumble" of the blast while he was twelve miles away.

Mrs. Mary Hall, more than forty bodies had been laid to one side," he related.

One body had been blown through the roof and was found on the front section of the building left standing."

R. J. McKee, of nearby Gaston, arrived in time to see "about fifty per cent of the school's population coming to their homes."

Carries Out Over 50 Bodies.

Capt. Bert (Sally) O'Dobyran of the Kilgore Fire Department carried out more than 50 bodies.

A military investigation was instituted and another promised by the State Railroad Commission, administrator of gas and oil laws.

"This is the worst I have ever known," said Joe Davidson, 54-year-old Great War aviator who twice experienced having a plane shot out from under him.

Three of his four children perished.

"Kids were blown out through the top onto the roof," said 15-year-old Martha Harris who witnessed the explosion from the Home Economics Building sixty yards away.

Mrs. W. H. Phillips' five-year-old son had run ahead to meet his brother and sister at school. He was killed with them.

R. K. Card, oil employee, was one of the first to reach the scene after the explosion. He pulled out the body of his daughter.

"It was nearly seven minutes before time for dismissal," said L. S. Barker, 16, in the study hall.

"Suddenly the floor rose up. There was a terrible blast. It sounded like lyncmite. I was not badly hurt. I was hit on the back of the head by something. I jumped out the second floor window."

Wildest disorder followed. As the reports spread, roads became clogged with frantic parents racing to the school in automobiles.

REDMEN ENTER FINALS; DEFEAT SUTTON ON ROUND 6-5

Persistent, Close Checking With Superlative Goal Tending Holds Sutton Irish in Check

Belleville Defeated 3-2 in Game But Capture The Round

WATT INVINCIBLE

Each Line Scores a Goal in Thrill Packed Contest

By C. D. T.

A great round to win. A tough round to lose.

That about sums up the situation, for the final round of the Intermediate "B" O.H.A. series. The Belleville Redmen clung tenaciously to their two goal lead obtained by Belleville on Monday over the Sutton club, dropping the one of the counters. They were defeated by the score of 3-2 but emerged victors of the round by a score of 6-5. The game on last Thursday night were 0-0, 3-1. The game was packed full of thrills and spills, plenty of them, if not more so before one of the largest crowds ever gathered in the Sutton arena, the customers being drawn from Toronto, Newmarket, Bolton and other near-lying places, ay the win Belleville enters the finals for the International Series, there awaiting the winners of the Clinton-Thorold series, this round starting on Friday night.

Redmen Did Not Falter

Despite the fact that Sutton opened the game in high gear and continued at a merry tempo for fifty minutes of the pastime, at no time did they run on how the Belleville Redmen did not waver, their lines of defence did not break, and they used their experience to force the issue, to attack within striking distance of a win. Standing out in the battle was the burly figure of Watt in the nets, who was absolutely unorthodox in his method of stopping the rubber, but he turned all his method proved highly proficient and although the Sutton club has never seen so much rubber in one night, he came out of the pastime as the top star of the game. He was closely followed by the dynamite "Red Hot" who held the fort against all comers in the third frame for nearly fifteen minutes. The very air in the Arena was tense as the minutes ticked by with Sutton desperately trying to score at least a tie on the round, while against this stood the Belleville goalie, a sturdy defence and in impregnable citadel the word was said "they shall not pass."

Forced to Offensive

Sutton was forced to go after goals from the opening face-off, similarly Belleville settled it. Bert Hodges of Toronto, and the Belleville team was literally swept off their feet by a shower of rubber but they steadied quickly and obtained the first real offensive thrust of the pastime. Nevertheless, Sutton had a slight edge in the play of the first period and possibly for fifteen minutes of the second contest. The third period was even lopsided and that is short sums up the game from this angle. The Sutton squad simply skated themselves into exhaustion trying to force ahead after tying the round which they did on two occasions but they seemed to lack, that needed extra punch and we, the ten minute mark of the third frame we'd a well licked hockey squad and as by as they were concerned the game was over. Their offensive really collapsed about two minutes before the middle of the last frame had been reached, when Harry "Curly" Whitton broke from a gangling attack and with his two partners, Morgan and Bellamy, began to set to manoeuvre Smith out of position and a goal was the end of the Redmen one up on the round.

Watt Invincible

Probably it is not fair to pick stars out of a hockey game for every member ited with all the experience at his command to assist in every way to bring home a victory but there were certain players that stood out. Watt was invincible and the three, that beat him were labelled. Bellamy, Smith of the drives were unloosed from the blue line. The "kid line" was just all night and saw many missed some of the chances will always remain a mystery. Sutton tried every combination against them but they seemed to be at their best work. The defence of Murphy and Bentley did not give as good an exhibition as the game at home on Monday night but they tried and appparently played their best, when the going was the toughest. Murphy drew a penalty in the third frame and while he was away, the Irish squad evened the round up but that was just another break that the home squad overcame. Ingram played well, when used. The line of Whitton, St. Louis and Burley did a lot of useful checking with Burley being the weak sister of the trio. He appeared to be out of his class. Speedy St. Louis was playing under a severe handicap but he endeavored the play, that put Whitton in for his goal. Carl Morgan was useful by the backchecking department.

Burchell, Calverwell Stars

Burchell and Calverwell were easily the pick of the winning squad, with Carpenter running the first two a close race. Shupe was easily the star of the rear guards men and was always dangerous on the offensive. Smith, in goal, had a easy night and was cleanly beaten on the two goals that the Redmen scored. Bellamy skated around in circles, made two or three thrusts at the defence, got a real thumping from penalty and retired for the evening. Calverwell also was given a rough passage through the defence and had all the steam taken out of him early in the third, when Bentley caught him coming in with a body bodycheck. Of the subs trotted out Brady appeared to be the most useful. The team as a whole played a more impressive game than in Belleville but persistent checking and a good defensive line by the Redmen whittled them down to their size and the game was over and every man on both squads was ready to quit, when the cease fire sounded but the Redmen finished the stronger.

THE PLAY

Belleville opened the play on the offensive and had the first shot on goal but Sutton soon took command and the Redmen were hedged far behind their blue line. Watt rose to great heights as he turned away from the team steadied, when Bill Thomas changed lines sending out the "kid line" with instructions to check from Belleville territory and Smith made a quick and clean pick-up. In the second one being a mystery how the squads ran so level, when the play in the face, when a puck was being cleaned out of the Belleville zone and when a shot was made Thompkins nearly flashed the light with a brilliant solo effort, but the game-heavy but was firm-underfoot. The puck moving in true form properly and for minutes at a time, members of both teams baited away at the puck best with no two-green being made. Sutton was carrying the play at the end of the period.

Second Period

Just what the Redmen were trying to prevent was what began in the second. The teams had just faced when Burchell secured from the faceoff and relayed to Shupe who smoked a drive in the direction of the Belleville blue line. Watt saw the rubber but did not drop to time and the first score of the game was registered in just 43 seconds after the period opened. This was the signal for the Sutton team and the rooters needed and Belleville was on the run. Only Calverwell prevented a score, when he tripped a pass from Burchell was given the gate. This was the first advantage in man power, that either had enjoyed and the Red Men put on a ganging act, that had the Sutton team on the run. It was naught as Bentley joined Calverwell in the penalty corner and Sutton was on the run. With the lesson, even, the Sutton team went on the offensive and Calverwell was sleeping in Carpenter tied the round. This goal was delivered from outside the blue line and Watt was beaten all the way. Then the line went into action and after two thrilling offensive the red line got the man advantage being sent to the line and Thompkins scored from close in. The Belleville squad could cut those corners, while one up but with Sutton showing a slight edge in offensive strength.

Third Period

Sutton took up the drive where they left off and Murphy by prevent a score hooked Burchell and was given the gate. The Irish squad were unable to enter the Redmen territory or else they switched their attack to Belleville's right side but whatever the reason. Cullen had his back to the right back in the running. Taking the puck from from his own blue line, he proceeded to carry the play and also ganging his check, drove a hard liner toward Watt but the puck rebounded and there was glee in the Irish camp. Belleville's counter attack struggle could be felt as the fans instead of cheering lustily watched the play. Sutton pressed hard, but Louis and Morgan engineered the play that brought the goal to the Irish cause. St. Louis checked his check and Morgan carried the puck across and gave the rubber to Carl Morgan, who in turned tipped it into the net. Sutton then pressed two defencemen and the goalie to score the million dollar tally. Bellamy was ruled out for a trip and he had the last point play to his ten territory for some time. The Sutton began to go out of the Irish drive and until the end of the game. It was just a series of ganging and shooting the rubber out of the danger zone.

Apps Leads N. H. L. Scorers As Leafs Down Canadiens 2-1, Amerks Wallop Hawks 9-4

Apps Scores tp Lead Barry By One Point in Scoring Race

PLAY-OFF DATES

A tired netminder or a sympathetic scorer may settle the point-scoring championship of the National Hockey League this season. With only five games to play it's just that close.

Syl Apps, sensational Toronto Hockey Leafs' centre, paced the puck last night when he scored half Leafs' goals in their 2-1 victory over Canadiens at Montreal. He has 44 points made up of 16 goals 28 assists.

Trailing him by a point are Marty Barry, Detroit Red Wings centre, Sweeney Schriner of New York Americans and Larry Aurie, of the Detroit lineup with a leg injury. Schriner pulled into the runner-up in the scoring race with Amerks' 9-4 win from Chicago last night. It was the highest scoring game of the season.

Have Do Edge

Apps and Barry seem to have the edge, Apps because of his point lead, Barry because he has only one of the trio with two games to play. The scoring race will be the pickle when Detroit meet Leafs in Toronto on Thursday night, when Graham will be distinctly on the spot when he has to decide whether Apps or Barry take sufficient part in a play to warrant assists.

Besides getting their nose ahead the Toronto victory gave Leafs a possible opening in their Stanley Cup series with New York Rangers. Leafs now have more points than Rangers and can choose where the series shall start. They will, of course, play the first game in New York next Tuesday and the second in Toronto, Thursday. If a third is necessary it also will be played in Toronto.

That is all supposing that Leafs don't make second place. They would have to beat Detroit Saturday and Montreal Maroons would have to lose Saturday to Amerks and Sunday to Detroit for Leafs to beat them.

Leafs Protected Goal

There was only a little more than a minute of the third period left when Leafs scored their second goal last night. Walter Buswell Hollett Happy Day and while he was serving the penalty Gordon Drillon scored. Apps got Goal in the first period and Rod Lorrain tied it in the second. Four thousand persons saw the game.

The high-scoring game at New York was loosely played by Schriner, Nels Stewart of Amerks and Paul Haynes of Hawks. Referees Red Dutton, Eddie Wiseman, Joe Jerws and Pete Lewicki scored the other New York goals and Pep Kelly got the first Hawk counter.

SAILORS KNOT ROUND AGAINST TWEED, WIN 3-1

Madoc, March 19 (Special)— By virtue of a 3-1 win at the Madoc arena on Thursday, the Belleville Sailors will enter the running for the championship of the Central Hastings League. The sailors won the first game by the score of 5 to 3 were favored to repeat but the Tweed team forced the play from the first and were easily the better of the night's play. The game was very slow as a result of the fact that no less than penalties had to be handed out for rough work. Period scores were 2-1; 7-1 and 3-1. Both defences were inclined to be over anxious resulting in many penalties being handed out in the cooler. Harvey of Belleville turned in a nice effort while Reds Hinton and Thompson were both outstanding.

Tweed: Goal, Thompson; defence, Trip, Tunmon and J. Tunmon; centre, Hinton; wings, McGuire and Counsley; subs, B. Leal, P. Leal, Reid, Frederick.

Belleville: Goal Hinton; defence, Harvey and Day; centre, Hunter; wings, Howie; wings, Smart and Harvey; subs, Day, McGuire, Goyer and Hunter.

Referee: Dutch Dougall and Bill Watts of Belleville.

For over two hours after the game the respective managers gathered in committee room regarding the value of the third and deciding game. Finally the teams agreed to meet at Madoc on Saturday night. The winner being declared champions of the Hastings County League. The "sailors" played heads-up hockey last night and deserved their laurels.

Sudbury Eliminates Sailors In Torrid Game, Score is 6-4, Come from Behind Twice

Tigers Win Round 7-5 Over Fort Colborne And Now Meet Toronto

JIM DEWEY STARS

Port Colborne, Ont., March 19.—(CP)—A hockey team that came from behind to blanket Port Colborne a single series was out of Oshawa Tigers eliminated Port Colborne fans still attested their thrilling game of the season's great senior clubs. Meanwhile the Sailors' conquerors, Sudbury Tigers, were basking in the glory of having defeated Port Colborne Sailors 6-4 in a game that ended in a 6-4 score. A 1-1 tie in the opener at Sudbury and a Northernets the round 7-3.

Unable to gain a grooping in the Ontario Hockey Association senior A series last fall, Sailors were promoted to the O.H.A. senior B Club and given a bye. They entered the O.H.A. senior series and played a few Ontario exhibitions but the season was a cruel disappointment to the club which contended strong opposition was necessary to prepare the team for the playoffs.

The result of the first game of Sudbury's brightened Port Colborne's hopes, however, for the Sailors expected to be able to capitalize on their narrow ice. The heights then overwhelmed the Sailors, as Brewster-lee, had attained made their chances seem brighter.

Sailors Surprises

But no one figured Jim Dewey would be out on the ice for last night. The former Moose Jaw star gave the writer's greatest performance in the game and by the help of his Sudbury to victory, scoring four goals, three of the Sailors'.

The club which won the Northern title from Kirkland Lake was in the ding-dong battle that thrilled a packed arena. Tigers led 1-0 after the first period and minutes of the second period but the home club managed to pull three goals to pull ahead. Dewey tied the count at 3-all before the end of the second session.

Again the Sailors forged to the front in the third when Red Reynolds beat netminder Charlie Tenn. But Dewey came back to pull the team up again and after Don Grosso gave Tigers a 5-4 lead Dewey scored three away to make triumph sure.

Tigers meet Sudbury Falcons, including several of this year's Tigers, next in Dominion-Goodyears series for the right to continue in playoffs.Iowa.

'Diz' Signs And Sighs

Bradenton, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—Dizzy Dean has ended his wordy holdout siege early today and accepted a salary terms a few hours after St. Louis Cardinals approved the pitcher's application for voluntary retirement.

Provisions of the one-year contract were not disclosed, but the generally accepted figure was $25,000 would be about the Cards' top offer and just hal the price the right-hander insisted his services were worth.

"I'm glad this thing is settled and can devote all my thoughts to the business of buying the Cards' roasture that National League batting," commented Dean.

Dean said he had a long talk with Mrs. Dean last night, and they reached the conclusion it would be foolish for me to stay out of baseball at a time when I've just reached the peak, with years of good pitching still left in my arm."

Dean's retirement application reached the Cards late yesterday and Commissioner Landis approved it and mailed it to the National League headquarters in New York.

Sam Breadon, Club President, said he would telegraph Ford Frick, National League President, and ask him to disregard the request.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

The day of miracles is not passed. Last night the Belleville Redmen played splendid hockey under very trying conditions and earned a hard won winners over the sturdy Sutton "Green Shirts" by the score of 6 to 5, the Redmen being one night in 3 to 2, however. When the ice was in fairly passable condition last night during the initial period, the Redmen held the home skaters at bay and no goals were scored. "Green Shirts" opened the middle stanza with a score and later knotted the count at one-all. Tompkins assisted by the Jackson's scored for the Redmen to give them a breaking spell. The final stanza was a breath-taking affair. First Joe Jackson scored on a play that really inbona, but the Redmen hung on tenaciously and played a great game of defensive hockey. Sutton scored on a mid-ice play and Whitton on a three-play combination play that included Carl Morgan and St. Louis, deliberately the "Green Shirts' scored when the Redmen were short-handed in that third period. Belleville fans are to on their second intermediate "B" O.H.A. team in two season, as the Redmen will now hail for honor of the Clinton-Thorold series into the "B" finals.

The hearts of the Sutton supporters were broken time and time again by the splendid goal tending by Watt in the Belleville brine. He was necessary with his every move and he was the star of the game. Sutton did not attempt to clear the rubber but merely smashed away from dangerously considerable time was taken up. Every time the team shots he played the hard way but he got results and that is what a goalie is expected to get. Watt had little worries from this angle as the Sutton club kept to their line and attend to their own business, passing and shooting not adequately protected. In the middle of the second frame a barrage of rubber from the Sutton stars was thrown at the feet of Watt and he without aid from his mates, a resounding smack for "good luck" and carried it to the Redmen zone. Here could they lose when they had captured the lucky charm. It is likely the Watt will be available will be with the team, when they enter the final round.

The sympathy of the local sporting fraternity was extended to Bill Hland "Speedy" St. Louis, centre player of the Belleville squad when it was learned last night, that his mother Mrs. St. Louis has been in ill health for some considerable time and suffered a relapse on Sunday last from which she failed to recover. Speedy was informed of his mother's death upon returning from Sutton and left immediately for Cardinal, the family residence, where he will remain until after the funeral of his mother.

Interested in angling or fishing? Drop around to the Y.M.C.A. tonight and get an insight on the workings of the Sports and Fishery Dept. Mr. J. Macartney, of the Provincial Department of Game and Fisheries Department of the Ontario Government, will be the guest speaker at an open meeting of the Belleville Anglers' Association. Morning pictures of game fishing and casting will be shown and the meeting thrown open for general discussion pertaining to the improvements of fishing and casting in local waters. All are welcome whether members or nay.

Lou Gehrig, durable first baseman of New York Yankees, has been named for the 1937 season. Gehrig today advised Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the team, he would sign a one-year contract for a salary of $40,000 at the club's camp here. The star first baker will leave New York for St. Petersburg at once. The $40,000 salary is $4,000 less than Gehrig was demanding for the 1937 season and $3,000 more than the club's original offer of $37,000

Regarding the efforts of Alec Hargreaves, stellar goalkeeper of the Port Colborne "Sailors", Jr., J. Mike Rodden writes the following after his sterling work in the-first Belleville-Sutton game. Mike says—

"Brownlee, goalkeeper of the Port Colborne team, is unquestionably the best custodian who has appeared in amateur ranks since the days of Percy Lesueur, Hec Kilrea, Scott, Forbes and Hainsworth. This Whitby boy, Alec Hargreaves, would be a wow in the National League. He is the most unorthodox goalie I've ever seen. But, he can stop that puck.

We think that in that second period Brownlee gave the greatest exhibition of goal tending that we have ever seen. The Flyers from Trenton said that in the series against Port Colborne Sailors they were doomed to defeat because they couldn't get by Brownlee somewhere. The Tigers made it unanimous again by the same token and another goalkeeper boi Brownlee in action against them they would have won the series in one game. Alec is not at least on goals."

Last night, however, the Sudbury squad really went to work on Alec Hargreaves and scored four goals before one two differenc occasions with torrid and concerted attacks upon the Flyers every angle, including the rear. The Sudbury rubbed the Port Colborne 6 to 4, but they had to k.o. Brownlee in two consecutive games before he was carried from the ice twice for repairs and returned before Sudbury finally won the series.

The latest O.H.A. bulletin issued today from the office of Secretary Manager Frank A. Ahearn states that Thorold will play the International Series with Victoria for provincial ice. The series will open in Niagara Falls Tuesday night and will be played at Galt, on Tuesday night and Thursday night with the referee. This means the Redmen will be idle for a week before they enter entering into the "B" finals.

Syl Apps moved into the leading position as the higher scorer in the N.H.L. as he scored one last night when the Leafs won 2 to 1 over the Canadiens, two are counting, however. The Americans downed Major McLaughlin's "All Yankees" 9 to 4 in the other big tent game.

Hunger Threat Forestalled By Development of Seeds Says Field Husbandry Expert

Dr. C. F. McRostie, O.A.C., Special Speaker at Seed Fair Banquet

EXHIBITS PRAISED

Welcome of City Extended by Ald. Cliff Basinger For Mayor Ernest

How close the world's human machine hovers on the brink of famine at times; how man through never ending vigilance, testing and experimentation, has forestalled the threat of hunger by the development of seeds for the aid in countries of the world, and Canada's part in the world's production of grains were graphically told in this city last evening by Dr. C. F. McRostie, professor of field husbandry, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, guest speaker at the eleventh annual banquet of the Quinte District Seed Growers' Association held in the Moose auditorium.

Professor McRostie, whose life has been spent in occasions activity connected with the high art of agricultural research, one of the most qualified men in Canada on the subject, drew a picture of the interested audience through seeds and soil from germination to ultimate consumption.

Former School Teacher

A former school teacher, agricultural representative, professor of botany, one time member of the advisory staff of the Canadian Seed Grower, chief of the forage crop division of the Dominion Department of agriculture and co-operator of the staff of the University of Manitoba, Dr. McRostie was introduced in such to the meeting by Col. Roscoe Vanderwater.

Sincere congratulations on the success of the present elements of the annual seed fair now being held in the city was offered by Dr. McRostie with the added best wishes for future advancement. "I glory in your success," he said simply.

Statistics compiled by the Winnipeg Grain Exchange reveal an estimated population of over two billion people in the world. And in spite of the billions of bushels of grain and potatoes and other foods produced yearly there are now as time in the history of the world, when every person in it ever got all he wanted to eat. "There is not much surplus of any article of grain or food and actual famine," declared Dr. McRostie, referring to a more or less acute shortage in the world's production of grains, potatoes and animals.

"Canada produces seven per cent of the world's crop, and thirty-seven one third of the world's crop, continued Dr. McRostie. "And, in addition to the fact that China has always been known as a rice growing and rice using country, she grows annually some $50 million bushels of wheat. Canada's figure has been set at $30 millions of bushels. India grows some $60 millions of bushels.

"Wheat and other grains are being grown, harvested and put in the mouth in the year some place in the world, and whether or like it or not, we must accept the fact that what we grow is subject to the competitive business. But in this Canada has been favored with the advantage of both climate and a geographical condition. Our soil allows us the production of the best cereals in the world."

Saw Clean Seed

Turning to the question of seed, Dr. McRostie declared that the ideal seed as one which is adaptable to the soil of its every particular locality. One which also had "yielding" ability and ran as true to type as possible. Clean seeds is the ideal, or will give about the same results as the seed of Marquis Red Fyzmouth Rock hens with a foghorn" as compared to an ideal. "Yet many farmers still do that very thing when they go to plant the seed they sow is clean seed."

The good seed also needs hardiness, one which is capable of resisting disease. It should have good germinating qualities plumpness and weight because a "shrimp" seed has not the quality of being able to feed itself well through unfavorable conditions.

"If grain doesn't look well to the eye don't use it for seed" stated the expert. "The perfect condition for sowing a seed that has not a trace of weed seeds in it. Three years ago we took time out for a little figuring to find the approximate amount of weed seeds in grain shipped east of Calgary, that wheat had been threshed and partially cleaned. Yet we found that out of the amount shipped, the amount of weed seeds received at Fort William would have required ninety-three trains of sixty cars each to carry them in one year. Picture the amount of weed seeds that stayed behind after the threshing," invited Mr. McRostie.

Weeds in Western Canada

Weeds in Western Canada cost the average farmer approximately $18.50 each year. Yet we figured the cost of weeds to each farm in Ontario it would be far more than we would like to admit, he insisted.

Other agencies than the farmers themselves and the regular fall fairs and seed fairs must co-operate before the country may be able to get better crops and raise better grains, continued the speaker. Retail breeders should produce the best they know how, and we have come to demand a lot on the registered seed growers of the province to keep the strain pure. But the businessmen of Ontario must also help in making sure their machines are clean when they move from farm to farm. Also the seed cleaning plants have become a great necessity."

Develop Any Type of Grain

Government experts can develop any type of grain if they are aided to find out just what is needed for the particular localities, stated Dr. McRostie, displaying a large colored map of Ontario showing soil conditions in the various parts of the province. Departmental representatives are constantly seeking their search for further data on soil and other conditions in Ontario and are developing other maps which will be of invaluable assistance.

"We of the department look for the highest quality the way of seed fairs in Ontario," declared the guest speaker, but to get more than those soil surveys, the assistance acknowledged in keeping down and controlling insect pests and other help.

"But, before the young men of the country today is a challenge, a challenge to keep Canada in the forefront as the best country in the world for good seed," concluded Dr. McRostie.

As chairman of the evening, J. A. Alexander, Miller, president of the Quinte District Association extended his welcome not only to the senior and junior members present, but the members of visitors, and Belleville businessmen in attendance.

Belleville welcomed this eleventh annual fair with open arms this year. Due to the condition under which we farmed last year we were in a dilemma on the matter of choosing a location. No other place seemed to welcome us as much as this city. We chose Belleville, which has always been a good standby for us. We have appreciated this and also the help, that has been given us in arranging the fair.

"Reviewing the past several years we find that this year's event has been one of the best, that has been held, at least since 1931 which registered just one more entry than recorded this year. But when one looks at the exhibits this year, there is cause for wonder regarding the manner in which the seed was grown, considering the circumstances.

Ald. Basinger Expresses City

Acting Mayor Clifford Barnaby, in the absence of Mayor Ernest D. Arnott, who was still in Ottawa attending the Federation convention of mayors, in extending his official welcome expressed the hope, and that the same fair would be held in Belleville next year. "We have been glad to welcome you and offer you what little assistance we have been able to give," added the acting Mayor.

Warden of Hastings County, Wesley Gray expressed the hope, that continued meetings would be held by city and rural residents for the mutual benefit that has always characterized such fraternization. "If we had more of them it would be better for the city and country both", added the Warden. Declaring the present seed exhibit to be best that he had ever witnessed, Warden Grey also expressed the opinion that such quality could be grown under last year's conditions. "We mean have some good farmers in this district," he offered.

Vice-president of the association, Gordon Hancock, Peterborough, in a brief address extended the official invitation for members of the Fair to consider Peterborough next year as the logical site for the annual fair. "We intend to have you there, anyhow", he assured.

As president of the Ontario Field Association, Mr. Wm. Hill, Maxico, who declared himself as being associated with fairs and seed growers more years than he could remember lauded the efforts of the junior farmers both in the preselection of their exhibits and the fine 1 uness with which they have tackled the work. "I bring you the best wishes of the fairs and agricultural societies from throughout Ontario" he declared.

"Young men are needed "in the affairs of agriculture in Ontario today," added the speaker, "Young men, who possess the love for soil and the burden of work from the shoulders of the men who now have borne the load long enough."

"Stand four-square for your country", urged the Ontario president. "And don't stop at the seed fair, get into the field and meet conditions of your local fairs. You will be given all the help that can be given by your agricultural representatives".

Wished Fair Success

Mr. J. O. Herity, speaking on behalf of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, referred to the splendid success, that had crowned the efforts of agricultural representatives from throughout the Quinte district in arranging the present fair. The importance of agriculture cannot be over stressed, he reminded, when it is learned that year after year it becomes the business of skill and thought. Referring to his visit to the exhibits in city hall, the speaker pointed to the splendid showing as an achievement, which could be ranked as a triumph over conditions that were extremely adverse. "If this achievement could be copied throughout the district by every farmer, it would mean a lot not only to the farmer but to the city of Belleville," added Mr. Herity. "I hope that the success that has been achieved will symbolically symbolize Quinte, abundantly increase."

After a distinct departure from the trend of speeches that had characterized the evening, Herman Claus, representing the Mohawk Institute, Tyendinaga, one of the exhibitors at the fair, briefly told of the advances in agriculture that had been noted among his own people within the past year or so.

"One hundred years ago the people I represent didn't know anything about farming," he told the assembly as he faced them from the front of the platform.

"Two hundred years ago your forefathers were carrying on the business successfully. Our job today is to bring home to these people, who have never had to work in years gone by the fact that farming is a fine pay and that there is real money in it.

"I have extended what knowledge I have been able to get from your methods to my own people, They're trying hard and in twenty-five years they will be able to give you plenty of competition", he added.

BEAUTY FROM FRANCE

Mlle. Germaine Aussey, famous French film star, is shown as she arrived in New York on her first trip to the United States. She is to make a film in Hollywood.

M. C. McPhail, Toronto, assistant director of agricultural representatives of Ontario added his congratulations to the efficiency of retired exhibitions and members. "To have attended this year, and knowing the conditions of last year, the fair comes as a complete surprise. It is perhaps one of the best lots of exhibits I have been privileged to see. The weather last summer really did the grain good, for we have never had grown even plenty of time this winter to sit around and look at their exhibits remains to be seen".

Mr. Marshall urged junior members of the association to make a class study of native weeds as one help, towards greater knowledge of their particular problems.

"I have repeated time and again, that the boy who knows his weeds also knows his grains and can always pick himself a far more valuable and top honors".

Mr. McPhail then read the list of junior winners which is printed elsewhere.

In presenting the Warden's trophy to the winning team whose names are given elsewhere in this issue Alderman Laurie Lewis of this city, declared the relationship of urban and rural municipalities to be an important one and that should be fostered at every opportunity. He paid tribute to the efforts of the boys and urged them to continue their success now fairly well started. T. D. Sumners, agricultural coach of the team received congratulations upon success were offered.

Musical Program

During the evening Lt. Fred Johnson, Bandmaster of the Belleville Municipal Band, and a number of several individual solos, led the musical program. The Instrumental solos were offered also by Mr. Reg. Wardle, while interval selections were given by Clare Patterson. Phil Biddlestone acted as accompanist.

Under the direction of Bandmaster Claus, the "Mohawk Quints" one each of the best small varieties yet heard in this city, and featured Canadian radio station entertainment offered several typical old-time instrumental numbers.

A vote of thanks for the assistance that had been given by the city and individuals who had contributed to the success of the annual fair was moved by agricultural representatives Jos. Wilson, Hastings and A. H. Martin, Northumberland.

SPEAKERS URGED FARMERS TO USE ONLY CLEAN SEED

Representatives of Field Husbandry Address Exhibitors

230 EXHIBITS

Central Cleaning Plant is Established in Peterboro County

Facing perhaps the largest and most impressive number of exhibits in the history of the association, leading representatives of the Federal and Provincial Seed and Field Husbandry Departments addressed the fifty-first annual banquet yesterday afternoon congratulated exhibitors from throughout the Counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland, Peterborough, Prince Edward and Lennox-Addington, who had gathered for the eleventh annual seed fair and convention of the Quinte District Association, upon the success of the present exhibition.

In his official welcome to those present, W. A. Alexander Hillier, president of the Quinte group, urged the necessity of improvements to the members for the manner in which they had exhibited and presented their exhibits in spite of the unfavorable year.

To the former president of the fair, President Alexander also paid especial tribute and voiced the hope that succeeding events would lend encouragement to the staff. The efforts, "Upon you rests the hope of these conventions; the hope of every day will be the farmers of tomorrow," he reminded.

Three Factors

John McLeod, of the Crops Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto, in a brief review of the past season's work in his department declared that three things controlled the quality of farmers of any district. Crops are influenced by three factors, the weather, cut-worms and the seed. "You have partial control over the soil, but you have no control over pet cent control over the seed you sow. This means to you either profit or loss," he added, impressing the need for clean, healthy seed for sowing.

Weeds were cited by the speaker as "robbers of the farm" "Weeds lower the market value of any farm as well as the crops from which they are taken. Either handpicking or the use of the early reliable methods by which seed may be thoroughly cleaned; pre-planning mills for the use of the most neglected machines on the ordinary farm. Farmers do not seem to realize that the better seed they sow the more work they will do to get results from their acreage," declared Mr. McLeod.

The speaker exploded the fallacy of small seed plumping.

"Big seed has always been told and the belief is still held by many farmers," he said. "But there is no variety is the 'female' seed and that the seed should be planted along with the small seed. Nothing could be more untrue. Plant only large, plump, well seed. If you sow small grain the root will not develop; it will not grow as it should; it will stool the plant; the loss will be a direct one to the man who sows them."

Directions for placing a fanning mill require the setting of the sieves for scoring, set back at least six feet from any wall in order to give the wind about the machine. Any way from the door, which might influence the fanning mill, and the number of revolutions per minute was found to be the best, stated the provincial representative.

Seed Cleaning Necessary

In 1923 Ontario had only two cleaning mills, declared Mr. McLeod pointing out that farmers have been quick to realize the necessity. At present time there are sixty-nine located in the province, three hundred and fifty observed by two, one in Deseronto and one in Pembroke. "But there is plenty of room for more in the Quinte district," he declared.

Thanks were gratefully granted by the government, one-half of the cost, twenty-five per cent of which comes from the federal and twenty-five from the provincial government, to help in the installation of a cleaning plant, it was given. The final requirement is the proper application stamp by at least fifty farmers of any district or community the need.

J. W. MacKay of the Dominion Seed Branch, Ottawa, introduced by President and Chairman Alexander as one of the "best seed judges in Canada," also expressed his congratulations on the splendid showing. He presented eleventh annual fair. "This fair is all the more remarkable in the fact that the past season has been an entirely unfavorable one for the production of any crop. Frankly, when I came down here this year I was not prepared for this. I came with some misgivings."

"The value of the fair is emphasized in part today by the splendidness of the exhibits shown here", emphasized Mr. MacKay. "In the past this interest has been maintained due to the fact that each year it has been held at a different location and each county has been able to pride itself on his own particular exhibits. The contributions made each year have also been outstanding".

This year, pointed out the speaker of the 230 actual exhibits shown a total of seventy exhibitors have been registered. Thirty-four of these exhibitors have come from Hastings County, nine were received from Peterborough County and eight from Prince Edward County. The remaining exhibitors represent the various other counties.

Make Appeal Under

"The proportion is not just what it should be. This is a big district here, and it is my belief that many could have been entered", declared Mr. McKay, in his constructive criticism. In his opinion he also said that that there has been too much Hastings County. This is no reproach, however, to give a great deal of credit to Hastings County farmers. Their appearance is one that might make to improve the quality of the fair and the number pointed out, that at the next fair held in Peterborough County, Hastings County exhibitors would be given real competition due to the fact that a central cleaning plant has been installed in that district and greater interest has been shown in cleaner and better seeds.

Mr. Jos. Wilson, Stirling, and local agricultural representative, pointed out that Mr. McMillan, of the local Dominion seed office for their efforts and work in promoting the present fair.

May Extend Crop Testing

In his detailed and technical address on the exhibits, Mr. Mason said on by the government during the past few years, it was pointed out that the fact that due to this seasonal growing test more information regarding the suitability of different varieties of seed in the province for the various districts work, that from years of the same work carried on at the experimental farms, Ottawa, Charlottetown, Harrow, Guelph, Kapuskasing, etc.

"I hope we can extend this crop testing this coming year. Instead of one place of acreage in Hastings County, (namely the farm of Jos. Stirling), we want to have two here. We have been able to do one in Prince Edward County. All we need for the purpose is farm suitable for the type of farm which may be donated? We hope to have two test continued in the same place for three consecutive years at least," stated Mr. Mason.

Mr. A. H. Mason field husbandry department of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, declared that the third vital thing to remember in time memory recalled the great progress, that the fall fair was held, due largely be explained, to the fact that soon fairs profited by the mistakes of person as to what the exhibits should be.

Tendency to Specialize

Of late years the tendency of farmers has been to specialize, to find out the crop most suited for particular districts and then grow them. The age of variety and indiscriminate cultivation was declared costly and uncertain has passed away. "Co-operation among farmers, the awakened consciousness of the need for good seed and the constant experimentation that has been carried on by the government has resulted in these best varieties. "But even yet, no one variety of seed is going to suit the needs of any farmer in any particular district", declared Mr. Mason.

Subscribing wholeheartedly to previous statements that have been made regarding the representative showed that actual test had been carried out in the fall of 1936 on seed that is measured by weight. "This is worth thinking of," he concluded.

Don't Sell Good Seed Advice

There will be a tendency this year for the farmer to sell his best grain and keep the worst for his own seeding, stated Mr. Mason, cautioning seriously against it. "Better prices for grain just now is the line for many, but if they do sell their best and sow the poorest, their will pay for it many times over, he added, citing the case of Leeds County where, after a big one time farmers there sold their good alfalfa seed and planted the poorer kind. The result of that can still be noticed all through the county even yet, six years after, it was added.

The coming year will be a year featured by a shortage of hay and pasturage, it was warned. Due to the fact that there is no seed in the fact that seed had not been able to establish itself. Hay conditions will be extremely noticeable. "If you are short of hay, the old mixture of oats and sweet clover will see you through, or oats and peas, with sweet clover later in the season. Even soy beans are good for a mixture and pasture, oats and sweet clover are excellent up to July 1st. Then comes the sweet clover alone. For late fall pasture fall rye is best."

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Mar. 19 (CP)—Following a dip in the early session of industrial shares on the Toronto Exchange share prices began to firm this afternoon on slightly better buying. Improvement was noted mainly in the metals and miscellaneous issues.

Mickel eased a few cents on nearly a point and theriers came back that same amount while C.P.R. firmed to above a point. Base gain and the liquor leaders, Walkers Common and Distillers-Seagrams were both higher this afternoon. The oils displayed only minor changes.

Losses predominated in the implement, building and utility shares while trading in gold was moderate volume.

WALL STREET

New York, Mar. 19.—(AP)— A speedy rally in carrier stocks, after the market had eased, encouraged general recoveries in today's market. Gains of fractions to a point or more were widely distributed near the fourth hour. For a brief period the ticker tape was in arrears. Activity slowed later and extreme advances were shaded.

Dominion issues like Hiram Walker, McIntyre and Dome Mines were exchanged in quiet dealings. Distillers-Corp. Seagrams and Canadian Pacific lifted a trifle. Canadian government 4s were inactive. Canadian dollar held even at 100.09 3-8 cents. On the curb, Lake Shore Mines was steady.

On the upside most of the time were N.Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Great Northern, Baltimore and Ohio, South-ern Railway, Illinois Central and Delaware and Hudson.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, March 19 (CP)—The mining list of Toronto Exchange tightened up in the early afternoon today and net gains declined early issues in the gold group and bids were raised slightly for the oils. A few of the gold group made slight gains, notably Macassa, O'Brien, Bralorne, Fields Crow and Premier.

Lower metal prices in London depressed the base metal list and lower prices were general. Noranda sold down 2 1-4 to 111 1-2 and recovered about a point of the loss and Hudson Bay took a loss of half point. Pend Oreille dropped 20 cents.

Jack Waite Mines Limited came on the board today, opening at 1.35 and firming to 1.60. The company's mine is in Idaho.

Mylamaque Gold

Official announcement is made to the effect that C. W. Farrar, B.Sc., has resigned his duties at Lake Shore Mines to take charge of operations at Mylamaque Mines adjoining the Lamaque operation, Quebec. Mr. Farrar will work in conjunction with W. O'Reilly, while Vincent Ryan, mining engineer at Shawkey, will be retained as consulting engineer.

CLAIMS RIVER OF GOLD IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

An underground river of gold in British Columbia! That is what William A. Drayton, socially prominent in New York, and nephew of the late John Jacob Astor, believes he has found. A mining engineer, Drayton is enroute to British Columbia, where he will begin placer mining operations on an old underground river bed which he discovered 40 feet below Wild Horse Creek, near Fort Steel, where already he carries on extensive mining operations. Drayton is accompanied by Mrs. Drayton, the former Joan Bergere, daughter of one of Australia's foremost wool kings and breeder of thoroughbred horses. Photo shows the couple as they arrived in Los Angeles.

Marketing Gasoline

Constructed at a cost of $750,000, in the heart of downtown Toronto, the new palatial Toronto Stock Exchange building opens on March 20. Combining all the features of fine architecture and modern design, the exchange features new methods or trading which eliminate the old blackboard quotations. Trading on the floor of the new exchange will centre around eight hexagonal "posts," where prices "bid" and "asked" will be flashed on each face of the "post". Any changes in price quoted or bid are announced by a "quote boy" to the quotation room where an operator controls keys for setting up the price at the "post". This feature has been used in New York for some time but at the new Toronto exchange makes its appearance for the first time in Canada. The top floor of the three-storey building contains executive offices while a lower floor is taken by a restaurant. Above at the 12th is a view of the outside of the new Toronto Stock Exchange building. Upper Right, is an interior view of the trading floor revealing the beautiful murals which decorate the walls, the ceiling decorations, indirect lighting and the new trading "posts". At the lower left is H. B. Hooper, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange and next to him is F. O. Lawson, secretary of the exchange. The lower right photograph shows the new type of telephone booth through which traders can contact their offices. To avoid any shouting or noise, telephone clerk will flash the number of the trader on a large screen which hangs on the floor in front of the booth when a call is wanted on the telephone. The new telephone booths has not all resemblance to the old type and now looks more like a night club table.

NEW STORE OPENED ON FRONT STREET

Friday morning a new figure appeared in the business life of Belleville, as proprietor of a new grocery and fruit store. Not a great figure exactly, but one who has been here for some time in a managerial capacity, W. H. Anderson, an energetic young business man, proprietor of a new Front Street store, called Anderson's. Mr. Anderson was with the Eaton Grocetaria organization, for years, the past two and a half years in Belleville. He was nine years with Loblaw's in Sault Ste. Marie. With a thorough knowledge of the grocery and fruit business Mr. Anderson begins business life for himself under favorable auspices, as many complimentary remarks were passed opening day upon the attractive appearance of the store and arrangement of the stock. Anderson's is located at 209 Front Street, the store premises formerly occupied by the Eaton Fruit Mart.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Mar. 19.—There was a higher trend on the local butter market yesterday, prices moving up practically under an improved demand, with receipts and offerings light. On the cartot market the advance was 1-4c, while to the retail trade jobbers discontinued shading prices 1-2c from maximum levels asked. Eggs were in good demand and prices also a little firmer. Other lines were unchanged. Receipts were 1,200 cases of eggs, 6 boxes of butter and 40 boxes of cheese.

FORMER KINGSTONIAN DIES

Kingston, Ont., March 19.—(CP) William Nile, 81, veteran character actor of the stage, screen and radio, a former Kingstonite, died at his home, at Chicago, according to information received here. He lived in Kingston many years and was educated here. Mr. Yule was in Kingston several years with the Stock Company at the Old Grand Opera House.

RIGIDLY PLAIN

No Conspiracy to Hide

No evidence was found of a conspiracy to hide the facts. The jurist reported Maxwell and Maguire had proved themselves capable of handling important posts by the way they handled the situation developments when 25 to 30 prisoners refused to eat noon dinner January 17 and barricaded themselves in a dormitory.

Maxwell failed in his duty here, which Judge Madden said was to "look out for the boys." He told Dr. Heslip "some of the boys" had refused to eat dinner, failing to say how many left the dining room and that they barricaded themselves in a dormitory.

Called from his residence on the strength, Maguire promised the striking group "no one would be punished" if they returned to their cells. Yet Judge Madden said Maguire selected two men to shoot ringleaders and took them to the tower to be locked up. He "forgot" to report at his own request.

Then the trouble started..... "owing to the indecision and vacillating attitude of Inspector Maxwell" and the conduct of Sergeant Maguire "who did not know what he was doing."

He charged the officers with "unwarrantable neglect of duty."

Too Much Show Place.

Judge Madden was not impressed with the beauty of the reformatory grounds, dotted by pleasant cottages, artificial lake and streams. It was a "show-place". Escape was made easy. Two escaped in the last three years, though nearly all were recaptured.

Recommending that the 22 who escaped during the riot be charged in criminal court along with three other unnamed convicts who set fire to bed clothing and books, he said:

"No institution for detention for crime should be attractive, either to the public or the inmates. The effect is bad, material beauty of the institution is not reformative and certainly lends to make the place look inviting. It should be the reverse. Rigidly plain, to inculcate a wholesome fear on the part of both the public and the inmates."

Food Complaints Unjustified.

Complaints against the quality of the food were unjustified, in the judge's opinion. But he found that dominories in which thirty and more men lived were "schools of crime", and as soon as the government was able it should install individual steel cells.

Fault with the prison system he held was founded on fact. The report suggested abolition of the existing parole board and appointment of one full-time official. In the same part of his report, the judge urged that magistrates be given the right to send to gaol, if possible from giving indefinite sentences.

DANGEROUS PAIR HELD IN IRONS

Passengers on Train Help Mountie After He Was Slugged

Saskatoon, March 19 (CP)—Two convicts were lodged today in Prince Albert Penitentiary while Joe Farr related how he helped Constable Lloyd Davis of the Royal North West Mounted Police prevent escape of the dangerous pair from a railway train.

Conductor L. D. Goldsworthy, of Boston's National Hockey League team, was credited, too, with assistance in helping overpower the thugs.

"You've got to hand it to that Mountie," Farr said last night when located by newspapermen after an affray nearly cost the passenger who went to Davis' assistance his life. He was attacked by his prisoners. "He's the bravest man I've met for many a day."

Escorting Prisoners

Davis was escorting Clarence Roy Nolan and Paddy Sullivan from Saskatoon to Prince Albert to serve seven and five-year sentences for safe-cracking at Mirror, Alta. Early yesterday, near Gandom, 30 miles west of Saskatoon, Nolan managed to free his companion.

Davis had been sitting in the smoking compartment of a coach, with his two prisoners, leg-ironed, in the seat opposite. To obviate trips to the drinking fountain, he had filled a bottle with water.

In an unguarded moment he was slugged over the head with the bottle and rendered temporarily unconscious.

Farr, travelling on the same train from Saskatoon to Prince Albert, home at Wilkie, 100 miles west of Saskatoon, rushed to help the policeman.

Davis and Farr, with the help of Goldsworthy, overpowered the pair.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Dominion Bridge has been in better demand recently. One point which must be considered in connection with this company is the exceptionally strong financial position, which is practical dominations of the building industry. Industrial steel industry is also an important factor, as is the company's majority stock control of Dominion Engineering Company, which obviously must be doing considerably better this year with the intense activity in the steel industry at this time. Dominion Engineering also has as an exceptionally strong financial condition, and with any return to worthwhile earning power, it should be able to resume payment of dividends almost immediately.

Fanny Farmer Candy Shops showed earnings in 1936 of $1.85 a share compared with $1.38 a share in 1935. Earnings in 1936 are before making provision of $60,000 for undistributed profits tax. Dividends paid in 1936 totalled 87 1-2 cents a share compared with 50 cents a share in 1935. Dividends have been placed on a regular basis of $1.00 per annum. On the basis of the last three earnings the present company appears well able to maintain this regular rate. Fanny Farmer has been expanding its business rapidly during the past four years, sales increasing from $3.4 millions in 1932 to $5.8 millions in 1936. The increase in 1936 was $800,000. This company enjoys excellent management, being operated by the same group that controls Laura Secord Candy Shops in Canada. However, being in the United States, Fanny Farmer has a wide field still remaining for expansion.

On The Street

The day may be coming when the capitalization of Dominion Steel & Coal Corp. consist of common stock only.....During the past three months a total of 18,567,160 shares in the company valued at $6,960,864 changed hands on the floor of the Calgary stock exchange .....London made an enquiry on Wednesday in respect to the securing of some good sized blocks of newsprint stocks.....New York has been a buyer of Distillers-Seagrams .....Oils are liked for various reasons by a growing number of speculators, but the undercover existence seems to be that they are being bought primarily as inflation hedges.

Fanny Farmer Candy Shops Reports Earnings

$556,000 Won By Canadians In Irish Sweeps

(By The Canadian Press)

Fortuna's tricky ways tumbled more than $556,000 today into the pockets of Canadians with the luck to have a finger in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes pot. One Canadian was the last girl guide to have luck by holding a ticket on the Grand National Steeplechase winner in the Sweeps.

This Canadian whose horse Royal Mail led the pack in the great race at Aintree was given $165,000 while the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes, He is Dave Wood who remarked when asked how he felt about it all: "Just like $165,000."

Wood who dwells in the Saskatchewan town of Yorkton, 135 miles northeast of Regina, won $150,000 for holding the first-horse ticket but a 55-year-old labourer also gets 10 per cent for selling the ticket to himself.

Peter Chamberlayn, "a straight" Wood drew ticket numbered 8G97645. He received the congratulations of Yorkton folks quite calmly. Wood recalled he had been buying tickets for years.

Two unidentified Canadians clicked on the wheel of fortune to obtain $50,000 each. Their tickets were drawn as the wheel completed the toughest horse race in the sweepstakes list in place. "Grakle Seven" had ticket PUT9836 on Puck Belle and "Mount Uniac" LEK0023.

Belle and 45 Draw Horses

Sixty-five Canadians drew horses and each ticket-holder collects $3,000.

Among the $3,000 winners are Alexander Steiger of Prince Albert, Sask., Mrs. Bert Vender, Warner, Alta., and 25 residents of Stettler, Alta., who all split the award.

The 25 Stettler residents had roster dreams than $3,000 worth but today all declared themselves "disappointed but not complaining." They backed Golden Miller, sensational favorite in the stakes, and turned down offers at half that installment prevailing in the town. Miller's jockey, Evan Williams, of Calgary, before the big event was disappearing today.

T. J. Pelletier of Ottawa was in on the $3,000 cut but he sold his ticket. What he received for it and to whom it was sold was something Pelletier refused to tell.

Other in this prize field were Thomas R. Irwin of Belleville and Mrs. Marjorie Lake and William Young of Toronto, employees in a great men' store.

Author Assails Former King For Unreasonable and Vain Conduct During His Reign

Says Unconventional Ways of Prince of Wales Unsuited For a Monarch

H. BOLITHO, AUTHOR

Edward Never Was Liberal Spender is Claim of Writer

London, March 18—(CP Cable)—The first book on King Edward's short reign today assailed the former sovereign as "unreasonable and vain," as a King who "started and failed."

"Written by Hector Bolitho and entitled "Edward VIII, His Life and Reign", the book said Edward "could not realize that the unconventional ways of the popular Prince of Wales, the jolly and spontaneity, did not suit a monarch's stride."

Bolitho declared Edward inherited the crown when the country was sleepy and there was no outside stimulus for his talents and character. He was "harassed, unreasonable and vain, but continued to play the role of popular monarch to the early days of his reign."

As his passion for helping the unemployed was frustrated by red tape and convention, and disconraged by the authorities who felt extreme discomfort at his methods, Bolitho added, the King was deprived—of "the one other interest which might have diverted him from his selfish way."

Dwelling on other aspects of Edward's character, the author said he had never been a liberal spender and that with the acquisition of great lands and houses and a fortune he became "curiously parsimonious."

Bolitho, a New Zealander, has written extensively about the royal family. He accompanied the Prince of Wales to Australia and New Zealand in 1920. He visited Canada in 1934.

Bolitho predicted in introducing his work that "authors of the future will not write upon the 'romantic' theme of a king who gave up his throne for love so much as upon the theme of a man who grew into one because through the slow disintegration of his character—a disintegration that was accelerated by the perpetual frustrations from which he suffered."

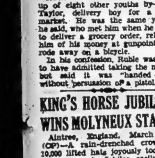
"He assumed his crown surrounded by old and complacently tired men, with a political minister who stood for safety and apathy which he could neither respect nor fight, and with an Archbishop to whom he was hostile," Bolitho wrote.

"There were no influential members of the cabinet of his own age and experience. He came to look upon his father, the archbishop and some ministers as figures of pathetic company designed to frustrate his natural restlessness. Therefore he made his own life as he wished.

"Edward VII. referred to the British people as his subjects. King George V. spoke of his people. Edward VIII. addressed his 'fellowmen'."

Delivery Boy Picks Youth in 'Line-up'

Windsor, Ont., March 18 (CP)—Glen Noble, 13, Sandwich East Township, faces a charge of robbery while armed with an offensive weapon following an alleged confession he made police relating how he stabbed Ali Ismail, grocery clerk Tuesday.



Noble was identified from a line-up of eight other youths by Alex Taylor, delivery boy for a meat market. He was the same youth, he said, who met him when he went to deliver a grocery order, relieved him of his money at gunpoint and rode away on a bicycle.

In his confession, Noble was said to have admitted taking the money but said it was "handed over" without persuasion of a pistol.

KING'S HORSE JUBILEE WINS MOLYNEUX STAKES

Alntree, England, March 18—(CP)—A rain-drenched crowd of 10,000 lifted its hoarsely today as King George's Jubilee easily won the Molyneux stakes, second event of the opening day's program of Alntree's race meeting.

The royal gelding took the lead early in the five furlong race and carried home a length in front of Sir Victor Sassoon's love call in the good time of one minute, six and three-fifths seconds. The going was extremely heavy.

Y's Men's Dance Is Gala Affair

St. Patrick's Day was fittingly ushered out in a blaze of color and gaiety last night at Johnstone's Academy when the Y's Men's Club were hosts to a large crowd, at their annual St. Patrick Dance.

Scarf evening gowns of the ladies offered a colorful contrast to the conventional black and white of the men as the dance moved forward in a gay kaleidoscope of color. But Haines and his Commodore Orchestra delighted the assemblage with their lilting rhythms.

With members of the Club injecting the delightful humanderie characteristic of the Y's men, the affair was one of the most enjoyable of its kind held in the city this winter. A delectable luncheon was served at midnight.

Highlighting the affair was the presentation of a variety floor show which included tap dancing, vocal solos and comedy skits.

Participants in the dance were: Misdames B. Houston, N. E. Edwards, N. Thompson, W. C. Short, S. Licence, O. Pasley, V. Weir, H. Mole, K. Morden, H. Peake, A. Wehr, N. Wilbur, H. Vaughan and J. Wilson.

Wheat is Presented Charter Members

Simcoe, Ont., March 18 (CP)—The Wheat Club of Norfolk County, founded by G. Thorndhill, agricultural representative, will elect its officers at a meeting here Saturday. The Club has launched a campaign among junior farmers to grow pure strain wheat, in great demand at present.

Norfolk Agricultural Society last fall presented the charter members of the Club with six bushels each of registered Lincoln's gold chaff wheat, a pure white strain, permitting each member to sow three acres. At harvest time each member will get back six bushels.

Mr. Bramhill launched the Club when he was appointed to the manufacturing firm pointed out if a pure white strain of wheat could be obtained the farmer would pay five cents more a bushel.

ESPOSITO FREED ON OLD CHARGE

31 Year Old Murder Count Dismissed by Jury

New Castle, Pa., March 18 (AP)—Rocco Esposito of Kirkland Lake, Ont., was freed by a jury today on a 31-year-old murder charge in the slaying at Francisco Romeo.

The jury returned its verdict of acquittal after deliberating hours.

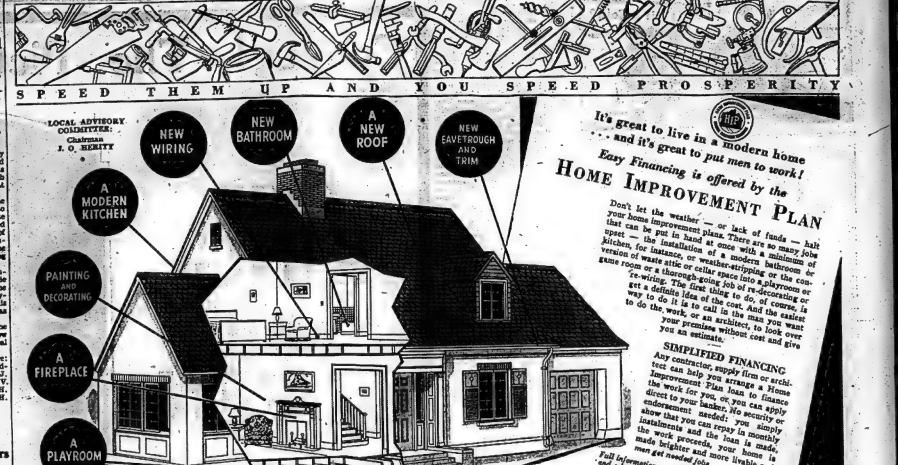
Esposito had denied before that jury he shot Francesco Romeo here in 1906.

Freedom meant Esposito, now 56, might return to his wife and four sons and daughters in his adopted home at Kirkland Lake.

Relatives and friends said, had been leading an exemplary life since he left New Castle as a youth of 20.

He waived extradition to return and clear his record. He was the second man to be tried and acquitted on an indictment that had lain almost forgotten in the Lawrence County courthouse for three decades.

Dominick Calo was freed by a jury in 1907.



CURFEW IMPOSED ON JERUSALEM

Explosion of Six Bombs Brings Law Into Action

Jerusalem, March 18 (CP-Havas)—Palestine authorities today clamped down a curfew on this capital following the explosion of six bombs which killed one person and injured 40 others in the most serious outburst of terrorism in recent months. The curfew ordered all unauthorized persons from the streets between 7 p.m. and 5 a.m. beginning today. Troops and police reserves were sent to several districts for emergency duty and a wave of civil disturbance swept the city over the border between clashes between Jews and Arabs broke out.

Bits of Candy, Meat, Found in Spoon Streets Tested For Poisons

Toronto, March 18 (CP)—Police of Parkdale District were instructed today to bring in to Inspector Austin Mitchell candy or bits of meat found on streets. Five pet dogs and six pet cats in the district have been found poisoned and police fear some child at play may happen on the poisoned food.

Tweed and District

Tweed—Major Rev. Merritt Price, Actinolite, addressed the Men's Brotherhood at the United Church on Sunday afternoon on the cessation of "Great Britain and Rearmament".

There are many different viewpoints from which to consider the problems of peace in the world, when one discusses the questions of whether Great Britain's rearmament budget and recently announced is justifiable. The enormous appropriation amounts to an average expenditure of $200 per capita per year for two years. If applied to a village the size of Tweed it would mean the payment of $1,000,000 within a period of two years.

Great Britain, basically, desires peace for herself, for Europe and for the world. The principle of British civilization for a long period of years has been for peace within the Empire and harmony with her neighbours. She has even put up with insults from abroad for reasons of conciliation.

It is a safe assertion to say that Canada that one man, woman, or child, desires anything else but to be left alone to enjoy a peaceful existence. The same thing was repeated in Austria and France.

Mr. Price traced the course of events from the conclusion of the Great War which was to be a war to end war. The treaty of Versailles was scrapped by Germany; the Rhineland has been remilitarized and the limitation of armaments' agreement broken by Germany and Italy. Contrary to pledges of non-intervention in the Spanish Civil lines two countries have landed troops in Spain.

The great trouble in the world today has been this failure of Germany and Italy to keep faith. What is to be the outcome? There must be some great movement in which the majority of the people of the nation rule—not as it now is in Germany, Italy and Russia, where not more than one per cent. of the people have any authority.

New devices of all kinds and poisonous gases of the most diabolical type have been invented strong enough to wipe out a city the size of London, England in three hours time. If another war breaks no one knows how it will start, or when, or where, but it is not impossible. If United States and Great Britain worked together they could keep the world safe. If Great Britain were conquered Canada would not long be safe. Only the fact that she is part of the Empire has saved her.

Germany, Italy, Russia have built oversized war machines, and just as surely will their people force them to use them or their leaders. Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin, will have to step aside and let a more peaceable group rule. The overruling justice of an international God controls the destinies of nations and will lead to better times.

Considerable discussion followed this excellent address on a subject on which Mr. Price was so well qualified to speak.

4TH SIDNEY

4th Sidney—At present the weather is cool and the farmers are still taking advantage of the snow drawing logs etc.

Mr. Holden Johnston and sister, Margaret of Queen's, Kingston, spent the week-end with friends, parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Jeffery, Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris and Mr. Robt MacPherson spent Thursday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. W. Harry of the 3rd Line.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Wood entertained Mrs. J. Hannah and sister, Mrs. Wannamaker of Madoc and Mrs. F. Harris on Tuesday last.

On Sunday evening a number on this Line were delighted to hear Miss Joyce McMorran when she sang over the radio at Kingston. Her many friends congratulate Joyce on her beautiful Spring song and hope to hear her again in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gray returned home on Sunday evening from their honeymoon and on Monday evening a number of invited relatives were present to spend the tea hour with them also a big charivari and present at their home to make them feel that young folks did were rejoicing in the step they have taken. A good time was enjoyed, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Gray many years of happy married life.

POINT ANNE

Point Anne—The regular meeting of the A.Y.P.A. of March 11th. was opened in the usual manner. Business was discussed and a program followed. A song by Allen Daniels; Ruth Insley and Margaret Maher; piano solo, Mrs. Kelser; piano solo by Rev. A. E. Pepper; guitar solo, Mr. Hamilton. solo by Mrs. Grace Fraser. After the program a delicious lunch was served followed by a contest which was won by Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton. The meeting was closed by all singing the National Anthem.

L.O.L. No. 2600 held a euchre and dance on Wednesday evening. The ladies' first prize was won by Mrs. Chaplain; second by Mrs. Frank Joby. She suffered no serious injury to Mr. Chaplain; second by Mr. Percy Akey. Dancing started at ten-thirty, the music being supplied by Bill Wartham and his orchestra.

Mrs. Grace Bayan of Bellville, spent the afternoon at her mother's, Mrs. Edith Wilson.

Miss Hilda McLarren was knocked down by a car driven by Mr. Ross Sedore. The genial first prize, went

FAIR CATTLE BARN BURNS

Simcoe, Ont., March 18—Fire last night destroyed a cattle barn at the Simcoe fair grounds with a loss of approximately $2,000. Two cars stored in the building belonging to local residents William Bramhill and Alden Burnham were destroyed with a total loss of $600.

"Don't let Constipation get you down"
"WATCH YOUR STEP"
THE BOSS TOLD ME

● Constipation dulls working hours, undermines energy and ambition. You feel tired all the time.

The brainiest man in the world just can't succeed if poisons due to accumulated waste in his system slowly and steadily dull his brain, sap his energy, and pull him down below par physically.

Doctors will tell you that common constipation is due largely to lack of "bulk" in your diet. Kellogg developed All-Bran to put that necessary fibre back into your diet.

Tests prove that All-Bran absorbs at least twice its weight in water, supplies the soft bulk necessary, and acts like a sponge in gently cleansing out the system. It also supplies vitamin B to tone up the intestines, as well as iron for the blood.

It's such a simple and easy method to follow too. Just eat two tablespoonfuls of All-Bran daily—either as a cereal with milk or cream—in tasty muffins—or sprinkled on some other cereal.

All-Bran is sold by all grocers. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

Chicago, March 18 (AP)— A girl bandit waited on customers of Frank Pantle's delicatessen last night while a male accomplice held up the proprietor in a back room.

Occasionally the girl ran back to inquire of Pantle the price of eggs and summer sausage. She and her escort departed with $14 after a 15-minute sale.

"Both of them," she retorted, and she whispered then excitedly. "Why don't you have a double wedding?"

Vilette flared up, all her good resolutions forgotten. "I'm not having any stupid wedding!" she said. "I hate fuss and nonsense of that sort. We're going to a registrar's office and I shan't have the entire family there either."

"Then it's the first time in your life that you haven't wanted a fuss," Bobbie put in. "And I shall come anyway—just to have a look at Bruce, and to see if he's nervous."

"I shall come too then," Effie cried.

"You won't be asked," Vilette retorted. "Either of you."

The younger girl turned quickly to Bruce. "You'll ask us, won't you?"

"It looks to me as if I shall have to do exactly as I'm told," Bruce said humorously.

Vilette turned on him like a flash. If you mean you'll do as I tell you—it will be the first time in your life!" she said with the hysteria of snapping nerves. "And if there is going to be all this argument, I don't care if I'm never married at all and I don't suppose you do either."

INSTALMENT 23

Bruce half shrugged his shoulder, though he had gone a little pale. "Well, don't quarrel about it still on me in public," he said good humperedly. "Have some of these cherries—they're good."

Vilette pushed away the dish he had passed to her. "I'm not a child, to be told to be good and to be given a sweet!" she said sharply.

John broke the awkward silence which followed. "The storm really seems to have passed," he said rather unfortunately.

"Just begun, I should say," Bobbie muttered.

Vilette turned on him with flashing eyes. "You mind your own business! You think you can say just what you like. Nobody ever scolds you or tries to keep you in your place. I shall be thankful when you go back to school."

Bruce looked at Heather. "Do you think we might take off our bibs and get down?" he asked flippantly.

There was a scraping back of chairs. Only Vilette remained seated, puffing little angry clouds of smoke into the air from her cigarette and staring before her.

Heather paused in the doorway. "Aren't you coming, dear?" she asked.

"No."

Vilette heard them all depart, but she still sat there at the disordered table, her heart filled with misery. She ground out the end of her cigarette and left another. Nobody cared what became of her!

She had meant to be so good—she had told Bruce in that little note that she would never see her again, and already she had behaved abominably.

The house seemed very deserted; then came a step on the stairs which she knew. It paused by the doorway, but she did not look around.

"Come out, Vilette," Bruce said very gently.

She stood up, still not turning. "You don't want me," she said.

He came into the room standing beside her. "Thank you for your letter," he said.

She bit her lip to control a sob that rose in her throat.

"Come out," he said again, "I want to talk to you."

She shook her head. "I don't want to come if you're asking me only because you think you ought to—" and then impulsively, "don't go—I'm too low. I don't know what's the matter with me. I try so hard to keep my temper and it's no good. I'm all on edge, Bruce." Her voice was shaking. "I don't want you to go away—I shall be miserable without you. I suppose you're tired of me and I don't blame you—" and now she turned, clutching at his arm with a theatrical gesture.

"Oh, please don't be tired of me."

TWENTY YEARS OF GASTRIC TROUBLE

Maclean Brand Stomach Powder Brought Relief

Gastric Trouble is no respecter of persons. Mrs. Maclean Brand Stomach Powder gives equal benefit to all.

"I have suffered from Gastric trouble for quite twenty years on and off," writes Mrs. Lewis, a daily nurse, "having been in hospital many times for treatment, but after leaving hospital I was bound to keep strictly to milk diet—but now, since taking Maclean Brand Stomach Powder I can eat quite a bit of food that I dared not touch before.

Remember this: It was the powder with the signature "ALEX C. MACLEAN" on the bottle, that relieved Mrs. Lewis. That's the powder you, too, in bottles in cartons. Never sold loose.

Bruce looked at Heather. "Do you think we might take off our bibs and get down?" he asked flippantly.

"If you like, my dear."

They were silent for a moment, then she said, "I'm quite happy now that—if only you were not going away tomorrow."

"I will come back." He linked his arm in hers as they strolled slowly back and Vilette did all the talking.

"I'm glad we've kissed and made friends," she said. "I couldn't have borne it if you'd gone away and we hadn't. She laughed softly. "Do you know, sometimes, I'm ashamed because I love you so well —I never meant to love any one—as much as I love you."

As they came in sight of the house she stopped, and in the darkness she reached up to draw his head down to her. Their lips met, and in spite of her renewed happiness she could not smile shut out the thought that rushed to her mind—it was you, but you're not kissing me.

But she did her best to repress it, and said gaily, "There! now that's the last till we meet again." And then, peering up at him and trying to see his face, "Are you happy, Bruce?"

"Yes," he answered, but he felt as if his heart were breaking.

Even one except Heather went to the aerodrome on Tuesday to see Bruce and Jepson fly away. Bobbie drove them back in Bruce's car. From the window Heather saw them drive up, but she did not go out to meet them. She had had her last moments when Bruce came to say good-bye to her, but he had only shaken hands with her and said carelessly, "I'll tell you about the wedding arrangements when I come down again."

Something had caught her by the throat but she had said quietly, "Yes—I shall want to hear all about it."

His handsome face twisted into a smile. "You look very sweet this morning, Heather," he said, and then left her.

Supper was rather a quiet affair that evening, until in the middle of it the telephone rang, and Vilette started to her feet. "That's Bruce," she said. When she returned she was flushed and smiling. "They're all right—I spoke to both of them."

"It seems funny without Mr. Bruce," Peddy remarked to Heather later in the evening. "He's one of those who makes himself missed —the house doesn't seem the same without him."

Vilette had gone to bed early and downstairs Effie was seeking consolation and amusement in her old gramaphone which she had industriously brought with her. Paddy Jepson had given her a new record as a parting gift and the song was now echoing through the silent house:

"When I grow too old to dream,
When I grow too old to dream
Your love will live in my heart."

Too old to dream! . . . did such a time ever really come, Heather wondered.

Instalment 24

With Bruce in London, the following week or so The Haven passed rather quietly for every one except Bobbie, who, having Bruce's car with which to amuse herself, found his time fully occupied.

Heather had not seemed very well just lately, but one morning he looked up cheerfully as Heather entered the smaller of the three sitting rooms, which had been given up to him. "I have received a letter which may interest you," he said.

Another bill, Heather thought quickly, but this time she was mistaken.

"You may remember," Caesar said grandly, "that some weeks ago I answered an advertisement which enquired for the relatives of one, William Aston. I am well aware that in this all the time I was held up to ridicule. This," he held the letter aloft with an air of triumph, "is in reply to the information I forwarded."

"Really?" Heather said incredulously.

"It is merely a formal acknowledgement of my letter," Caesar was explain, and if I could, it would just seem silly to you—all about nothing, though it's as real to me. She moved her hands helplessly. "It's like anything always designed may something that walks beside me all the time and won't go away—but I'm not afraid of it then when I tried to laugh, hiding her face against him, she said, "And when I'm horrid and cross to you, I only seem to love you more."

His arms closed around her, but he did not speak, and she went on presently "It's be married soon so everything will be all right if we are married soon. I hated it at supper time when they were laughing about our wedding—that's what made me angry because—"

"Because what?"

She lifted her head, and in the pale light of the moon he could see the tragic intensity of her eyes.

"Sometimes I am sure we shall never be married—I think it's that that haunts me." She gave herself a little shake. "But I'm right now I'm going to tuck you in—new leaf and start afresh. You'll see darling! I shall be so good I can be bad."

"Poor little girl."

She turned her face against his arm. "Say you love me, Bruce," she whispered, and he answered steadily "I do love you."

She drew a little sigh of relief. "Write and tell me when it's all settled. And we won't have any fuss—we'll just slip off together—quietly, shall we?"

"If you like, my dear."

"And I'll write to you," Heather said, "and tell you all the news."

"I will come back." He linked his arm in hers as they strolled slowly back and Vilette did all the talking.

"I'm glad we've kissed and made friends," she said. "I couldn't have borne it if you'd gone away and we hadn't. She laughed softly. "Do you know, sometimes, I'm ashamed because I love you so well —I never meant to love any one—as much as I love you."

"I WAS ALL NERVES"

FOR young girls approaching womanhood, for women, during the middle life going through the "change," for those who suffer from backache, headache and nervousness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just the remedy Nature needs. Read Mrs. Ida William Kay of 18 Pelham Road, St. Catharines, Ontario, tells of her experience: "For years I suffered from nervousness. I was all nerves. I could not do a day's housework without being tired to death. Headaches also sapped my strength. I decided to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it strengthened me and rid me of that tired, worn, upset condition." Buy now.

a ten-mile walk, Caesar's salesp, and Bobbie's over at the Plymouth aerodrome."

"And Logan?" Henry inquired.

"He may come down for the week-end," Effie answered, "but we're not sure; he had to go to London on business."

"And Vilette?"

"She went out sailing with a new boy-friend," Effie said flippantly. "He's not anything exciting, but I suppose she thinks he's better than nobody."

At supper time Vilette put in an appearance, looking very well and pretty. Bobbie turned up half an hour later, and Vilette said at once, "You can't have the car tomorrow. I'm going to learn to drive it myself."

Bobbie flushed. "You couldn't," he said sharply. "You'd only muck it up, and Bruce would hate that."

She answered calmly that she was the best judge of what Bruce would like, and that she had arranged to have her first lesson at half past nine the following morning.

"You won't be out of bed," Bobbie said.

Henry threw oil on the troubled waters by reminding them that his car was at every one's disposal, and the argument ceased, although almost immediately every one looked glum when he announced that the following day he was taking Heather for a long drive around the country.

"What—all day?" Effie demanded.

Heather tried to speak, but Henry silenced her. "All day," he said firmly.

"What's going to become of us?" Effie demanded.

Heather looked at Henry. "Couldn't we take Effie and Bobbie?"

"We could not," he answered. "I've promised myself this drive all the week, and I'm not going to be disappointed. We shall start at 10:30."

But Heather still felt reluctant when the morning came. She had given Paddy strict orders to look after Caesar and to watch that Effie did not get into mischief.

Vilette had already departed in Bruce's car with her new friend, whom she called Dick, a shy-looking youth who seemed almost overwhelmed by his responsibility.

The telephone was ringing as Heather went to put on her hat.

In response to her "Hullo!" she heard, "Bruce here—is that you Heather?"

"Yes. . . . Vilette has just gone out—can I give her a message?"

"Only that I shall be down today."

"Oh, will you!" She was suddenly conscious of the eagerness in her voice, and she added more quietly, "Vilette will be glad. I think she has missed you." And that was not the truth, she realized with a pang, because since the first Vilette had seemed perfectly happy and occupied.

There was a little silence, then Bruce said silently, "I'm afraid she's not very pleased with me, Heather," he said then as she did not speak, he added with a forced cheerfulness, "Well, I shall see you later."

When she and Henry turned onto the main road they saw Vilette far ahead of them, having her first driving lesson. Vilette saw them and thought Bruce's big car in a difficult standstill with much grinding of brakes.

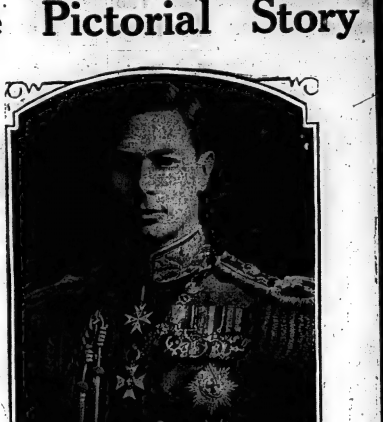
"How are you getting on?" Henry asked cheerily.

"She's a fine pupil," Dick answered in a little shyly.

Bruce rang up just now," Heather said. "He will be down this evening."

She was quick to notice Vilette's frown and the way her lips tightened. "Well, you may be back, she said carelessly.

"I don't see it here till the evening," Heather said again.



Vilette shrugged her shoulders. "Well, he won't find an empty house," she said casually.

"Or a smashed-up car, I hope," Henry added with a smile, and drove on again. For a difficult little corner added to Heather, "I'm not sure that I envy Logan."

"Oh, will you!" She was suddenly conscious of the eagerness in her voice, and she added more quietly, "Vilette will be glad. I think she has missed you." And that was not the truth, she realized with a pang, because since the first Vilette had seemed perfectly happy and occupied.

Coming! The Pictorial Story of Our KING and QUEEN

As a prelude to the gorgeous ceremonies on May 12th, when Their Majesties King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth will be crowned in Westminster Abbey, The Ontario Intelligencer will present a daily series of intimate pictures of the sovereign and his consort.

Starting Thursday March 25th

The Royal Road to the Coronation

will tell with pictures, charmingly and perhaps better than ever before the life stories of this popular but, comparatively unknown Royal Couple.

"What are you thinking about," Heather asked presently.

He glanced down at her. "About you," he said frankly. "Are we going to make a success of it Heather?"

She flushed a little but she met his eyes frankly. "If we don't it won't be my fault," she answered.

"I know that," he said quickly, "but sometimes—this last week I've wondered if I'm doing the right thing. I'm old enough to be your father."

Heather swallowed a little lump that would rise in her throat. "Well?" she said gently.

"And you're still a young woman."

She smiled now. "Well?" she said again.

He laughed. "If you don't see any difficulty, I'm not going to make any," he told her, and he was silent for a moment before he said, "You asked me the other day why I had never married. Will it be in any way a help to you - the same question?"

She looked away from him toward the sea. "Nobody has asked me before," she said quite genuinely. He said at last, "I had a sweetheart —but it's years ago, and then—when my mother died, I stayed to look after the children."

"You would," Mathews said plumply, and then presently, "What became of him?"

"He went away." "With a great effort she rallied to say, "But it's so long ago—I was only eighteen."

"I should liked to have known you when you were eighteen."

Heather laughed. "You wouldn't. I was very—young, even for eighteen. I believed in fairies and that the moon was made of gold and that . . . that . . . everything that's very warm-hearted. If she's happy she'll make a fine woman.

"It won't be too easy to make her happy," he answered too much."

Heather started and flushed when Caesar suddenly he said a boom on here. "I've wanted a great many things at one time and another in my life," he said, "but now there's only one thing that I want, and that is to make you happy. Don't you ever forget that, my dear."

She answered impulsively. "You have made me happier than any one ever has, I think. You've been so good and generous."

I wonder what kind of a poor tramp they're sending me this time?"

Ann's car was filled soon after the train stopped, and she turned to run to the village. But Benjamin Brown, who had just taken on a single passenger, had cut in ahead of Ann's car. She waited until he had finished talking business, and the passenger did not look like a regular farmhand. After she had left her passengers in the village she was slowly homeward. Just as she was turning into her gate, Dan Mills came jogging along, he empty stage standing behind him.

"Wait a minute, Ann," he sang out.

Dan emerged from the stage and came over to talk to her.

"Ann," he said in a low tone, "did you see the queer party that went home with Ben Brown?"

"I thought that he was to well dressed for a farm hand," admitted Ann. "You act queer, Dan—suspicious, aren't you?"

For an answer he thrust a hand into an inside coat pocket and brought out a paper—combined pictures and descriptions of several wanted criminals and issued warnings against them.

"Why!" Ann Richland pointed to Ward's familiar picture. "Benjamin Brown's farmhand?"

"That's what I want to know. You see the bank has a registered bag coming along on the evening train—they're keeping the bank open after hours to receive it and lock it up in the vaults—and I'm wondering about that queer character that went to Ben Brown's."

Ann locked her car in the old barn and walked over to the house. She was feeling very lonesome, and rather upset about what Dan Mills had told her, for Brown's land adjoined Ann's on the south! She stood around in the south porch now and started back again at the sight of the strange "farm-hand."

"The same Ann Richland," he said in a vibrant voice that thrilled Ann.

"Why—" stammered Ann, "I do not remember—have I been made a mistake! And all the time she was wishing that Dan would come along and make a plausible appeal to him for help. Then a sudden shocked expression came to her charming face. "It must be Everett Lewis," she said softly.

"Of course. It is—I know I look years older than you; but there was the war, and it rather battered me up; since then, I've been back at my old job—teaching school—until I was bitten with a longing to come back to Little River and see the old place.

Then I saw an advertisement of old Ben Brown's place open for summer boarders, so I telegraphed that I would be here on the two-thirty train today. Old Ben was there, headed me into his wagon and ran me out to his place. First thing he said—accounting for why my being too dressed up for a hired man—brought forth an explanation, and he was so mad because he had probably raised the real farmhand at the station, that he put me off his place— I'm on my way to the village hotel. I stopped here, Ann, for the sake of old times—you know what I mean?"

Ann blushed beautifully and nodded and offered to drive him to the village hotel. In five minutes the old car had become a wonderful chariot in which people rode once more through the scenes of happy youth and relived an old love story. Leaving Everett at the village hotel, Ann drove happily back home again.

That all happened years ago—and the Little River bank has never yet been robbed; while Ann Richland is has married Everett Lewis! and they live a very happy, almost idyllic life in the old home. Everett teaches the village school and Ann still drives the old car to the station every day for passengers.

DIRECT 100,000 HOUSES UNDER UNION UPON TORONTO

Toronto, March 19. —(CP)— Lieutenant-Governor Herbert Bruce of Ontario today urged early start on erection of 100,000 houses in Toronto when he addressed luncheon gathering. The houses, worth about $3,500 each, would be for rental to low-paid workmen for $15 and $24 monthly under the Lieutenant-Governor's plan.

He estimated the project would cost $10,000,000 annually. With such house costing $3,500 and built on a $300 plot of land, he figured the total cost would be $350,000,000. He proposed the cost be borne by the Dominion Government paying $2,000,000 annually and Ontario Government and Toronto paying the other $8,000,000.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A Queer Passenger

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Miss Ann Richland looked the back door of her small house, and went out to the barn where old Sam, which had become a shelter for the ancient automobile that she called "the car", She had dusted and washed it that very morning. There was a minute or two of hesitation on the part of the car, after Ann had stepped on the "gas" and then an emitting thrill shuddered through the vehicle, and it toiled importantly through the open door and down the incline to the grassy yard, where it rattled and snorted while all the hens craned their necks curiously.

"How giddap!" commanded Ann Richland impolitely, as they reached the road, and soon they were spinning along level roads to the creek and that led straight to the railroad station. Since she had acquired the car Ann had made it her business to meet every important train that stopped at Little River. If the day was a snowy one, the car was buttoned up snugly in black rubber curtains and the passengers were kept warm and dry in return for the 25-cent fare. But this morning was a cool, delicious spring one. The big "stage" that always met the trains was already there when Ann reached the station. Dan Mills was the apostolic carrier of mail bags to and from the train, and he grinned at Ann and touched his cap.

"Row's she goin'?" he waved to know.

"Like a bird!" laughed Ann happily.

"Humph," grunted old Benjamin Brown, who had come to the station to met his new hired man. "Like a crow-bird—that old rattle trap bumps along. Here comes the train.

TARZAN'S QUEST

The sleeping Kavuru warrior did not stir, for Tarzan, with the black girl on his shoulder, moved away through the jungles as silently as a shadow. And now once again he trod th etrail toward the village of Udalo, where he was under sentence of death.

Meanwhile, Tarzan's little band of Waziri was moving also toward the same village, where they expected to have some word for the Big Bwana. They did not know that Udalo and his fierce warriors were now the foes of Tarzan and of all who were his friends.

As they moved warily through this strange country, they heard life excited chattering of a monkey above them, and a moment later a familiar little figure swung dokwward through the trees. "It is Nkima," said Muviro's chief joyfully; "the Big Bwana must be near."

Nkima leaped down to Muviro's shoulder, jabbering and screaming. Then he jumped to the ground and ran ahead, only to return and tug at Muviro's legs. "He wants us to hurry," a warrior observed gravely. "It may be that something has happened to Tarzan!"
